CHOICE NARROWS ON SECOND PLACE

Either Dolliver, Fairbanks, or Sherman Now Thought Most Likely to Get Nomination.

TAFT MEN FOR IOWAN.

Movement Toward Indianan Has Aid from One Side and Little Opposition from Other.

BY RAYMOND.

With only one day to intervene before the convention is called to order, the principal thing about which the leaders are manifesting at sea is the vice presidency. No agreement has been reached in this regard, but there has been an undoubted elimination of one candidate after another, until now it is the guess of some of the most expert men in the convention that the real candidates from whom the second choice will be selected have been narrowed to three men. They are as follows:

J. F. DOLLIVER, senator from Iowa.
C. W. FAIRBANKS, vice president.
J. S. SHERMAN, M. C., of New York.

These men are named in the order in which it is supposed they are likely to receive the nomination.

Strong Taft Men for Dolliver.

Senator Dolliver continues to be the first choice of a majority of the strong Taft men in the convention. The principal thing, and, in fact, the only thing which stands in the way is the opposition of the standpat element in Iowa. They have made vigorous protest, and take the ground that the national party cannot afford to split up the Iowa republicans after they have just concluded a hard senatorial fight which has left many scars. They admit frankly that the selection of Dolliver means the probable choice of Cummins for the United States senate, and that is a thing they are not ready to face at the present time. The Cummins men are yet to be heard from. They may be able to show that they are in a majority in the state and that they have a perfect right to expect a benefit of the proposition of Dolliver if he is needed by the national party. It would be wrong to say that Senator Dolliver is out of the running for the vice presidency up to the present time. On the contrary, it is probably true that he has the best chance of all those who have been named.

Movement Toward Fairbanks.

There was demonstrated yesterday a manifest disposition on the part of the "allies" to unite on Vice President Fairbanks for renomination to the place he now holds. Influential delegates and leaders from Illinois, Indiana, Pennsylvania, New York, and New England were suspiciously in agreement in this direction. The movement does not come from Vice President Fairbanks in any way. On the contrary, he has discouraged it by every means in his power. He has written to Indiana leaders telling them that he is not to be bound for renomination under any circumstances. He is grateful for the united support of his state for the presidency and is perfectly willing to retire to private life at least for a time.

Ever since the national committee finished its work over the contests different representatives of the "allies" have been busily at work endeavoring to secure something out of the wreck of their hopes. In the first place, they want some representation during the campaign. They hope to get that, at least in part, from a shading down of the platform. Secondly, they would like some representation on the ticket. They admit Taft's nomination now is absolutely certain, and, although they propose to make a show in the committee on credentials, as a matter of form, it is known in advance that the permanent roll of the convention will be substantially the same as the temporary one.

Proposition Made Seriously.

In this emergency, a proposition has been seriously made by certain persons in the anti-Taft camp to unite in pressing Vice President Fairbanks for second place on the ticket. His choice would be in harmony with the old traditions. That is to say, it would be conciliatory because it would involve the selection of an opposition candidate for second place with the successful man.

Besides that, Vice President Fairbanks, as is well known, was the original choice of the so-called conservative business element. He possesses the confidence of the people who are more or less antagonistic to Roosevelt. His name on the ticket would have unquestioned political weight. At the same time, if he were nominated, it would enable the "allies" to go back to their people and point out the fact that while the Roosevelt influence had been sufficient to nominate Taft, the conservatives had forced the selection of Fairbanks, so that honors were easy.

Senator Dolliver is due to come to the Chicago convention and make a speech seconding the nomination of Taft. The choice of either Dolliver or Beveridge as temporary chairman would have been satisfactory to the administration. When Senator Burrows was selected it was insisted that Dolliver must take part in the proceedings, and he agreed to second Taft's nomination. If he does make such a speech, and does it with his old time fire, it will be extremely difficult to prevent his nomination for second place, no matter what the party managers may agree upon.

Not Distasteful to Taft Forces.

It was told yesterday by some of the most prominent men in the party, all of whom were in the opposition to Taft, that it would be a good thing to play up Fairbanks as the most likely candidate for the vice presidency. Later on certain persons who are undoubtedly in the confidence of the secretary of war and his managers, intimated that they had heard of the new movement for Fairbanks, and hinted that it was not altogether distasteful to the administration forces. These two things put together lead to the belief that if the standpat element in Iowa is sufficiently strong to prevent the nomination of Dolliver his alternative may be the vice president for a second term.

When he was nominated four years ago Mr. Fairbanks surprised many of the old leaders in the party. He made a wonderful speaking campaign. I do not mean by this that he electrified his audiences, because he did not always do that. It is unquestionable, however, that he covered an immense amount of territory, saw thousands upon thousands of people, made more actual speaking stops than Bryan did four years before, and although it all created an excellent impression.

DASHED TO DEATH IN A DIP THE DIP

Unknown Man Plunges to the Ground from Front Seat of Amusement Park Coaster Device.

SUICIDE OR AN ACCIDENT?

Police Start Inquiry; Fisherman Shocked to Death Stepping on Surface Third Rail.

A man, as yet unidentified, riding in the front seat of a car in "the royal gorge," a coaster device at Riverview park, fell or jumped from the car yesterday afternoon and was killed instantly. His body was found in an unfrequented part of the park automobile drive and removed to the park hospital and later to an undertaking establishment without attracting the attention of the throngs of pleasure seekers in the park. The man's neck had been broken by the fall.

The accident occurred at the end of the first "dip" on the coaster, known as the "camel's back" because of a hump in the structure which bounces the cars. As the car slid over the bump and started up the incline beyond the man, according to witnesses, swayed, clutched the air, and fell. Whether he became frightened, and, desiring the leave the car, arose to step from it, or premeditated suicide, is not known.

The cars on "the royal gorge" are made with deep seats, but are of a type without handles in front of the seats.

Boy Sees Man's Plunge.

William Williams, 1447 Newport avenue, brakeman of the front car, in which the man rode, and John Dorey, 1112 Clybourn avenue, brakeman of the rear car, were busy with their brakes and later said they did not see the man fall, or miss him, and the car completed its run. At the terminal a red headed boy who occupied the other part of the front seat called to Paul Bogart, a ticket seller, "A man's killed," he cried, and took Bogart to the place. He was allowed to go away without leaving his name and the police are looking for him.

Two women, dressed in white, who occupied the rear seat of the car also went away without leaving any address, after describing the accident.

The man was apparently of German extraction. He weighed 210 pounds and was about 45 years of age. A gold watch and $20 were found in his pockets, but no papers, and a search of his clothing failed to give any clew as to his identity. The body was taken to the undertaking rooms of Ernst Schmidt, 302 Belmont avenue. Lieut. McDonald of the North Robey street police station, is conducting an investigation.

Front Seats Now Closed.

Following the accident orders were issued by the park management that no persons should be allowed to ride in the front seats of the cars.

Assistant Deputy Building Commissioner John C. Christensen inspected the structure soon after the accident and gave permission for the continued operation of the cars under this restriction. Acting Building Commissioner Robert Knight said the structure itself was safe and that he considered a further inspection unnecessary.

"It is one of the slowest coaster devices in the parks," he explained. "If considerable alterations were needed it would have been evident earlier in the year."

Steps to Death on Third Rail.

John Kleibe, 38 years old, 940 Wolfram street, was killed instantly at 1 o'clock in the morning when he stepped on the third rail of the eastbound track of the Ravenswood branch of the Northwestern elevated railroad, where the cars run on the surface between Maplewood avenue and Rockwell street.

He just had started on a fishing trip with two companions, Frank Sabeanske, 1063 Marianna street, and Bartholin Dranky, 1249 North Ashland avenue. They tried to pull him from the rail, but, suffering a shock, became frightened and ran away.

A train passing a few minutes later threw the body to one side, where it lay until 5 o'clock in the morning, when J. H. Murphy, 48 North Campbell avenue, a switchman, and Carl Wolquist, 889 South Park avenue, a car coupler, found it and notified the police. The body was removed to the undertaking rooms of Fred Burkhard, 1560 Lincoln avenue.

Late in the afternoon Sabeanske and Dranky identified the body as that of their friend.

Dranky told the police that Kleibe, Sabeanske, and he were walking along beside the rails and were about half way between Rockwell and Maplewood avenue, when Kliebe stumbled and fell on the third rail.

Little Car Victim Succumbs.

Josephine Julio, 11 years old, 11 Alexander street, died at the People's hospital at 11:30 o'clock Saturday night of injuries suffered when she was run over by a north bound Wentworth avenue car near her home early Saturday evening. The little girl was playing with other children at Wentworth avenue and Alexander street, when she ran in front of a moving car.

CHEMISTS BLOWN UP BY VAPOR.

Woman Physician Probably Fatally Hurt in St. Louis by Explosion in Laboratory.

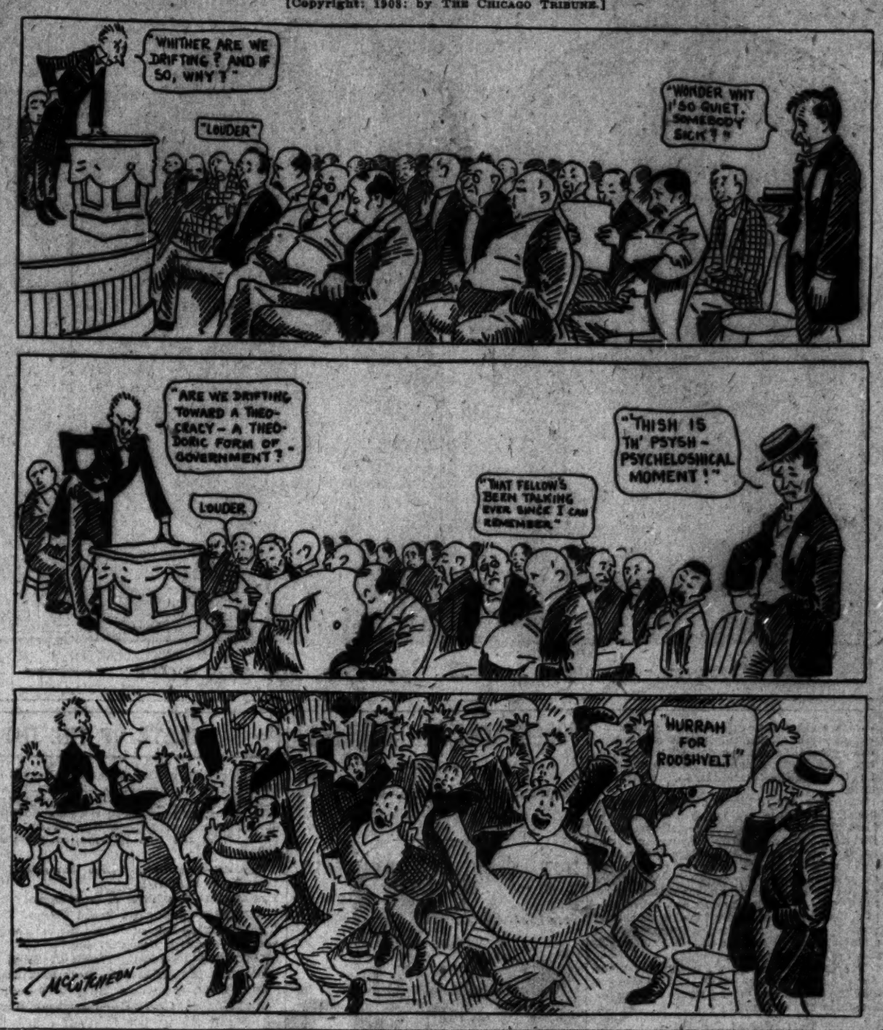

St. Louis, Mo., June 14.—[Special.]—While Albert A. Picker, a St. Louis manufacturer, and Miss Myra A. Mathews, a practicing physician of St. Louis, were experimenting with chemicals in a laboratory at 1006 St. Ange avenue, this afternoon, vapor from the mixture filled the room and exploded, injuring Dr. Mathews, probably fatally, burning Picker, and blowing the front out of the building, which caught fire.

Picker, who had seen that the explosion was inevitable, was hurrying toward the door with the woman when it occurred. After the shock, which rendered the woman unconscious, he carried her to the pavement, where bystanders extinguished her burning dress.

Picker ran down the street, his clothes blazing, screaming, "Save me, save me." He was stopped in front of a physician's office and the flames beaten out.

PLAYS AMUSEMENT PARKS

Pastor Boynton Declares They Are Sum of All Villainy.

WANTS CHILDREN KEPT OUT.

Says No Man Should Take His Wife or Daughter to Such Places.

A sensational attack on Chicago's amusement parks was made last evening by the Rev. Melbourne P. Boynton of Lexington Avenue Baptist church in a sermon on "The Wily Spiders."

"In recent years," he said, "there has been a notable raising of the moral standards in all parts of our land except in the larger cities. In the great town the evil influences of society have camped and taken control of things and are having pretty much their own way. The imps of h—l have flocked to our own city and are on friendly terms with the government. Every vile enterprise seems welcome in this godless town.

"The infamous red light district is allowed to flourish and grow fat on its ill gotten gains. Its borders are slowly but surely widening until the south side is rapidly losing its name for security and desirability as a residence district.

Parks "Sum of All Villainy."

"The south side amusement parks are full of filth. I know, for I have made a personal investigation. Some of these places are viler than what is found in the levee. The Turkish dances would make Sodom blush, the candy and flower wheels are teaching hundreds of youth the first lessons in gambling, the dance floors are luring scores of young girls to ruin and death, the great music pavilions are enticing numberless young men and women to dare the first glasses of strong drink, and the penny slot machines are filling minds and hearts with the muck and slime of perdition. The modern amusement park is the sum of all villainy.

"Unfit for Women and Children."

"Any man who takes wife, daughter, or lady friend to one of these places is lacking in due respect for womanhood.

"Any woman who will go to one of these open parks and drink liquor shows that she is no longer prizing the high and holy influences that women may exercise over mankind and has but herself to blame if men lessen their esteem for her.

"Any parent who will take his children into these places of so-called amusement is sowing seeds in their young minds that will bear a bitter fruitage in years to come.

"Any young man or young woman who will dance in one of the ballrooms of these parks is putting a slight value on virtue and purity. I have not yet seen an amusement park that is fit for the youth of our city.

"Parents and friends of pure childhood, I call aloud to you to wake to the awful perils that abound on every hand in this mighty city. I most urgently admonish you to take more care of the youth and guard them from the filthy hand of the man or woman who cares only for money and does not mind how much blood may stain it. It may be the blood of those dearest and nearest to you."

FRANK WORK DANGEROUSLY ILL

Excessive Smoking Induces Cancer, Which Causes New Yorker's Friends to Worry.

New York, June 14.—[Special.]—Frank Work is reported desperately ill at his home in East Twenty-sixth street. It is announced by a relative of the family that he is the victim of cancer, caused by excessive smoking.

EDNA GOODRICH IS EMPHATIC IN ANNOUNCING ENGAGEMENT

Actress Says She Will Marry Harry McMillan, but Will Continue Her Career on Stage.

New York, June 14.—[Special.]—Edna Goodrich, the actress, tonight declared emphatically she was to marry J. Harry McMillan. She did not announce the date and said she would continue her stage career. Miss Goodrich, who had just arrived from Chicago, announced her matrimonial intentions as follows:

"Once for all, and in spite of all theories to the contrary, you can say I am to be married to J. Harry McMillan. No definite time has been set, because Mr. McMillan's mother is ill and he is to remain with her at the family home in Berkeley, Cal., while I go to Europe to buy a new play."

"Certainly I will remain on the stage after my marriage. Mr. McMillan does not object to that in the least. No, I'm not going to star. I have no right to do so yet. Neither am I going to rejoin Mr. Goodwin's company. My contract with him has expired and I'm free to follow my own career."

Miss Goodrich denied her mother also was to become a bride with George Weedon, Nat Goodwin's business manager, as the lucky man.

BICYCLE RUNS INTO AUTO; BOY'S SKULL IS FRACTURED.

Lambert Karst Injured by Collision with Car of L. Wolff Jr. at Ashland Avenue and Diversey Boulevard.

While riding a bicycle in Ashland avenue yesterday afternoon 16 year old Lambert Karst, 608 Cornelia street, collided with an automobile driven by L. Wolff Jr., 38 Hazel avenue, which was going east in Diversey boulevard. Karst was thrown to the ground and it is believed that his skull was fractured.

Wolff carried the unconscious boy to the automobile and drove to a drug store at Diversey boulevard and Lincoln avenue. Wolff then telephoned to the police, and the police ambulance removed Karst to the Alexian Brothers' hospital.

Wolff said Karst was riding at a high rate of speed and at first attempted to cross in front of the automobile, then changed his course and in trying to go behind the machine the bicycle struck a mud guard and rear wheel of the auto.

HELEN MALONEY ON VOYAGE TO LEGALIZE HER MARRIAGE?

Wealthy Philadelphia Girl and Mother Said to Be on Their Way to Meet Englishman.

New York, June 14.—[Special.]—Mrs. Martin Maloney, wife of the papal marquis and wealthy Standard Oil man of Philadelphia, is here with her daughter, Helen, whose matrimonial ventures have interested London, New York, and Rome, and whose first marriage to A. H. Osborne recently was annulled by the courts.

The greatest secrecy was observed in their trip to this city and they are not registered at the hotel. The mother and daughter are to sail soon for England, where it is expected a marriage will legally unite her to Samuel Clarkson, the Englishman with whom she eloped last fall.

Miss Maloney has been seen a number of times in the corridors of the hotel smartly dressed and rosy cheeked. She wears on the little finger of her left hand a ring with two large diamonds.

PATHOS IN BLIND TOM'S DEATH

Famous Negro Musician Succumbs to Paralysis.

PLAYS "OLD SONGS NO MO'."

Widely Known Pianist Was Prodigy of Days of Slavery.

New York, June 14.—[Special.]—Blind Tom is dead, and the ending of this childish black pianist, at whose wonderful playing thousands have marveled ever since our grandmothers were girls, was full of pathos.

Three weeks ago as he sat before a piano in the home of Mrs. Eliza E. Lerche, the widow of his old master, in Hoboken, singing the old melodies with which he had thrilled great audiences before the civil war, he suddenly stopped and fell face downward on the floor.

Mrs. Lerche, who has cared for him over twenty years, ran into the room, and, helping him up, found that his whole upper right side was paralyzed. But Tom couldn't understand that he was different and soon went back to his piano. When he found that his right hand could not strike the keys he said, with his voice quavering:

"Tom's fingers won't play."

Wept Over Inability to Play.

Again and again he tried. Finally when he realized it was useless his big blind eyes filled with tears and he wept like a child. Each day he returned to the piano and with his left hand started some favorite piece. Quickly, however, and then with tear moistened cheeks he would rise and pace the floor until late into the night. His old mistress sought to comfort him, but he would only sob out:

"Tom's fingers won't play no mo'."

Last Saturday night Tom went to his piano again and began softly his old lullaby, "Down on the Suwanee River," but his voice broke. Sobbing he rose and said:

"I'm done; all gone, missus."

The next she heard was a faint cry and a thump near the bathroom door. He had dropped dead from a second shock.

Prodigy of Slave Days.

"Blind Tom's" real name was Thomas Wiggins. He was a prodigy with an uncouth figure of almost gigantic proportions and an intellect approaching that of an imbecile to which nature had joined a divine gift of music. Back in the slave days when he was but 2 years old and clothed only in an old shirt he sat beneath the window of his first master, Gen. James Bethune, a Georgia planter, and heard the sound of a piano. Thrilled, he crawled trembling up the steps into the parlor where the music was. Gen. Bethune saw how apt the child was and said:

"The child is music crazy. Poor little thing."

Then he placed him before the piano and let him strike the keys. To his astonishment the child after hitting the keys clumsily for a few minutes began to play slowly with one finger the air he had just heard. Gen. Bethune immediately began to educate him, and from that day until the time of his first stroke he had played several hours every day.

STREET CAR DEMOLISHES BUGGY

Man Dashed Against Trolley Pole and Three Women Companions Are Thrown to Street.

A buggy with four occupants, three of them women, that was being driven in Drexel boulevard yesterday afternoon was struck at Forty-seventh street by a west bound street car. All of the occupants were thrown to the street and the vehicle demolished.

Philip Cohn, 4246 Vincennes avenue, who was driving, was thrown against a trolley pole and seriously injured. He was taken to the Chicago hospital. His wife and the two other women escaped injury.

BIG PLANKS DONE; SHARP OPPOSITION

Anti-Injunction and Tariff Paragraphs as Drawn Rouse Chiefs of Congress.

THEY SEND FOR "UNCLE JOE"

Conference Held and Hostility Develops, Especially to the First Mentioned Plan.

TEXT OF THE DECLARATIONS.

SUNDAY'S CONVENTION NEWS

TEXT of the planks on anti-injunction and tariff secured by "The Tribune" and presented to its readers.

SPEAKER CANNON arrives unexpectedly from Danville, goes into conference with Dalzell and Payne; said to oppose tariff revision, postal savings, and anti-injunction planks. Sharp fight coming on.

DEVELOPMENT of strength among conservatives favoring Fairbanks for vice president. Thus fight for second place narrows down to Dolliver, Fairbanks, and Representative Sherman of New York. Senator Borah of Idaho says Dolliver probably will not accept vice presidential nomination, and begins to talk Fairbanks.

CRITICISM of Senator Burrows' forthcoming "keynote" speech, which is said to lack a strong enough indorsement of Roosevelt administration.

ONE DELEGATE from Pennsylvania and one or two from West Virginia try to revive Roosevelt third term boom.

NEGRO opponents of Taft and administration threaten violence to their black opponents.

STATE delegations prepare to go into caucuses today for selection of committee members.

BY JOHN CALLAN O'LAUGHLIN.

The following are the two most important planks of the administration platform which is to be presented by Wade Ellis, attorney general for Ohio, to the resolutions committee for submission to the republican national convention:

ANTI-INJUNCTION.

"We declare for such an amendment of the statute of procedure in the federal courts with respect to the use of the writ of injunction as will, on the one hand, prevent the summary issue of such orders without proper consideration, and, on the other, will preserve undiminished the power of the courts to enforce their process to the end that justice may be done at all times, and to all parties."

TARIFF.

"The republican party declares unequivocally for a revision of the tariff by a special session of congress immediately following the work assigned to the appropriate commends the steps already taken to this end in the work assigned to the appropriate committees of the two houses which are now investigating the operations and effect of existing schedules.

"In all tariff legislation the true principle of protection is best maintained by the imposition of such duties as will equal the difference between the cost of production at home and abroad, together with a reasonable profit to American industry, and the benefits that follow are best secured by the establishment of maximum and minimum rates to be administered by the president under limitations fixed in the law, the maximum to be available to meet discriminations by foreign countries against American goods entering their markets, and the minimum to represent the normal measure of protection at home; the aim and purpose of the republican policy being not only to preserve, without excessive duties, that security against foreign competition to which American manufacturers, farmers, and producers are entitled, but also to maintain the high standard of living of the wage earners of this country, who are the most direct beneficiaries of the protective system.

"Between the United States and the Philippines we believe in a free interchange of products with such limitations as to sugar and tobacco as will avoid injury to domestic interests."

"Uncle Joe" Cannon for Fight.

While this is the first publication of the two most important planks in the platform, they have been known to the leaders in congress for several days. These leaders became so excited over the plank in regard to anti-injunction that they telephoned to Speaker Joseph G. Cannon at Danville yesterday afternoon to come to Chicago, and last night there was a conference at the Union League club between Mr. Cannon, Representatives Payne and Sherman of New York, Representative Dalzell of Pennsylvania, and several prominent Illinois politicians and friends of the speaker.

Speaker Cannon became indignant over the language of the plank and declared for a campaign of opposition to its adoption by the resolutions committee. He allowed to be printed a statement declaring practically that he would not vote for any law "which would make fair for one and foul for another."

The speaker's attitude insures a lively fight in the committee. He is said also to be opposed—though not so strongly—to the tariff revision plank and to the postal savings bank plank.

Declaration on Trusts.

The administration plank respecting trusts points out that it was the republican party which enacted the Sherman anti-trust law, that the democratic party failed to enforce it when it was in power, and that it remained for the republican party to take action to make this an effective passage. The platform pledges the republican party to enact such legislation as will permit agreements of an industrial and labor character.

The plank in regard to railroads commends the various interstate commerce acts, including the Hepburn rate law, which have been enacted by republican congresses, declares that rebates and discriminations have ceased as the result of the republican administration, calls attention to the appropriation of $350,000 which was made by the last congress for the purpose of insuring inspection of railroad accounts, advocates publicity both regarding railroads and trusts, favors traffic agreements, confirms the principle of competition, opposes common control of competing lines, and finally pledges the republican party to the enactment of legislation empowering the interstate commerce commission to regulate the future issues of securities.

Conference in the Afternoon.

The most important planks, of course, are those relative to the modification of procedure of injunction and the tariff. There was a conference in the afternoon between Wade Ellis, Frank A. Kellogg of Minnesota, who will be the representative of his state upon the resolutions committee, and other prospective members of this committee, in regard to the entire platform, but particularly with respect to the anti-injunction, tariff, railroads, and trust planks.

Speaker Responds to Call.

Then, at night, Speaker Cannon arrived in response to urgent calls from the conservative forces here. It is said that the speaker and other leaders would prefer that nothing be said on anti-injunction, and if any reference should be considered absolutely necessary they desire it shall be as mild as possible.

The following may be accepted as the speaker's views on the subject. His friends pointed to it as his expression two years ago and intimated that his views had not changed. Mr. Cannon said at that time:

"Speaking for myself, I had rather quit public life now, and at the age of 70 quit forever, true to the civilization we have developed, true to the distribution of powers to the legislative, the executive and the judiciary, which are a check upon each other, than to retain public office at such a sacrifice to my own self respect and such terrible cost to the country; while God gives me life to live I will not by my act take from any citizen, be he rich or poor, union man or non-union man, farmer or mechanic, shoemaker or paper maker, doctor or lawyer, any right which is given to another; I will not vote for any law which will make fair for one and foul for another."

Tariff League Opposed.

There is not likely to be any grave dissatisfaction expressed by any of the candidates to the tariff plank, though the speaker is reported to be somewhat out of tune with it. Open opposition has come, however, from the American Protective Tariff league.

Charles A. Moore, president of the league, issued a statement last night against reduction of the tariff on the ground that it would mean less industrial activity, greater importations from abroad, loss of employment for labor, and lower wages. He pointed out also that it would place American labor on the same basis with foreigners. If there must be revision, what the American Protective Tariff league would want is revision upward, that is to say, the Dingley law should be the minimum scale. Mr. Moore asserted that business would not justify a reduction in the schedule, that such action would cause manufacturers to become more timid, and that this would be bad for the country.

Finally, Mr. Moore asserted that the condition of the treasury was such that it could not stand a reduction of the tariff. A deficit has occurred during the present fiscal year, and a deficit also is promised for the next fiscal year.

Bankers Against Postal Savings.

The bankers of the country are in Chicago in force opposing vigorously the postal savings bank feature of the administration platform. It is their intention to make a strong argument before the resolutions committee and to insist that all reference to this matter be omitted from the platform as reported to the convention.

"UNCLE JOE" BRINGS HIS AX.

Reported That He Objects, Not Only to Labor Injunction Plank, but to Tariff Plan Also.

Uncle Joe Cannon's arrival last night in the city stirred up the prospects of a fight. He came from Danville with his fighting blood up and he is bent on knocking a number of the proposed innovations out of the tentative republican platform.

It is reported that there will be no declaration in favor of tariff revision, no recommendation of postal savings banks, and no anti-injunction plank in the national platform of the party if Uncle Joe has his way about it. He has mapped out a compaign of conferences lasting all of today and most of the night, if necessary, in an attempt to head off the introduction of these proposed declarations of principle. He is so wrought up over the platform situation that he has almost forgotten he is a candidate for the presidential nomination. At any rate he has told his campaign managers please to look after his candidacy till further notice while he devotes his spare time to the platform.

In Conference with Congressmen.

Mr. Cannon's meeting with Messrs. Payne, Dalzell, Overstreet, Kerens, and others soon brought out the fact that the speaker's coming was in connection with the platform and that a brisk contest on some of the planks was in prospect. When Mr. Cannon was here the other day he learned in a general way the main features of the existing draft, and the arrival of some of the congressional leaders yesterday developed the fact that the so-called anti-injunction plank contained certain features which were regarded as quite opposed to the declaration made at a recent caucus of the republican members of the house upon that subject.

Early yesterday Mr. Cannon was called on the long distance telephone and the platform situation was discussed with him. The speaker is not an adept in talking over a long distance telephone and he finally decided to take a train to Chicago and go over the platform field in person.

In particular he desired to have a talk with Senator Hopkins of Illinois, who is slated to be chairman of the resolutions committee, but whose position as such is dependent upon the action of the Illinois caucus tomorrow in naming him as the Illinois member of the committee on resolutions.

Hopkins to Return Today.

On Speaker Cannon's arrival he found that Senator Hopkins had left for his home at Aurora, so that the conference with the prospective head of the resolutions committee was necessarily postponed until this morning. The senator is expected to return at that time and the deferred talk will then take place.

Meantime Mr. Cannon and his congressional lieutenants are going over the platform plank concerning the restriction of injunctions. It is not only the speaker's personal view that an anti-injunction plank, such as is proposed, would be unwise, but as speaker of the house, he feels that the formal action of the republican membership, taken only a few weeks ago, and expressive of opposition to such labor legislation, should receive serious consideration before such a plank is finally introduced into the pronouncement of the party to the country.

The speaker also objects to the movement for a postal savings plank, and he doesn't like the idea of any strong words looking for a reform of the tariff.

Taft Men at the Helm.

It is, of course, assured that the resolutions committee will be essentially a Taft committee, and by more than what is known as "a good working majority." In fact, it will be large enough for the Taft people to put through, unabridged and unamended, any platform they might decide upon, and the minority would be helpless.

But no plan of this kind is contemplated. The Taft managers are anxious for a platform with which they can win, and after insisting on certain things which they consider necessary to success—most of which there is no real difference of opinion about—are desirous of getting the best thought of the party in the framing of what is considered the most important platform the party has put out since the one on which Lincoln was nominated in 1860. The one of 1896 had only one leading feature—the gold plank—but the one of 1908 will have a number.

Postal Savings Bank Plank.

The postal savings bank plank received a good deal of attention in the afternoon at a number of the conferences which were held in Mr. Ellis' room at the Annex. Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor was also a visitor to talk over the labor planks. It is these labor planks, particularly the anti-injunction one, which are making the most trouble.

Mr. Gompers' long talk with Mr. Ellis was an insistence on what he calls "a declaration of principles" in the platform on labor matters. This is taken to mean, besides the anti-injunction plan, a declaration in favor of amending the Sherman anti-trust law so that labor unions will not be amenable to its pains and penalties. Mr. Gompers believes that corporations should be punished for all violations of the law, but when a labor union breaks any of its provisions that is different. His argument is, the understood intent of the law at the time of its passage was to curb corporations, and the inclusion of labor unions was an afterthought, suggested by cunning corporation lawyers.

They Demand Judiciary Plank.

Information came from New York during the day to the effect that large manufacturers are acting with vigor in order to counteract the effect of Mr. Gompers' work for the labor plank. The manufacturers are among the most earnest supporters of the judiciary plank, which Nicholas Murray Butler, Joseph H. Choate, Cornelius N. Bliss, and other representative republicans have asked party leaders to incorporate in the platform. These large manufacturers are at the same time naturally large employers and represent large and far reaching interests.

On Saturday, many leading manufacturers assembled at the Machinery club in New York to further the movement by subscribing unequivocally to the adoption of this plank at Chicago. They met at the call of Francis H. Stillman, treasurer of the National Association of Manufacturers, who had been assisted in arranging the meeting by other members of the association.

The meeting indorsed the memorial drafted by Choate, which had been sent on to this city and a plank relating to independence of the courts was incorporated in the set of resolutions which the manufacturers drew up and adopted in opposition to what the manufacturers referred to as "the proposed plan to insert in the republican platform a plank designed to restrict the courts."

Speakers at the meeting and the manufacturers had come to a realization that they are more concerned in having an unrestricted judiciary than perhaps any other class in the community.

POWERS CHEERED ON WAY HOME

Pardoned Kentuckian Met by Largest Crowd That Ever Welcomed Any One to Barbourville.

Barbourville, Ky., June 14.—The news that Caleb Powers had been pardoned by Gov. Willson spread rapidly through Kentucky and large crowds collected at Pennington Gap, Meddlesboro, Pineville, and other points through which the train passed today. Mr. Powers reached out of the window of his car and shook hands with thousands of friends.

At Artemus, where Mr. Powers used to live, the train was met by a committee of 150 citizens. The crowd here was the largest that ever welcomed any person to Barbourville.

Friends hurried Mr. Powers to a carriage, where his mother and sister were waiting to receive him and the procession started for the courthouse headed by a brass band. Aged women who knew him as a boy, old men who knew him as Caleb, joined in the cheering all the way.

In the courthouse Mr. Powers delivered an address lauding his friends for their loyalty and explaining the causes that led to his arrest, conviction and pardon.

HENRY TAFT — FRANK HITCHCOCK — C.P TAFT

FORGET CHICAGO AT FIRST

Organizers of State Delegation Almost Overlook City.

BUT BUSSE MAY GET CHAIR.

Senator Cullom, Who Now Holds It, Likes Peace and Quiet.

When the few Illinois delegates who so far have interested themselves in the organization of the state delegation took a second thought yesterday they woke up to the fact they had entirely forgotten the existence of such a place as Chicago in their calculations. It might as well have been in Wisconsin or Indiana, for all their plans showed.

A really nice slate had been arranged. It took in all the state's leading republicans except such as happened to live inside of Cook county. There are only four really important places in a state organization, and this slate had apportioned them after this fashion:

Member of the national committee—Congressman Frank O. Lowden of Ogle county.

Chairman of the delegation—Senator Shelby M. Cullom of Sangamon county.

Member of the resolutions committee—Senator A. J. Hopkins of Kane county.

Member of credentials committee—Frank L. Smith of Livingston county.

With both senators, a congressman, and a man friendly to the "federal crowd" making up the "big four," it is hardly necessary to say the aforesaid "crowd" was suspected strongly of being responsible for the aforesaid slate.

But when the fifty-four Illinois delegates meet today to organize the delegation twenty-two of them will be residents of Chicago. It is only natural they should ask for some other recognition for the metropolis of the state than a membership of the committee to notify the candidate for vice president of his nomination or a place on the committee on permanent organization. Such positions are highly complimentary and carry with them the privilege of spending some money for car fare and hotel bills, but that is about all there is to them.

Busse for Cullom's Place.

The proposition made last evening was that Senator Cullom should retire as chairman of the delegation so as to make room for somebody from Chicago. If it is done Mayor Fred A. Busse will be named in his place. The senator would be named as one of the honorary vice presidents of the convention.

The position of chairman of a state delegation, especially a large one like Illinois, carries with it considerable active physical work, and Senator Cullom is not as active as he once was. Besides he has held the place so often it is no novelty to him, and he really is not seeking it. Speaking of the situation, he said:

"The whole matter will be settled at the meeting of the state delegation. Personally I am absolutely indifferent what the delegation does. I did not want to attend the convention at all. I like peace and quiet these days, and a national convention always means a lot of physical discomfort and considerable physical work. It was my original intention to stay away entirely.

"But when I mentioned this to Speaker Cannon he insisted that I attend. He asked it as a favor to himself. There are many reasons why I like to oblige the speaker, and so I am here. That is all there is to it."

Opposition Under Microscope.

Of the rest of the slate the selections of Senator Hopkins for member of the committee on resolutions and Congressman Lowden for member of the national committee will stick all right. There is no opposition to either which is visible to the naked eye.

The membership on the committee on credentials is not so certain. Ex-Congressman Walter Reeves of La Salle county has been talked of, although he says he is for Col. Smith.

Perry C. Ellis, editor of the Quincy Daily Whig and delegate to the convention from the Fifteenth Illinois district, arrived during the day and was soon in conference with members of the Illinois delegation.

He is for Lowden for national committeeman and Hopkins for member of the committee on resolutions and in favor of placing the southern states in future conventions on the basis of actual representation.

Deneen Men in Evidence.

Deneen headquarters at the Grand Pacific were crowded in the afternoon by Deneen supporters for his second term as governor of the state of Illinois. Roy O. West, Mr. Deneen's manager, received affably Chicago politicians and Illinois men, endeavoring to impress them with the Deneen idea of another term.

"We are here," said Mr. West, "in the interest of Gov. Deneen, to support the boom for a second term. We are stronger than the public realize, and intend to carry our work for the purpose of support among the delegates to the national convention.

"Yates, in his attempt to gain the nomination, has employed methods that have rather hurt his interests than bettered them. He has sought some democratic support and that cannot be beneficial to his own party."

Gov. Deneen and his party, including his staff, probably will reach Chicago from Springfield today.

SLATE OF THE IMPORTANT COMMITTEES.

In nearly all of the state delegations it is proposed to hold caucuses this morning or this afternoon, and while there may be several important changes in the personnel of the important committees the slates last night, from the best information, were as follows:

ALASKA—Resolutions, George Shea; credentials, L. P. Shakleford.

INDIANA LEADERS ARE ALERT

Gov. Hanly Will Present Fairbanks' Name to Convention.

NEW TO BE RE-ELECTED.

Change Is Made in State's Slate After a Lively Confab

Indiana is represented at the convention by a large number of its most prominent republicans. Among the Hoosier celebrities here are Senators Beveridge and Hemenway, Gov. Hanly, ex-Gov. Durbin, James E. Watson, the republican nominee for governor, and Charles A. Bookwalter, mayor of Indianapolis.

Gov. Hanly brought with him the speech which he will deliver in presenting the name of Charles W. Fairbanks to the convention for the nomination for president. About twenty minutes will be required in its delivery. The governor will take a rap at the alleged boss tactics of the republican national committee in the contest cases and his deliverance is likely to create some comment.

The Indiana delegation will meet this morning at 10 o'clock in the Fairbanks headquarters at the Auditorium Annex. Harry S. New, the present national committeeman for the state of Indiana, will be reelected to that position. There has been a good deal of talk of a possible fight on him by some of his home folk, but Senator Hemenway, Joseph B. Kealing, and other influential members of the delegation say such reports are not based on facts.

Indiana Slate Made Up.

The Indiana convention slate, as far as made up, is as follows:

Chairman of the delegation—Senator Beveridge.
Member of the committee on resolutions—Senator Hemenway.
Member of the committee on credentials—Mayor Bookwalter of Indianapolis.
Member of the committee to notify the presidential candidate—George Ade of Brook.

A change was made yesterday in the Indiana slate and thereby hangs an interesting tale. When Frank H. Hitchcock was sitting as a member of the national committee in the contest cases the Hoosier leaders raised a storm of protest.

Some discerning Hoosier, in looking over the slate, raised a point of order. He suggested that if it was bad for Manager Hitchcock to serve on the national committee it was equally bad for Manager Kealing to serve on the credentials committee. The point of order was well taken. Mr. Kealing's name was withdrawn and in its place was substituted the name of Mayor Bookwalter.

Divided as to Fairbanks.

The members of the Indiana delegation are at odds with reference to their favorite son, Mr. Fairbanks. Some of the members—perhaps a preponderance of the delegation—recognize that the "pig is up" as far as the presidential nomination is concerned. They hope that Indiana's name will not be left out of the pot entirely, and therefore they are not only willing, but anxious to start a boom for Mr. Fairbanks for vice president.

MICHIGAN MEN BUSY AS BEES

Two Delegates Withdraw and Caucus Skirmish Begins.

CHASE S. OSBORN A LEADER.

Sault Ste. Marie Man Probably Will Be Chairman of Body

Owing to the enforced absence of Commodore Frank Gilchrist of Alpena, one of Michigan's delegates at large to the republican national convention, his place will be taken by Charles B. Warren of Detroit, the first alternate at large. Commodore Gilchrist was here last night, but was called to Cleveland on account of the serious illness of his wife.

August Maxhausen of Detroit, one of the First district delegates, will not be here for a similar reason, and his place will be filled by Alternate Oscar Marx.

Busy as Bees; All Want Seats.

Michigan's headquarters in the Auditorium Annex presented a lively scene during the day. Comparatively few delegates arrived, but a big crowd of visitors was on hand and in consequence there is a keen demand for tickets, though few are to be had.

A fine photo of Secretary Taft occupies the most prominent position of the headquarters, which are on the mezzanine floor. Also hung on the walls are photos of the late Senators McMillan and Alger, and Senators Burrows and Smith.

Among the early comers were Congressman Gardner, Arthur Hill of Saginaw, Dallas Boudeman of Kalamazoo, Judge Sharpe of the Soo, Capt. Nate Simpson of Hart, W. W. Wademeyer of Ann Arbor, George P. Codd, Oscar Marx, E. D. Stair, T. J. Naum, Michael Burke, and Malcolm McLeod of Detroit, Dudley Waters of Grand Rapids, U. S. Marshal Frank Waite of Sturgis, and numerous others.

Skirmishing Precedes Caucus.

The delegation will caucus this afternoon and in anticipation some quiet yet spirited skirmishing was in evidence during the day. It is practically settled that Chase S. Osborn of Sault Ste. Marie will be chairman of the delegation. Congressman Joseph Fordney of Saginaw and Dallas Boudeman of Kalamazoo are anxious to represent the state on the resolutions committee.

Fordney stands on his prerogative as the guardian in chief of the beet sugar interests and his friends say that he wants to work for a plank that will at least proclaim protection for that American industry. For the committees on credentials, permanent organization, and order of business there are no candidates.

Square Deal for Detroit.

There is a strong desire to give Detroit the national committeeman and the honor probably will go to P. H. McMillan.

It is recognized that Detroit as the metropolis of the state should be more closely represented in the affairs of the party than it is.

Both senators and the chairman of the state central committee are from the western part of the state.

PLAN LONG FIGHT ON CREDENTIALS.

"Allies" to Present 150 Contests Before the Convention Committee.

MAY TAKE TILL FRIDAY.

First Meeting 4 O'Clock Tomorrow; All Night Session Not Favored.

The "allies" will make their last stand against the Taft forces in the committee on credentials. It came out yesterday that the opposition candidates were preparing to fight to the finish for the seating of their delegates in the permanent organization of the convention.

At a conference of the campaign managers for Foraker, Hughes, and Fairbanks yesterday it was decided to carry the most meritorious of their contests before the credentials committee. The question of appealing from the committee to the floor of the convention in the event of an adverse decision was not discussed, although it is understood the Foraker following, representing mainly the southern black and tans, is urging such a radical course.

Will Present 150 Contests.

Of the original 229 contests it is planned to present about 150 to the committee on credentials. By far the greater number of these were filed originally in the interest of Foraker. The probable contests are divided as follows:

	Foraker.	Hughes.	Fairbanks.
Alabama	22	..	..
Arkansas	..	3	..
Florida	4	4	..
Georgia	16	..	..
Kentucky	..	..	8
Mississippi	16	..	..
Missouri	..	6	..
North Carolina	20	..	..
Ohio	2	..	..
Texas	36	..	22
Virginia	18	..	..
Totals	134	12	30

The conference was attended by Senator Hemenway and Joseph B. Kealing, representing Fairbanks; A. B. Humphrey, representing Hughes; and Senator Dick, representing Foraker. It was decided that each manager should take charge of the contests affecting his candidate, though each will have the assistance of Maj. Bryan, the legal counsel retained by the "allies."

Skirmish for Chairman.

With the prospects of a determined fight in the credentials committee looming large there are indications that there will be at least a spirited skirmish for the naming of the chairman of the body. The "allies" are pulling every wire to prevent the selection of a pronounced Taft man. The opposition favors either C. A. Bookwalter of Indiana or Walter Reeves of Illinois for the place, but as the Taft men will be in control they have little chance of seeing their hopes realized. The most they possibly can achieve is to secure the selection of a chairman who will represent a compromise between the rival forces.

Most of the Taft leaders want Harry M. Daughorty of Columbus, O., put at the head of the credentials committee. They realize, however, that this might raise the objection that Ohio is being given too many of the honors and that, with the nomination of Taft assured, the chairmanship of this important committee ought to go to another state. Then, too, it might be objected that it is bad taste to confer the important powers of the position upon a Taft man from Taft's own state.

For these reasons it is possible that the Taft leaders will unite on Senator C. W. Fulton of Oregon for chairman. In fact, after a conference of Campaign Manager Hitchcock, Charles P. Taft, and several other Taft leaders in the afternoon, it was given out that Senator Fulton probably would be the choice. At the same time the friends of Mr. Daughorty said they were going ahead on the assumption that he was slated for the position.

Committee to Meet Tomorrow.

The credentials committee will organize at once after the adjournment of the convention tomorrow afternoon, a meeting for 4 o'clock already having been announced. After the election of the chairman and secretary the committee will adopt rules of procedure and then will begin hearing the contests.

The contests will be filed directly with the committee, which will determine the time limit of filing, the order in which the hearings will be held, and the amount of time to be given each side. The debates probably will not be so long as those permitted before the national committee last week. It is figured that an hour will be the utmost time allowed each side for the presentation of its arguments in any one case. The method of consolidating contests so as to save time, found successful by the national committee, probably will be followed by the credentials committee.

Frown on All-Night Sessions.

All-night sessions will be frowned on by the members of the committee. The leaders are not averse to working till midnight, but they object to prolonging the sessions beyond that time. An attempt will be made, however, to grind through the contests in time to report to the convention Thursday forenoon. To do this it is planned to work till midnight Tuesday, all day Wednesday, and most of that night if there is any prospect of finishing.

If not the report will be postponed till Friday and the Wednesday and Thursday sessions of the committee shortened accordingly. This program is popular with the hotel managers, who would like to have the convention prolonged indefinitely.

"This fight is going to be fought to the last ditch," said A. B. Humphrey, one of the Hughes campaign managers, in the afternoon after conferring with his colleagues. "There is going to be no laying down, no compromise. Every contest of merit will be presented to the committee on credentials and a demand made that the rightfully constituted delegates be seated. The contests on behalf of each candidate will be presented to the committee by his representatives on the ground.

"I am confident that the committee will seat our delegates in many instances. There is no reason to assume that the committee is going to be controlled by the Taft followers. The steam roller will do no rolling there. I believe that the convention will have a committee on credentials that will give us a square deal."

The committee will pursue its deliberations in the rooms of the national committee in the Coliseum annex.

Warner to Notify Nominee.

United States Senator William Warner of Missouri will be chosen chairman of the convention's committee appointed to notify the presidential nominee of his selection. Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts will not be a member of this committee on account of the fact that he will leave for a European trip immediately after the close of the convention and will not return till after the notification of the nominee.

Ex-Gov. John F. Hill of Maine is favored by the Taft leaders for chairman of the committee on the permanent organization of the convention.

The intended compliment to ex-Gov. Hill emphasizes the appreciation felt towards what is regarded as an original Taft state. Mr. Hill's work during the contest hearings by the national committee was most efficient and earnest and his bearing and personality is said to have won for him many friends. His ability to head the important committee on permanent organization is conceded.

CHICAGO WEATHER FORECAST.

Fair and cool Monday, becoming unsettled and warmer Tuesday; variable winds.

Delegations and enthusiastic rooters for favorite candidates poured into Chicago from all points of the compass yesterday. They came in special trains with bands and banners and badges, marched through the streets with flying colors and gorgeous umbrellas and packed the already crowded corridors of the hotels until progress through them necessitated much elbow jostling, slow and difficult, but none the less joyous.

Missouri furnished the largest crowd, a train from St. Louis bringing nearly 400 persons. There were delegations extending into the hundreds from the New England states—Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire, and Connecticut sending in their shouters for Knox, Franklin Murphy, and Gov. Curtis Guild.

As fast as they arrived they lined up in front of the hotel registers, where some deputized delegate, often the chairman, registered for the party. Then there was a rush for rooms assigned to the guests, and then back to the hotel lobbies and out in Michigan avenue to revel in the cool lake breezes. Then, arm in arm, for a trip round the various state headquarters on the part of the younger delegates and quiet conferences among a few of the leaders of each delegation, framing up the delegation committee slates for the opening day of the convention.

Crowd Thickest in Annex Lobby.

The crowd was thickest in the lobby of the Auditorium Annex and at times it was almost impossible to pass through it to the elevators or to the entrances in Michigan avenue. Early in the afternoon the management was forced to remove the comfortable chairs and couches from "peacock alley" to afford a more convenient passageway for the throng.

Perhaps it was intended as a mark of courtesy to the venerable speaker of the house, or perhaps it was the band of music stationed on the balcony at the headquarters of Congressman Joseph G. Cannon, but certain it is that large numbers of the arriving delegations as well as hundreds of visitors from down state visited the spacious rooms of the candidate on the parlor floor of the Auditorium Annex attracted the most comment. A feature of the Taft headquarters consists of a number of large photographs of the secretary of war, in which his huge bulk has been anything but disguised in a number of interesting poses taken at various times in his trips around the world. In both the Taft and Fairbanks headquarters flowers were placed in profusion and huge electric signs made it an easy matter to find the way to the suite of the Indiana candidate.

One of the liveliest places was the headquarters of the New Jersey crowd in the green room at the Annex. In reality these are taken up with the boom for former Gov. Franklin Murphy for vice president. This was the scene of a reception on the arrival of 380 Murphy boomers at 5:30 in the afternoon. They marched up Michigan avenue with three bands—the music being furnished by the two Pennsylvania marching clubs, one of which had arrived in the morning, and brought out all the people from the Michigan avenue hotels to see the parade. Gov. J. F. Fort and Senator John Kean were among the marchers.

"Why Not Name Man Who Wants It?"

"We're not worrying about the nomination for president," said the senator as he wiped a perspiring face at the hotel counter. "But we've come here to see that Franklin Murphy is nominated for vice president, and they tell me he's a good chance. Why not give the office to some one who wants it?"

"That's the talk," responded Lafayette Young of Iowa, who overheard the remark as he was hurrying past in his mission of throwing cold water on Senator Dolliver's vice presidential boom.

The next door neighbors of the New Jersey delegation are the Iowans, who occupy the palm room, a spacious apartment with many windows and cool appearing willow chairs. The delegation was holding a caucus in there just before the arrival of the Murphy rooters from New England.

"The delegation wasn't all here, so we didn't take up the Dolliver matter," said Lafe Young as he emerged. "We just discussed how we were going to get the 10,000 Iowa people under the tent of the convention. O, I don't know what we'll do about this Dolliver affair. Dolliver doesn't want it. He figures that it'll cost him 160 acres.

Taft and Fairbanks Have Luxury.

The New York and Massachusetts headquarters at the Auditorium also were thronged with visitors, including many women. For real luxury in the matter of furnishings, the apartments engaged as the Taft Ohio headquarters and the Fairbanks headquarters on the parlor floor of the Auditorium Annex attracted the most comment. A feature of the Taft headquarters consists of a number of large photographs of the secretary of war, in which his huge bulk has been anything but disguised in a number of interesting poses taken at various times in his trips around the world. In both the Taft and Fairbanks headquarters flowers were placed in profusion and huge electric signs made it an easy matter to find the way to the suite of the Indiana candidate.

CHICAGO WEATHER FORECAST.

Fair and cool Monday, becoming unsettled and warmer Tuesday; variable winds.

Delegations and enthusiastic rooters for favorite candidates poured into Chicago from all points of the compass yesterday. They came in special trains with bands and banners and badges, marched through the streets with flying colors and gorgeous umbrellas and packed the already crowded corridors of the hotels until progress through them necessitated much elbow jostling, slow and difficult, but none the less joyous.

Missouri furnished the largest crowd, a train from St. Louis bringing nearly 400 persons. There were delegations extending into the hundreds from the New England states—Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire, and Connecticut sending in their shouters for Knox, Franklin Murphy, and Gov. Curtis Guild.

As fast as they arrived they lined up in front of the hotel registers, where some dejuilled delegate, often the chairman, registered for the party. Then there was a rush for rooms assigned to the guests, and then back to the hotel lobbies and out in Michigan avenue to revel in the cool lake breeze. Then, arm in arm, for a trip round the various state headquarters on the part of the younger delegates and quiet conferences among a few of the leaders of each delegation, framing up the delegation committee slates for the opening day of the convention.

Crowd Thickest in Annex Lobby.

The crowd was thickest in the lobby of the Auditorium Annex and at times it was almost impossible to pass through it to the elevators or to the entrances in Michigan avenue. Early in the afternoon the management was forced to remove the comfortable chairs and couches from "peacock alley" to afford a more convenient passageway for the throng.

Perhaps it was intended as a mark of courtesy to the venerable speaker of the house, or perhaps it was the band of music stationed on the balcony at the headquarters of Congressman Joseph G. Cannon, but certain it is that large numbers of the arriving delegations as well as hundreds of visitors from down state visited the spacious rooms of the candidate on the parlor floor of the Auditorium.

Private Secretary Busbey and Angus Early and other managers of Mr. Cannon's campaign saw to it that all the visitors went away wearing the artistic gilt badge of the congressman.

Taft and Fairbanks Have Luxury.

The New York and Massachusetts headquarters at the Auditorium also were thronged with visitors, including many women. For real luxury in the matter of furnishings, the apartments engaged as the Taft Ohio headquarters and the Fairbanks headquarters on the parlor floor of the Auditorium Annex attracted the most comment. A feature of the Taft headquarters consists of a number of large photographs of the secretary of war, in which his huge bulk has been anything but disguised in a number of interesting poses taken at various times in his trips around the world. In both the Taft and Fairbanks headquarters flowers were placed in profusion and huge electric signs made it an easy matter to find the way to the suite of the Indiana candidate.

One of the liveliest places was the headquarters of the New Jersey crowd in the green room at the Annex. In reality these are taken up with the boom for former Gov. Franklin Murphy for vice president. This was the scene of a reception on the arrival at 300 Murphy boomers at 5:30 in the afternoon. They marched up Michigan avenue with three bands—the music being furnished by the two Pennsylvania marching clubs, one of which had arrived in the morning, and brought out all the people from the Michigan avenue hotels to see the parade. Gov. J. F. Fort and Senator John Kean were among the marchers.

"Why Not Name Man Who Wants It?"

"We're not worrying about the nomination for president," said the senator as he wiped a perspiring face at the hotel counter. "But we've come here to see that Franklin Murphy is nominated for vice president, and they tell me he's a good chance. Why not give the place to some one who wants it?"

"That's the talk," responded Lafayette Young of Iowa, who overheard the remark as he was hurrying past in his mission of throwing cold water on Senator Dolliver's vice presidential boom.

The next door neighbors of the New Jersey delegation are the Iowans, who occupy a palm room, a spacious apartment with many windows and cool appearing willow chairs. The delegation was holding a caucus there just before the arrival of the Missouri rooters from New England.

"The delegation wasn't all here, so we didn't take up the Dolliver matter," said Lafe Young as he emerged. "We just discussed how we were going to get the 10,000 persons under the tent of the convention. G—, I don't know what we'll do about the Dolliver affair. Dolliver doesn't want it. He figures that it'll cost him 160 acres of his land every year he holds down the office. That's his farm that he bought from the proceeds of his lectures to live on in his old age."

Tickets for the Iowans.

The task of supplying tickets to the 10,000 Iowans was intrusted to Frank B. Clark, United States marshal for the southern district, a good natured man with a jolly face who didn't shirk the hopeless assignment.

Mr. Clark said the Grant club from Des Moines would be in today on a special train.

Congressman Hepburn, who was talking with a group of earnest politicians near one of the windows, favored Fairbanks for vice president.

"He has made the most progressive vice president we ever have had," said he. "He is dignified and vigorous, and it is due to him that the senate has not of late degenerated into an interminable debating society. In two rulings in the gumshoe speech of Stone he stopped a useless talk that might have continued for an indefinite period.

"Mr. Dolliver is less than 50 years old. He has been a senator for eight years and might continue in the senate until he is 80, serving his state and his country as he could serve it in no other capacity. For a man like him to take such an office, with his prospects, would indicate mental defects that would unfit him for the office."

Dolliver's Farm His All.

Another of the politicians brought up again the subject of Senator Dolliver's farm near Fort Dodge. It appears that this farm consists of 600 acres and is worth something like $60,000, and it's all he has, and the senator fears that the expense of the office of vice president will leave him without any farm or any competence when he's returned to private life.

A little later George D. Perkins, Mr. Young, and a few other influential delegates from Iowa started out with wet blankets to call on the Taft managers and smother the Dolliver vice presidential boom if they could.

Missourians on "Taft Special."

Running as a Taft special, the train carrying Missouri republicans and including two-thirds of the state's representation in the convention reached Chicago in the afternoon. The party came from St. Louis, where they had gathered, and with the coaches emblazoned with streamers announcing that the delegation was from Missouri and bound for Chicago to nominate Taft, attracted a deal of attention along the line.

The party was headed by Senator William Warner, one of the big four from the "show me" state. A second party, with Herbert S. Hadley, attorney general from Missouri and the man who licked the Standard Oil there, will reach Chicago this morning. High water in the Kansas City neighborhood made the delegation from that town and surrounding territory miss the "Taft special." They will be on hand early today.

Senator Warner announced that Missouri would be satisfied with the honor it had coming to it as one of the most loyal supporters of Secretary Taft, and would not seek other glories at the hands of the convention.

Have Booms in Cold Storage.

Other delegates declared, however, that the state was not without its favorite sons for the vice presidential nomination, whose booms could be hastily taken out of cold storage should conditions warrant. Both Senator Warner and Mr. Hadley were said to be of timber sufficiently big to warrant their consideration by the convention.

This morning at 10 o'clock the Missouri delegation will caucus at the Grand Pacific. Charles Nagel will be named as a member of the national committee succeeding Thomas J. Atkins, assistant treasurer of the United States, who is not seeking the honor again. Richard C. Kerens of St. Louis, former member of the national committee and a power in state and municipal politics, came with the party, although not a delegate. Congressman John H. Bothwell of Sedalia is another of the big four, and took an important part in the festivities attendant upon the arrival of the delegation.

Pennsylvania Reinforcements.

The Pennsylvania contingent, which is one of the largest and happiest attending the convention, was reinforced in the morning by two more detachments, one with 200 marchers and a band, including 132 members of the Philander C. Knox club of Philadelphia, which came prepared to shout for Knox, "first, last, and all the time," the chief rooter said.

Boutonnieres—a rose the size of a hickory nut—were worn by all the members of the Philadelphia club, but when a hidden spring was touched, the boutonnieres became photographs of Senator Knox.

The other Pennsylvania reinforcement was headed by Congressman John Dalzell, who hails from the heart of the steel region and is depended upon to see that plans for tariff revision do not interfere seriously with a cherished industry.

Among those who marched up Michigan avenue in the parade in which the gold and black umbrellas of the new arrivals mingled with the red, white, and blue umbrellas of the Pittsburg Knox marching club, which arrived the day before, was Israel Durham, big and fat, with a light mustache; Dave Martin, another well known Philadelphia politician, and the Pittsburg Glee club, swelling the total in the parade to 500 and more.

Bay State Causes a Stir.

The Massachusetts delegation, 200 strong, succeeded in creating something of a stir in Michigan avenue after leaving its special train at Van Buren street shortly after 4 o'clock in the afternoon. By special arrangement with the Illinois Central railroad, the Michigan Central special was pulled up to the Van Buren street suburban station, where the delegation's band got in its best work.

Forming in line the band, the marching club, and the delegates proceeded to Michigan avenue, down past the crowds which lined the sidewalks in the vicinity of the Auditorium and the Annex, and over to Wabash avenue. The parade then encircled the block in which the Auditorium is located and ended by opening the state headquarters on the parlor floor of the hotel.

The delegates immediately announced that they were for Gov. Curtis Guild for vice president. "Guild and Taft" was the wording of a big banner carried by one of the marchers. Life size portraits of the governor were unpacked at once and hurriedly displayed in and about the headquarters.

Michigan "Trickles In."

Several of the Michigan delegation "trickled in," as one of their number expressed it, among them Gov. Fred M. Warner and Senator J. C. Burrow, who will be temporary chairman of the convention. Frank Gilchrist of Alpena, the owner of a line of fifty or sixty freighters, was called back home by the dangerous illness of his wife and it is a question which alternate will be named in his place, but Charles B. Warren probably will be the man.

The Michigan headquarters are, among several others, situated on the mezzanine floor of the Congress hotel and Arthur Hill commented as he watched the Knox rooters parade from the window:

"It means the expenditure of a great deal of money to bring a marching club like that here, but it makes republican votes and is worth the money."

"Land of Sunshine and Flowers."

A little farther north, on the mezzanine floor, one perceives the state flag of the California delegation and in the room are the headquarters are several papier maché bears heavily gilded, while the wall is emblazoned with the proud motto: "California, Land of Sunshine, Fruits, and Flowers."

The majority of the California delegates came in on two special cars of the Overland Limited at 1 o'clock. The other members of the delegation, including George A. Knight, who will second the nomination of Secretary Taft, preceded the party and were at the hotel.

The contest in the California delegation for the place of delegate at large, made vacant by the absence of Jacob Neff of San Francisco, was settled in the afternoon, when Alternate E. A. Chase of Riverside was selected.

A strong effort is being made to line up the Californians for John Hays Hammond for vice president, but without any overwhelming success. The delegation is instructed for Taft.

"The delegation is solid for Taft," said Gen. George Stone, chairman of the state committee, "but is interested greatly in the platform. Ours is one of the greatest states in the union in fruit, wine, and wool production, and whatever is done concerning the tariff is of vital interest to us."

The Californians were the only ones who criticised the weather.

"It's close and sultry," commented A. Hochheimer, but another delegate, who had been in Chicago before, thought that the day was a fine example of weather in this city.

With the Californians came five of the six members of the Idaho delegation, who also are quartered at the Congress hotel and who likewise are instructed for Taft. There was some sentiment among the Idaho delegates for Hammond for second place on the ticket.

Prohibition State Party Comes.

"Maine, the prohibition state," commented some politician in the lobby of the Auditorium as a party of fifty arrived in the afternoon. It included twenty-three delegates, only two missing. All of the party wore red silk badges held in place with large Taft buttons and carried large silk flags. Former Gov. John F. Hill of Augusta, who has been in the city for several days, was at the train to meet the party and was informed that the delegates had held a caucus on the train and reelected him as a member of the national committee.

Secretary of State Byron Boyd, who is also secretary of the Maine committee, brought the party in and registered it, after which most of the members went to headquarters on the fourth floor of the hotel.

A. H. Moulton, who came with the Maine crowd as a mascot, is the heaviest man attending the convention, according to the best obtainable information. He weighs 458 pounds and is heavier than any two of his party.

The Maine delegation is unpledged except the First district, which is instructed for Taft. Taft is the favorite of the delegation as a whole, however. On the question of the vice presidency the Maine delegation leans toward the selection of a New York man.

The New Hampshire delegation, which came with the Maine crowd, is also uninstructed as to the presidential candidate, and several of the delegates expressed the view that Representative Sherman of New York would make a worthy candidate.

Oregon Octogenarian Comes.

Among the western delegations that arrived at noon was that of Oregon, the most picturesque figure of which was the venerable George H. Williams, 80 years old, who was attorney general in President Grant's cabinet. He said that he was in vigorous health, and looked it, and was ready to make a speech seconding the nomination of Secretary Taft.

The Kansas delegation has its headquarters on the parlor floor of the Auditorium Annex. Most of the delegates will arrive this morning, but among the notable politicians from that state who came in were Congressman Victor Murdoch, A. C. Jordan, W. C. Edwards, and Congressman Philip Campbell. The Kansans are strongly for Taft.

"I'm surprised that you are not for Congressman Cannon," commented an elderly man who came in from the Cannon headquarters with a few Cannon badges for distribution.

"We certainly are for Taft, and you can't put it too strongly," returned Congressman Murdoch. "Next to Tennessee, Kansas was the first state to come out for the secretary of war last March. We are on the driver's seat of the band wagon. Fairbanks also is popular in the state, having been over it twice, and we think he'd make an excellent choice for vice president."

"State Emblem and Nuisance."

The only mural decorations in the Kansas headquarters are cloth prints of big yellow sunflowers.

"A state emblem," observed M. A. Low, "and a state nuisance, in common with many other emblems."

The South Dakota delegation, a portion of which arrived in the morning, included Thomas Thorson of Canton, former secretary of state and a new member of the national committee, who belongs to what is known as the insurgent wing of the party in his state. E. L. Senn of Oacoma, owner of a string of twenty-four weekly newspapers, was another arrival, and so was James Elliott Tindall, former United States district attorney, the "silent manager" in the recent campaign, which has resulted in the nomination of Gov. Coe I. Crawford for senator.

Washington Wants a Plank.

Early in the morning a large contingent of the Washington delegation arrived at the Great Northern hotel and prepared to insist that they be permitted to dictate at least one plank for the platform. Richard A. Ballinger, chairman of the delegation, opened the state headquarters there and spoke of the determination of the state's representatives to insist upon some action aimed against the railroads of Washington.

"The platform should contain a plank which will prevent the roads from arbitrarily increasing freight rates to suit themselves at any time they desire," said Mr. Ballinger. "Such rates should only be increased with the consent of the interstate commerce commission, and there should be a law making a public hearing compulsory.

"The reason Washington is stirred up on this question is that a uniform increase in freight rates on lumber amounting to 10 per cent has been put into effect, with the result that most of the lumber mills in the state have been closed."

The remaining members of the delegation will arrive some time this morning, when a caucus will be held in the headquarters at the Great Northern hotel.

Louisiana's One Thought.

The Louisiana delegation brought with it but one thought—tariff revision. The delegates announced that Louisianans expected to use their influence to keep the tariff on sugar. Tariff revision was a good thing, they thought, but for this one item which should not be tampered with.

Although the state headquarters in the Victoria hotel were opened during the day, the majority of the delegates will not arrive until this morning. Final organization and appointment of committees will be taken up at a meeting to be held this afternoon.

North Carolina arrived in the morning thirty strong, and set up headquarters at the Grand Pacific. E. C. Duncan of Raleigh is at the head of the delegation, and will probably be selected as the state's member of the national committee at a caucus fixed for this morning. Other appointments will be made at the same time.

The delegation is solidly for Taft and now without a contest, or "even a riffle," as Mr. Duncan expressed it, "to mar the surface of its placidity."

Anybody visiting suite 244 at the Stratford hotel may have a taste of genuine Kentucky hospitality—several tastes if desirable. An advance guard of the Kentucky delegation arrived in the small hours of the morning and within a short time had constructed a practical if crowded buffet which will be operated in connection with the headquarters.

The remainder of the delegation, which will be accompanied by a party of Taft boosters, will arrive this morning. The delegates are instructed for Taft, but, as far as the early arrivals could say, have not concentrated their attention on any vice presidential possibility.

Alaska Against Third Term.

"No stampede for President Roosevelt and down with the third termers," was the battle cry sounded by a small but determined delegation from Alaska, which made its appearance at the Stratford hotel early in the afternoon. Half of the delegation—meaning L. P. Shackleford—was found shaving itself in the delegation headquarters and enthusing over the prospect of a ticket headed by Taft and Fairbanks.

"Alaska is for Fairbanks for vice president," said Mr. Shackleford, between strokes. "There is no chance for a stampede for Roosevelt among the Alaska delegates, either. We are for Taft and Fairbanks and will stand by this program until the final vote."

Want Two Votes Apiece.

Gentlemen from the Philippines—two of them—intend to make four of themselves with the aid of the committee on credentials if such a thing is possible. They opened up Philippine headquarters in the Palmer house yesterday with a boom, but the boom was for the recognition of four delegates rather than the mere two mentioned in the official call.

"Congress has given the Philippines two territorial delegates in the house of representatives," said Judge A. S. Crossfield of Manila, who took charge of the headquarters, "and that certainly means four delegates to the convention. Territories which have but one delegate in congress get two delegates to a convention, and that is the basis for our claim." Judge Crossfield and T. L. Hartigan are the regularly accredited delegates under the call, and their alternates, Judge W. F. Norris and William K. Reynolds, will also sit as delegates if the contention of the Philippines is conceded by the committee on credentials.

Judge Crossfield, who went to the Philippines in 1899 as a captain of volunteers and who is now a judge of the Court of First Instance—a tribunal similar to a United States District court—said that the tariff and a ship subsidy were the principal things the Philippines were interested in in the convention.

What the Philippines Need.

"We want to be part of the United States in something more than name," he said. "We want the duty on goods imported from the United States proper and the duty on goods exported to the United States removed, so that we may go ahead with our commerce as it exists between the various states of the union. Of course, we will have to fight the sugar interests and the tobacco interests before we get this, but we are going to make a strong effort to get a plank to this effect in the platform.

"The government has suspended temporarily the maritime law of the United States regarding the shipment of goods on vessels carrying the American flag, but we want this suspension made permanent," he said. "The only way we can ever live under such regulations is by a ship subsidy. We are willing and anxious to obey the law, but the subsidy is necessary."

Porto Rico Wants Citizenship.

The Porto Rican delegation, four in number—two delegates and two alternates—held a caucus and decided on committeemen. R. H. Todd, national committeeman, a lawyer from San Juan, will represent the island on the committees on resolutions and rules, and F. P. Quinones, a sugar planter from Ponce, will be a member of the committee on credentials.

Porto Rico is anxious to get a citizenship plank in the platform, something like what President Roosevelt has advocated in his messages, and Mr. Todd will bring the matter before the committee on resolutions Tuesday afternoon. L. P. Valdivieso, a sugar planter from San German, and J. G. Brisco, a San Juan physician, the alternates, joined with the delegates in holding open house at the headquarters at the Palmer house yesterday. They all talked citizenship for Porto Rico.

Three Hawaiians arrived in the afternoon and joined the two delegates, J. K. Kuhio and A. G. M. Robertson. This delegation will vote for Taft, although there is some slight sentiment against the secretary of war in the Hawaiian islands based on the feeling that Mr. Taft has devoted more attention to the Philippines than he has to Hawaii. It is the jealousy of one member of Uncle Sam's large family that thinks another child is especially favored, and is not serious.

POLITICS BECOMES A DRAMA.

Stage, in Person of Delegate E. D. Stair, Represented at the Big Convention.

The theatrical profession is represented prominently in the convention. E. D. Stair, manager of the Great Northern theater in this city and senior member of the firm of Stair & Havlin, owning and operating more than half a hundred playhouses throughout the country, is a delegate at large from Michigan.

Mr. Stair votes in Detroit, where he not only is interested in matters theatrical but is president of the Detroit Journal company, publishing the evening newspaper of that name.

Mr. Stair is said to have senatorial aspirations, but whether he covets the toga of William Alden Smith or Julius Cæsar Burroughs is a matter of conjecture.

WU TO SEE CONVENTION OPEN.

Chinese Minister Returns to Chicago After Visiting Notre Dame and Gunness Farm.

Wu Ting Fang came back to Chicago yesterday afternoon after a pilgrimage to a shrine of learning and another of murder. He went to the University of Notre Dame first and afterwards visited the Gunness farm near Laporte, Ind. He came back in an auto and went to the Grand Pacific, where he will remain until Tuesday night, when he goes to Iowa for the commencement of the state university. On Tuesday he will see the opening of the national convention, in which he is greatly interested.

WANT HITCHCOCK AS LEADER

Some of the National Committeemen Favor Taft's Manager.

IN CHARGE OF CAMPAIGN.

Likelihood That the Ohioan Will Be Made Chairman of Body.

Active campaigning for the position of chairman of the republican national committee made its appearance yesterday. The boom for Frank H. Hitchcock, Secretary Taft's campaign manager, materialized in the shape of an appeal by more than half the committee.

The appeal took the form of letters which the committeemen wrote to Secretary Taft urging him, in the event of his nomination, to select Hitchcock as the manager of his campaign for election.

The expressions were made in response to an intimation from Washington that advice would be acceptable on the question of selecting a chairman for the next national committee, and most of the letters had been mailed before Mr. Hitchcock was apprised of the action taken.

When told of the letters tonight, Mr. Hitchcock said:

"I regret my friends have seen fit to take such action at this time. It has been my opinion all along that the question of selecting a manager for the campaign could well wait until after the nomination has been made."

That there is opposition to the appointment of Mr. Hitchcock is conceded by his friends. The name of Senator Crane is heard frequently in connection with the chairmanship, and there are a few members of the committee who are seeking to have Chairman New retained in the position. The selection, however, has been thought to rest between Mr. Hitchcock and Arthur I. Vorys, who has been identified with Mr. Taft's campaign.

BRYAN WINS BY ACCLAMATION, PREDICTS EX-GOV. OSBORNE.

Former Executive of Wyoming Says Booms of Other Democratic Candidates Have Fallen to Pieces.

Bryan's nomination by acclamation at the Denver convention was predicted by former Gov. John E. Osborne of Wyoming yesterday. Mr. Osborne is a member of the democratic national committee and also of the committee on arrangements for the democratic convention. He is registered at the Sherman house, coming to Chicago to attend the republican convention.

"I thought I should like to get on to a few of the curves of the republicans and see how they nominate the man who is going to be defeated, I believe, in the November election," said Mr. Osborne. "Bryan will be the winner, I am confident. It is certain that he will receive the democratic nomination. Not another candidate will be mentioned in the convention. The booms of all the other men have already fallen to pieces."

The democratic national committee will hold a meeting at the Sherman house tomorrow. Tom Taggart of Indiana will be there and it is thought that every other member of the committee will be present, as most of them will be in Chicago to attend the republican convention.

BURROWS IS TOLD SPEECH TOO MILD

Senator's Opening Address for the Convention Criticised on All Hands.

RECALLS PAST GLORIES.

Conference Decides Administration Must Be Praised and "Ginger" Added.

BY RAYMOND.

Senator Burrows' speech in opening the convention was received here yesterday and created a sensation because of its extraordinary mildness. It was apparently confined to a general panegyric on the virtues and glories of the republican party.

It was decidedly along old lines, referred to ancient history, and scarcely reached the present time at all.

There was a notable absence of laudation of President Roosevelt and his administration, and the principal achievements of that administration were mentioned in a perfunctory sort of fashion which occasioned the profoundest surprise.

The result was a gentle protest from President Roosevelt himself. He intimated that, in his opinion, the opening speech of the convention ought to be a little more exciting in its tone and ought at least to point with pride to the achievements of the republican administration.

The Burrows speech was submitted to some of the Taft people. They expressed but little surprise over it, however, and said it was about what could be expected under the circumstances. Some of the leaders of the "allies," however, were astonished, mortified, and ashamed in about equal proportions.

"Allies" in Hurried Conference.

The result was a hurried conference of the "allies" and they promptly agreed that to have the speech go out to the country in that fashion would create a bad impression.

It was notorious that Senator Burrows had been selected for the position of temporary chairman against the wishes of the administration. The president had selected either Senator Dolliver or Senator Beveridge, the latter being preferred because it was believed the Iowa man would be chosen for vice president. Leaders of the "allies" quickly realized that in its present form the speech of the temporary presiding officer of the convention would be looked upon as a distinct slap at the administration because of the fact that the chief achievements of President Roosevelt during the last four years were scarcely mentioned at all.

Burrows Must Revise Speech.

It was agreed at the conference that Senator Burrows must be requested, and, in fact, warned, that he must revise his speech at once and put some ginger in it, giving the credit to the administration for the work done in the interests of the people and specifically mentioning and praising President Roosevelt for his personal part in it all.

It is understood that Senator Burrows has undertaken to write several new paragraphs so as to make his speech better fit for popular consumption.

FRIENDS OF HUGHES AND KNOX PUZZLED IN AUDITORIUM ROOM

Delegates Find Pictures of New York Governor Outside and Those of Pennsylvania Man on Walls.

There is a room in the Auditorium hotel which is causing much bewilderment and discussion. It is the correspondence room on the main floor over the door of which is a big electric light sign reading "STORIES." Above the sign is a life size painting of the candidate from New York and on each side of the picture are banners of the "Republican Club of New York" and the "National Hughes League."

Beside these indications of the purposes to which the room might be dedicated there are two similar banners bearing the pictures of the governor of New York hung in the windows fronting on Michigan avenue.

Led by these signs a steady stream of New Yorkers pours into the room expecting to find it devoted to the candidacy of the favorite son of the Empire state. But after a puzzled inspection of the interior they scratch their heads and wonder whether it is the outside decorations that are misplaced or the inside decorations that are invaders. They feel quite certain that it is no place for them, for the walls of the room are lined with lithographic representations of the rival candidate for the nomination, Philander Knox of Pennsylvania.

Who does the room belong to? Who is the trespasser? There are a number of perplexed delegates who would like to know.

Chairman New's Doorkeeper Neglects Duties When Photographer Appears on Scene.

One of the sights of the offices of the national committee in the Coliseum Annex is "Scarface." Chairman New's big colored doorkeeper, so nicknamed on account of a scar which runs across his face.

"Scarface" is fully conscious of his own importance. He showed this clearly the other day, when Frank P. Stratton, Chairman New's secretary, rang the buzzer long and often for the doorkeeper. He finally decided that it would require less effort to do the errand himself than to hold his finger on the button indefinitely.

Immediately outside the door he found "Scarface," standing erect and tense in his usual place. He grasped him by the shoulder and asked him why in several kinds of blazes he hadn't answered the bell.

"Fo' de Lawd's sake, let loose of me, man!" cried "Scarface" without even looking around. "Don't yo' see I'a havin' ma picture drawed?"

About ten yards away was a photographer trying to get a picture of a group of several republicans of national prominence who were standing about an equal distance from the negro. "Scarface" thought he was going to be in it.

"ALLIES" SLOWLY NEARING THE END

Political Doctors Quarrel Over the Remedies They Have Left Untried.

ALL HOPE IS ABANDONED.

Gloom Is Thick in Auditorium as Friends Talk of What Might Have Been.

BY JOHN CALLAN O'LAUGHLIN.

Stretched out upon a brass decorated bed in the Auditorium in Chicago is the attenuated figure of what was once a full lunged man. Approach it reverently, with handkerchief in hand, and prepare to shed a few tears, if only because politeness demands it. No need to make any inquiries as to who it is. You know. It is the "allies."

The physicians have given up hope. There is quarreling among themselves over the kind of treatment he should have had. Dr. Burke of Pittsburg declares if the Knox virus alone had been used the patient would be the Man of the Hour. Dr. McKinley, who has made the whole state of Illinois famous through his extensive researches, claims Cannon tablets were the real remedy to have applied. Dr. Hemenway and Dr. Kealing of Indiana say that the bark of the Sycamore would have built up the patient until he had no need of artificial support.

Dr. Dick of Ohio and Dr. Humphrey of New York stand modestly in the background. They have little to say, but their black looks attest the failure of the Foraker and Hughes remedy and the disgust they feel at the bungling of which their colleagues are guilty.

You sniff to show your sorrow, for it is not decent to listen to quarrels in the presence of a dying man. The gloom is so thick that it can be cut with a dull knife. There is no ray of sunshine in this crushing shadow. The physicians move to one side. Their heads get together. "Perhaps, perhaps," Dr. Kealing mutters. You walk away with Dr. McKinley.

Hope Still Lives.

"No," he declares, "we haven't given up hope. There is a chance, a good chance. What will we do? Well, in the first place, we have decided, as a result of our meeting, to take 150 of our best contests before the credentials committee. Then we will see whether the national committee will be sustained."

You give a last look at the moribund body lying on the bed.

"He looks all in," is your silent observation. You do not care to give expression to your views. All the doctors know what they are, anyway. Their concern now is not to do anything for their patient but to prevent him from being subjected to an autopsy by the Taft physicians before he is actually dead. They are afraid that the composite Frankenstein which they had attempted to create will be dissected and his Knox head and his Hughes arm carried away. They know that a plot to this end is under way, and they intimate that the Taft people are the principal conspirators.

But the physicians, who are specialists for each part of this collapsed figure, declare it will fail, for they are watching with the closest kind of attention over the work of their own hands.

But you know the wake will soon be held and that the Taft doctors have no intention to steal any portion of the monster that is in the last stage of life. They feel that common decency demands that he should be allowed to die in peace, in the midst of the few friends which he has gathered, and they are desirous of being present at the interment. They have delicately insinuated as much. They have told the physicians of the "allies" that, after all, they are brothers; that while their patient and the thing on the bed have entered upon separate ways, due of course, this with a touch of pride, to the different kinds of treatment administered, still the honor and dignity of the profession demand that the public shall know of no disagreement.

The overture has been accepted with becoming satisfaction. So that while Dr. McKinley and those who have been associated with him will have recourse for advice to the committee on credentials, they expect to be furnished with no effective remedy. When the convention assembles they will have their friends speak in devoted tones of the merits of the "allies." They will dwell upon the virtues and achievements which have astonished a nation. And they will say: "God's will be done."

Miraculous Not Expected.

It is a program that will have no variation except through a miracle. And the miraculous is not expected. The Taft creature is lusty of form and voice, and is overshadowed by only one figure—that of the president. Dr. Vorys and Dr. Hitchcock admit that there is some danger of the latter overshadowing the candidate they have brought into life and they are endeavoring with all their skill to prevent such a blight.

Working with them to the same end are the physicians of the "allies." Dr. Henry Cabot Lodge, the president's own medical adviser, is cooperating with these half a dozen wiseheads. Mr. Roosevelt has no desire for continued official life. He prefers that Mr. Taft shall enter with full vigor upon the campaign, and after the campaign, as he hopes, upon the duties of the presidential office.

So that there is better cooperation than was believed to be possible a week ago. The situation then was strained. Burke, Kealing, Hemenway, Humphrey, and Dick were swearing that the Taft doctors had stolen the remedy they had been thinking about and were using it to their disadvantage. They were determined to carry the matter to the court of the convention and obtain justice.

Oil for Troubled Waters.

Dr. W. Murray Crane of Massachusetts threw oil upon the troubled waters. Today there is calm. The inevitable has come to the "allies" and the faithful physicians of that creation realize it.

If you have another tear, squeeze it out. And remember: "De mortuis nil nisi bonum."

J. HENRY SMYTHE JR. ARRIVES.

Young Man Who Started Roosevelt Yell in 1904 Convention Comes Again.

J. Henry Smythe Jr. is in town. He arrived at the Auditorium Annex late yesterday morning and after leaving his suit case drifted to the newspaper offices to let them know he was in and to leave a photograph if they cared for it.

J. Henry Smythe Jr. is the young University of Pennsylvania student who won undying fame at the 1904 republican convention by jumping on the platform and starting a Roosevelt yell through a megaphone. Waving an American flag, he yelled:

"All together, now! Three cheers for the president!"

Then he started a unison yell of "Roosevelt! Roosevelt!" The delegates and spectators caught on and the sound, according to newspaper clippings which Mr. Smythe happened to have with him yesterday, was terrific. Later Mr. Smythe took the stump in Pennsylvania for President Roosevelt.

"I'd rather not say anything about what I am going to do here," he volunteered. "I came with the idea of being a spectator, but of course—well, I don't want to thrust myself forward. There doesn't seem to be quite so much enthusiasm here as there was four years ago, does there?

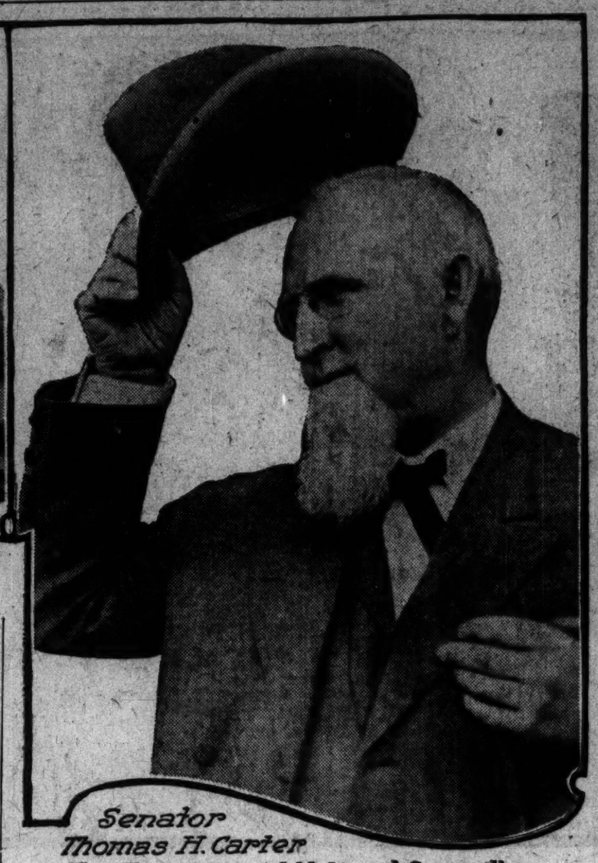

"In the fall I shall take the stump for whoever is nominated. I am after the 'first voters.' You might say that I advise every young man to take an active part in national and city politics, and, of course, I advise the republican party. Every voter should be a party man."

Mr. Smythe will be a member of the senior class at the University of Pennsylvania next year. One of his clippings adds that he is "bright and intelligent above the average of his years."

Two Westerners: One of Them Talking Third Term for Roosevelt.

Jonathan Bourne.

Senator Thomas H. Carter Ex-Chairman of National Committee.

POLITICAL KALEIDOSCOPE REVOLVES AS VISITORS THRONG MICHIGAN AVENUE.

BY JOHN CALLAN O'LAUGHLIN.

The delegates came in one by one,
There's one more river to cross,
Forakerites and Knoxites too,
There's one more river to cross.

The delegates came in two by two,
There's one more river to cross,
Fairbanks men and Hughesites too,
There's one more river to cross.

The delegates came in countless shoals,
There's no more river to cross,
They're all for Taft and shouting too,
There's no more river to cross.

A delegate with an artificial sunflower in his hand sang the above doggerel in lusty tones in the midst of a big crowd of delegates and convention visitors in Michigan avenue.

"Yes," he said with pride of state, "I'm from Kansas. Don't I look it?" He stuck out his chest. "And, say, I'll give you the wise tip. We're all for Taft. There's nothing else to it. I feel so good about it that I can't keep my voice in tune."

"We know that," dryly observed a man who had listened with a pained expression to the song. "It might almost be suggested that you have a holler."

"True, true," promptly replied the man from the Sunflower state. "I have, and I know a place to fill it."

The crowd good naturedly laughed and turned to the next picture in the kaleidoscope. It was Jonathan Bourne, he of second elective term fame, who had hoped to come to the Chicago convention as a delegate from the glorious state of Oregon, and who was turned down in the interest of Taft. Bourne was like the busy little bee—flitting from delegate to delegate and telling them it was nothing but Roosevelt, and that it was their duty to overturn bossism and give the people the man they wanted. His hand was automatically reaching into his vest pocket for the brand of cigars he favors—and it is good—and as automatically extending the weed to the eager hand reaching out for it. "I see Bourne's smoking up again," observed a Cannon boomer. Then, sadly: "We have passed that point." Bourne was stopped by a friend who is an ardent admirer of President Roosevelt, but an antithird termer. "I'm sorry for you, senator," said this friend. "Sorry for me," energetically replied Bourne. "Sorry for me? You'd better be sorry for the country." "That means, then, that at last you've given up hope?" "Well, I should say not. Roosevelt will be nominated on the first ballot. You mark my words." The senator's seamed face lighted up with the prophecy. He loves to roll the words around in his mouth, for it is a prize morsel to the Oregonian.

"Poor Bourne," said Representative Cox of Long Island, who has a smooth face and looks much like Harry New, chairman of the national republican committee. "He's obsessed, that's what he is. But he'll have the obsession knocked out of him when the vote is taken on Thursday."

"I don't know about that," said a Pittsburg man. "Have you heard the news about Christley and Phillips of our delegation? Christley has come out and declared he will vote for Roosevelt on the first ballot. So will Phillips. As to Lewis Emery, that double-dyed son of a sea cook, he says he's going to vote for Taft, and he is sticking by his determination in spite of the fact that Frank Hitchcock went to him and pleaded with him to vote for Knox on the first ballot. Hitchcock told him he wanted the Pennsylvania delegation to vote solidly for the favorite son of the state. 'No,' replied Emery, 'I can't do it. There are 200,000 people in my district and they want Taft. I'm not going to use that "short and ugly word," no, sir, I won't do it.' But Emery was named as a Knox man, and since his election meetings in every county of his district have declared for Knox."

"Jimmy" Burke, the manager of the Knox movement, breezed along, happy in spite of the adversity which fate has thrust upon him.

"I'm Delegate Sawyer from Iowa," said a citizen, introducing himself to the Knox man. "I want you to know that I listened with the greatest interest to the speech you made at the Marquette club. It was a good speech."

Burke modestly flushed and bowed, almost speechless at the compliment. "Traitor, traitor to the cause," exclaimed District Attorney Kealing of Indianapolis, with that good natured smile which is a constitutional part of his makeup. "Again traitor, traitor. I'm told you said in that speech Pennsylvania would give 500,000 majority to whichever candidate was nominated."

Burke replied quick as a flash.

"True," he said, "but we'd give Knox almost as many more and keep on going some."

Delegate Sawyer, a tall, quiet looking young man, desirous apparently of letting it be known where he stood in order that he might not be accused of false pretenses, interjected.

"You know I'm for Taft."

"Yes, I know you are instructed for Taft," Burke replied. "But there's one thing you delegates have got to decide. You must say whether you will tamely submit to dictation from a point a thousand miles away. You must——"

His voice was drowned in the music of a band which was marching up the street, heading the Americus club of Pittsburg and the Pennsylvania Knox club of Philadelphia. Everybody rushed out on the pavement. When the parade passed the Auditorium Annex where the Knox headquarters are situated, the club members loyally dipped the red, white, and blue parasols which they carried, and twirled them in quite an effective manner. It was a pretty sight, and the sun beamed upon it as if it, too, were enjoying the spectacle. The music became fainter and fainter, and then the parade turned and the tune entered upon a crescendo scale that almost deafened the men and women who were waiting for another sight of the Knoxites. In front of the hotel the parade stopped, and the band rendered "God Save the King." Not a cheer for Knox had been heard. Suddenly some one threw up his hat.

"Three cheers for 'Jimmy' Burke," he yelled.

They were given with a will. Then the parade passed on.

Senator Hemenway, one of the Fairbanks boomers, and Gov. Hanly of Indiana were standing in the midst of the turmoil trying to evolve some comfort out of the situation for the vice president. The expression on their faces showed the crowd they were having a hard time getting it. A photographer approached Hanly.

"Governor," he said, "I'd like to take your photo."

"All right," pleasantly responded the Indiana chief executive. "Where'll we go?"

"Hold on, governor," asked the photographer. "We'd like to have Senator Hemenway in the picture with you."

"I have had my picture taken with all sorts of fellows," laughed Hemenway, "and I guess I can even stand you, Hanly."

Senator Flint of California watched Hemenway disappear through the crowd. There's no more likable man in the whole convention than is Flint. Moreover, he is one of the best appearing men, both in his looks and in the way he wears his clothes. While he was probably speculating upon the vanity of human nature, the crowd was putting him under its microscope and listening to what he was saying to a friend.

"Everybody in the east got us all wrong," he said. "Why, from the beginning we were for Taft. Now the convention is going to do the right thing. Taft's all right and he'll make a good campaign."

You turned from this which you had heard so often before to see Senator Dick, with a black slouch hat over his long gray hair, threading his way toward Flint. The Ohioan was listening as he walked to a man from Michigan, who was saying that it was a shame that one of the senators was not to be selected to represent Ohio upon the state committee. Dick maintained a discreet silence. The man became more vigorous in his language. Then the senator suggested dryly: "To the victor belong the spoils." He laughed quietly.

This much should be said for Dick: Since he has been in Chicago he has adopted an attitude of acceptance of the situation. He has not added a drop of vitriol. He is a republican and a stanch one before anything else. He has stated time and time again that it is well enough for a republican to fight as vigorously as he pleases before the convention, but when the convention makes the nomination, then it is the duty of every party man to put his shoulder to the wheel and help to elect the ticket. It is certain, therefore, that immediately after the convention Dick will declare for Taft, if he be the nominee, as seems certain, and will work with might and main to insure party success.

Near Dick as he stopped alongside of Flint was Bishop Walters of the American Methodist Episcopal church, who has been one of the strong negro opponents of the nomination of the secretary of war and who is here in the interest of the vice presidential aspirations of ex-Gov. Murphy of New Jersey. Walters is a tall negro, wearing the bishop's garb and a high hat.

"What we want," he was saying, "is some one on the ticket that will especially appeal to the people of my race. No, we're not saying anything against Taft. Support him? I am confident it will be easier for us to do so if a friend of the colored voters like Murphy be put upon the ticket. Has he any chance in your judgment?"

You answered him, perhaps, that it looked like Dolliver, and then you heard a snort of disgust behind you. It came from a delegate wearing an Iowa badge.

"Dolliver," the man exclaimed. "I tell you, it'll hurt the republican party like Sam Hill to put Dolliver on. Think what it may mean—two democratic senators, I tell you, two! The anti-Cumminites won't support the governor's candidacy for the senate. They're too sore the way he went after Allison's seat. I don't believe our delegation will back up Dolliver. Now New York ought to have it. There's 'Jim' Sherman. What's the matter with him?"

Sherman happened to be passing at this moment, a man of medium size, well built, with smooth face, and wearing glasses. "What are you looking for?" a friend asked him. "The Sherman boom," he laughingly replied, "and it's so small I can't find it." This was modesty. Be sure of that. Every congressman in town is wearing a "Jim" Sherman button. They like the New York congressman and they are doing earnest missionary work for him. The Sherman buttons appear in the most unexpected places, upon the coat lapel of a Californian, the breast of a southerner, and the vest of a Pennsylvanian. Representative Sereno Payne of New York is heartily for the vice presidential nomination for his colleague, but he isn't talking out loud about it.

"What's the news?" he was asked.

"Lean over and I'll tell you something in great confidence," he replied. Then, impressively, in a whisper:

"It looks to me like Taft for first place."

You straighten up to find yourself face to face with Senator Depew, with hair snow white, but fairly erect and keenly observant in spite of his age. You idly suggest to a bystander wearing a New York badge that you would like to hear Depew speak.

"I heard him second McKinley's nomination at Philadelphia in 1900," he replies. "So many seconding speeches had been made that the crowd had grown tired, so when the governor of Indiana started to laud the president the convention applauded vigorously at every stop. Finally the convention was in an uproar and all you could see was the governor making motions with his mouth and wildly gesticulating. Not a word could you catch. Finally he was pulled off, and Depew mounted the platform. The hall became quiet. After two or three minutes the speaker indicated he was about to close. "Go on, go on," cried the convention.

"Why," responded Chauncey with a bland smile. "I thought you were tired."

"O, no, not of you, not of you."

"And it is such episodes as that," concluded the raconteur, "that cause the senator to feel good whenever he attends a convention. Nobody every gets tired of hearing him speak."

CITY BLOOMS IN EXPECTANCY

Chicago Dons Garb of Red, White and Blue for Convention.

COLISEUM IS IN READINESS.

Tunnels Under Seats and Emergency Hospital Are Features.

Chicago blossomed out yesterday, blossomed like the—no, not like the rose, but rather like a combination of the Fourth of July, an electric show, and an advertising exhibition. All through the loop districts flags fluttered above streets lined with red, white, and blue bunting, and innumerable portraits of innumerable candidates hid theater posters and merchandise in store windows. At night incandescent and arc lights placed wherever a light would go illuminated the throngs of visitors promenading between the hotels, the theaters, and the restaurants; and on Michigan avenue great electrical signs glared out their presidential booms across the wastes of Grant park.

The flags and bunting with which the hotels were decked a few days ago have been almost hidden since the advent of the politicians by thousands of notices and political advertising. Only one place seems as yet untouched by the turmoil of the convention and that is the place in which the convention is to be held, the Coliseum.

Coliseum Ready for Battle.

The Coliseum is all ready for the battle for the highest offices in the gift of the nation, and it looks fit ground for such a conflict. The 12,000 chairs are all in place, each one carefully numbered and securely nailed in place. The press, the delegates, the alternates, and the speakers' sections are neatly railed off, and broad aisles lead to every part of the hall. Every inch of space has been utilized, but there is no crowding.

Broad strips of blue and white bunting, caught up with red rosettes, hide the front of the balcony, and at each end of each of the twelve steel arches that span the building seven huge American flags are draped.

Back of the speaker's stand, at the south end of the hall, are shields and other clusters of flags, and at each end of the hall eagles, perched high in the girders, with their wings spread to a width of about twelve feet, look down on the convention floor.

Several tunnnels lead from the press section, the speaker's stand, and the convention floor under the tier of seats to the Coliseum Annex, where one hundred and one features are located behind the scenes of the big show.

There are assembly halls for the pages, sergeants at arms, doorkeepers, messengers, and ushers; there are rows of telephones and large spaces set aside for the army of telegraphers that the Western Union and Postal Telegraph companies will have on hand. There are committee rooms, offices, reception rooms, smoking rooms, and a cozy, tastefully decorated retiring room for the ladies.

Hospital for Emergencies.

Last but not least, there is an emergency hospital, fully equipped, with two wards, four beds, an operating table, invalid chairs, two women and four men nurses, and a staff of forty-eight physicians. Most of the physicians are merely honorary members of the hospital staff, but they are all subject to call in case of need.

The house is divided into sections, each one equipped with a doctor, two orderlies, and a stretcher. By means of an electric light arrangement above the speaker's stand a physician may be called at any time from the floor of the convention to the hospital, even though the noise of the moment might prevent the leather lunged announcer making himself heard. The hospital is in charge of Dr. George C. Hunt, chief of the city health department's ambulance service.

The most unenviable position in the convention is that occupied by the band, which is swung on an aerial platform among the girders in the northern part of the hall. There is said to be communication with terra firma by way of a stairway hidden by the bunting, but a casual investigator would think nothing short of a flying machine could land the musicians on their perch. A buzzer at the chairman's table enables him to control their playing.

BEAUTY SQUAD GIVEN DRILL

Chief Shippy and Assistant Lead 200 Policemen to Coliseum.

EACH MAN TAKES HIS POST.

Detectives from Other Cities Arrive Today to Hunt Thieves.

Chief of Police George Shippy and Assistant Chief of Police Herman Schuettler, resplendent in new uniforms and stunning white leather service caps, descended upon the Coliseum yesterday afternoon at the head of over 200 of Chicago's "finest." They were bringing the famous "beauty squad" to the scene of the convention to drill them in their duties for the week.

Each man was given a post, and then all were assembled at the north end of the building. At the word of command they scattered to their places in a snappy military way which brought enthusiastic praise to the lips of their chief.

"There's not a finer body of policemen in the world," said Assistant Chief Schuettler. "I'd back them to drill against any similar body in the country. I'm proud of them."

The men will be under command of Capt. Stephen B. Wood, Drillmaster John Bauden, and Lieuts. J. B. Enright, James L. Mooney, A. M. White, and W. P. O'Brien.

In order to see that everything goes smoothly, however, both Chief Shippy and Assistant Chief Schuettler will visit the Coliseum at frequent intervals.

Ten detectives from outside cities will report to Capt. O'Brien this morning to assist the local police in arresting well known criminals during the convention. The detectives will come from Detroit, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Baltimore, Buffalo, New York City, Washington, Milwaukee, and St. Louis. The detectives will be assigned to various hotels.

GIVE DINNER FOR VISITORS.

Chicago Committeemen Entertain Members of National Organization at South Shore Club.

The national convention committee on arrangements, of which Fred W. Upham is chairman, gave a dinner and reception yesterday afternon at the South Shore Country club to the members of the national committee and other republican leaders who are in Chicago to attend the big political gathering. Among those present in addition to the committeemen were Charles P. Taft, Henry Taft, Frank H. Hitchcock, ex-Gov. Franklin Murphy of New Jersey, John Hays Hammond, Samuel B. Raymond, James Simpson, Frank Pietsch, and Edward Mayer.

NEGROES IN FURY, TALK VIOLENTLY.

Threats to Organize Ku Klux Klan to Scare Colored Supporters of Taft.

HINT AT SPILLING BLOOD.

"Great Ship of Republicanism Must Be Scuttled," One Angry Orator Cries.

Comedy, which has played a strong part in every previous meeting held by the disgruntled southern delegates who were unseated by the national committee, was banished from the council of war in the Bethel African Methodist church yesterday afternon.

Orators who during last week shouted themselves hoarse in denunciation of the administration and its plans, exhausting the store of expletives for hurling against what they call "tyranny" and "oppression," turned upon those of their own kind whom they found in the opposing camp.

Whether the unveiled threats that were roared with more than a figurative gnashing of ivory teeth were intended merely as "rousers," or whether actual violence against the "traitors" was planned, was more than the audience could determine.

The impression created was that the negroes who have remained faithful to the administration will be subjected to some form of mob attack unless they remain inactive during the convention.

Dr. Cress Sounds War Cry.

The hysterical outburst was started by Dr. Henry C. Cress, a Chicago physician, and while its spirit was carried along by those who followed him it was he who shouted the war cry of black man against black man.

After branding the negro office holders in the southern delegations as "the bread brigade," and declaring that none of them had influence with the race as a whole, he shouted:

"We must mark those men!"

"They are marked," cried some one in the audience.

"They are? Good," the speaker replied. "The men who betray their race must pay the penalty with their lives. We must organize. We must have a Kuklux Klan!"

Howls of approval answered him.

"We are looking for men. If we call you, will you answer?" he asked. "If we call you at midnight, will you come?"

"Yes, I will! I will!" came scattered replies.

"If we call you morning, noon, or night you must come," he continued. "There's only one place worse than this, and if you don't wake up that place will be transferred here. It is here now. You know what Gen. Sherman said about war? This is war.

Hint at Personal Violence.

"Suppose I get killed. I don't care if it will help the cause of the black man's freedom. Do you remember how Moses threw aside his royal ring, forgot his royal foster parents, and struck for the freedom of Israel? Can't you do it?"

Again, near the close of the meeting, Dr. Cressy showed signs of admitting the possibility of violence as the outcome of the present situation.

"We're going to make history tomorrow night," he declared. "Bring every man you can to the meeting. We are going to make a lot of negroes from the saloon districts of the south, who have been brought in here to aid Taft, leave town. We aren't going to drive them out. We'll make them want to leave."

Dr. E. L. Gillam, a Methodist preacher of Cleveland, after denouncing the "unrighteous course of the nation," declared that "extraordinary conditions require extraordinary measures," and that the present condition is "unparalleled in the history of the country." He expressed a desire to stand on a mountain peak and in a clarion voice gather around him the friends of the black man for the organization of a new party.

Would Scuttle Republican Ship.

W. F. Henderson of Indianapolis declared that "the great ship of republicanism must be scuttled." He held that this action should be preceded by a warning to the convention that the "pirates" in charge of the convention must not nominate Taft.

Dr. J. Milton Waldron of Washington, D. C., followed this with a promise that if the negro vote couldn't be "jumped all at once to the democracy a bridge would be built so that the gap would be crossed in two jumps."

"We're fighting against national disfranchisement right now," he cried. "They may have us down, but they haven't got us tied. I may be down on the ground, but they won't tie me. I'll bite, and kick, and scratch until I die. Blood may flow, but I'll not permit them to rob me of my rights."

ROOSEVELT 'BOOM' APPEARS AT LAST.

T. W. Phillips, Delegate at Large from Pennsylvania, Tells of Stampede.

HOLD CONFERENCE TODAY

Supporters of Movement Ordered to Meet and Arrange for Fast Fight.

Former Congressman Thomas W. Phillips, delegate at large from Pennsylvania, who hails from New Castle, made the rounds of the hotels yesterday shouting for Roosevelt. He declared that he would vote for the president on the first ballot and also on the last and all between. He said that some of the delegates from the Keystone state would also support his candidate and predicted that the result of the first ballot would be a surprise.

Mr. Phillips was accompanied by Ben Wells, editor of the New Castle News. When Mr. Wells wrote to his paper that "the long expected and much discussed eleventh hour movement for the renomination of President Roosevelt had set in," Mr. Phillips declared that he was exactly right.

Everybody smiled when Mr. Phillips tried to make them take the boom seriously, but his declarations disturbed no one except the wearers of the long Knox banners.

Plans Made at Dinner.

It was all decided at a dinner given at the Hotel Metropole last Saturday night by the ex-congressman. Neither Mr. Phillips nor Mr. Wells would tell who were present, but the editor said, and Mr. Phillips admitted it, to be true, that he (Mr. Phillips) had agreed to take the leadership in the movement.

"I certainly will vote for President Roosevelt, and I think there will be many others," said Mr. Phillips.

"How many will he get altogether?"

"Well, I have no idea," Mr. Phillips replied. "You hear talk of 200, but I have by means of knowing whether this is correct or not—it may be. But anything Mr. Wells says is all right."

Mr. Wells' Story.

And this is a part of the story Mr. Wells sent to his newspaper:

"At a dinner at the Hotel Metropole Saturday evening Mr. Phillips was prevailed upon to assume the leadership of the movement. Senator Bourne of Oregon and former Representative W. F. Aldrich of Alabama, both of whom have declared there is too much Roosevelt sentiment for the convention to accept the president's declination, are expected to prove powerful factors.

"It is this condition that makes the leadership and organization necessary. Mr. Phillips last night expressed the fear that the movement would bring another declaration from the president.

"On Monday there will be a conference which will be open to all who are known to be willing to cast their first vote for Roosevelt, and who will work to influence others to do so in order to carry the convention further than the first ballot.

Gentleman Is an Optimist.

"It is predicted that many local leaders will work for the nomination of Roosevelt for in him, it is said, lies the only assurance of easy victory in November for the entire ticket from the federal head down to ward committeemen.

"Mr. Phillips is credited more especially at Washington with being the originator of the idea that resulted in placing the 'big stick' in the hands of the president. While in congress he fathered the bill that established the industrial commission. He was vice chairman and presided over the major portion of the commission's deliberations. As presiding officer he brought in a special report at the conclusion of the investigation, and that report is said to have been used almost verbatim by Congressman Sulzer in his bill creating the bureau of corporations which makes it possible for the president to regulate railroads and to investigate other monopolistic interests.

"The Roosevelt boom will be given the assistance of the campaign managers of congressmen and governors from certain states who are in doubt as to the outcome of their local contests this fall if Taft is the nominee."

Supporter, but Has No Vote.

Another supporter of Roosevelt was found among the Knox people. He is J. E. Hagey of Henrietta, Pa. The only trouble is that he is only an alternate, and probably will have no chance to vote, but last night he declared his belief that the convention will be stampeded for Roosevelt. Mr. Hagey is stopping at the Sherman house.

He said that he was here to boost Knox and that he would follow his instructions until he saw that there was no use in following them any longer, which might, he added, be soon. He refused to speak definitely about the Knox boom until he had had a chance to consult with some of his colleagues.

"I can't see anything in it but Roosevelt," Mr. Hagey declared. "The people want him and the 'allies' do not want Taft. A stampede for Roosevelt is likely to be the result of the convention."

West Virginia Man Talks.

That the Roosevelt movement has assumed a "definite shape" was declared last night by Gen. G. W. Curtin, head of the West Virginia delegation and former commander of the state guard. What the next step would be he said he did not know, but intimated that the movement would be pushed today.

"The fourteen members of the West Virginia delegation have been instructed for Mr. Taft and we are so far down on the list that we cannot well initiate any movement in the convention," said the general yesterday, "but when our turn comes to cast a ballot we will doubtless vote for President Roosevelt if his name has been brought before the convention."

"Only a few of our delegation are in Chicago at present, but I am sure I voice the sentiment of all of them when I say I hope to see Roosevelt serve another term. I do not know just what action the 'second elective term' boomers will take tomorrow, but I sincerely hope the movement will carry the convention."

It was stated that on the arrival today of the Georgia and West Virginia delegation "a complete campaign" will be arranged. One of the Georgia delegates, it is said, will bring with him a petition bearing between 60,000 and 70,000 signatures from men in the south urging that President Roosevelt accept a second elective term.

The entire move is said by the men active participating to be favored by the "allies" who believe that no nomination will be made on the first ballot. It is said by others to be pushed merely for the sake of making trouble.

Roosevelt's "No" Is Ready.

The Roosevelt boomers heard that Senator Lodge had a letter from President Roosevelt designed to meet the exact situation they are planning to bring about. It is said that president in this letter, which is to be used if needed, reiterates his absolute "no" to any proposition to make him a candidate.

Alonzo E. Wilson Declares Both Political Parties Will Ignore Temperance Question.

Alonzo E. Wilson, chairman of the Illinois prohibition state committee, yesterday declared that a conspiracy seems to exist between the two leading national parties to ignore the liquor question in their platforms.

"The interview with William J. Bryan," said Mr. Wilson, "published in many papers throughout the country on June 12, declares he 'do not expect it (prohibition) to be made an issue by either the republican or the democratic national conventions.'

"Mr. Bryan says he has received many letters on this subject and has answered them all the same way.

"It appears that there is an understanding between the two leading national parties to ignore this question which has forced itself to the front in American politics and that Mr. Bryan is aware of this fact."

Pre-Convention Scenes, Sketched in Hotel Lobbies and Headquarters

The Boom Boosters and Delegates at the Auditorium Annex Begin to Show Signs of Fatigue But no Lack of Enthusiasm

ASKS MILD SUFFRAGE PLANK

Conservative Wing of Illinois Suffragists Defeats Radicals.

NO FORMAL VOTE TAKEN.

"Extension of Elective Franchise to Women" Form of Demand.

The conservative wing has triumphed among the Illinois woman's suffragists—so far, at least, as the republican national convention is concerned.

Make this statement to a constituent of said wing and she will look at you blankly.

"Conservative?" she will say, probably. "Why—er—we try to be as moderate in our demands as we can, under the circumstances. That, we feel, is the part of wisdom. But there aren't any factions among those of us who want the ballot, you know. We are all working together, really!"

Then, after you have turned away, there will be a sharp little glance at your retreating figure, and just a suspicion—not more than that—of a triumphant smile.

"We got our resolution, anyway," the constituent will murmur. But you won't hear her.

This, however, is the situation. After a month or more of discussion, carried on quietly, but none the less energetically, the women who are to go before the republican resolutions committee this week have decided not to ask for indorsement of a constitutional amendment, an act of congress, or anything that will give American women the ballot all at once.

Many Want to Ask More.

Not that they wanted to ask for that sort of thing. But there are women in the state—hundreds of them—who wanted them to and for a long time there was doubt as to just what sort of a suffrage plank would be asked for anyway. The question never came to a formal vote. At a meeting held ten days ago at the Chicago Woman's club Mrs. Charles Henrotin, chairman of the "platform committee," read a resolution favoring "the extension of the elective franchise to the women of the United States by the states"—a thing which already has happened in Wyoming, Colorado, Idaho, and Utah.

"Now," she said, "we can't vote on this for we are not really an organized body, but I thought you would like to hear it. What is the next order of business?"

So there it was. Those that wanted a more vigorous sort of resolution have been thinking it over during the last week. They have seen just one thing to do and they have done it. If a waitress said "Apple or mince. We're all out of mince. Which'll you have?" what would you do?

After all, the constituents of the conservative wing will be right. They are all working together—really.

Doing a Little Lobbying.

They are doing a little lobbying, too. Not insistently or obstreperously, but tactfully—as is fitting under the circumstances—several members of the committee have been discussing the matter with the delegates and trying to find out if there isn't some kind of a chance. The way was paved several weeks ago by a circular letter which was sent to all the delegates, calling their attention to the general advance of woman's suffrage within the last few years, and since that time personal letters have been written by the hundred.

The strongest argument, however, from the suffragists' standpoint, will be the receptions at the Chicago Woman's clubrooms. The women believe that the convention is an auspicious occasion, for have not both President Roosevelt and Secretary Taft expressed themselves emphatically as in favor of woman's suffrage? They have, and in doing the honors to the men who will nominate Taft no pains are to be spared.

Woman's Club Receptions.

For weeks the committee of 100 women which has the receptions in charge has been preparing for the event. Late last week the Woman's club rooms were transformed into what might be called a series of patriotic bowers by a lavish use of flags, bunting, and the like. The hundred women have been divided into three subcommittees, each to have charge of things on one of the three opening days of the convention.

From 10 to 6 each day the women will keep "open house" at the clubrooms to delegates, visiting women, and every one who wants to drop in. Tuesday afternoon, from 4 to 6, there will be a reception in honor of the two woman alternates (there are no woman delegates), Mrs. Susa Young Gates, a daughter of Brigham Young, and Mrs. Lucy A. Clark—both from Utah. Mrs. Gates and Mrs. Clark are expected to arrive at the Grand Pacific this morning.

On Wednesday, at the same hours, the wives of judges and state officials will be the guests of honor, and on Thursday there will be a general reception to the delegates and their wives and daughters. At this general reception Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth is expected to be a conspicuous figure.

Mrs. F. K. Tracy in General Charge.

Mrs. F. K. Tracy is in general charge of the reception arrangements. The Tuesday affair will be under the special direction of Mrs. William Frederick Grower, Mrs. F. A. Lorenz will have charge on Wednesday, and on Thursday Mrs. Eugene Wheeler will direct things. The receiving line on each day will be headed by Mrs. Henrotin, Mrs. Charles S. Deneen, and Miss Jane Addams, and there will be programs of music and readings.

The committee which will present the suffrage resolution to the resolutions committee includes, besides Mrs. Henrotin, Mrs. I. S. Blackwelder, Miss Jane Addams, Mrs. Stanton Balch of New York, the Rev. Caroline Bartlett Crane of Michigan, and Miss Harriet Grim of the University of Chicago.

'NO COMPROMISE,' SAYS LABOR

National Leaders to Urge Strong Planks in G. O. P. Platform.

RUMORS OF SPLIT DENIED.

President Gompers Says Federation Council Stan s Together.

National labor leaders in Chicago to demand recognition of their demands in the republican platform have determined upon a policy of "no compromise" with the resolutions committee of the convention. This decision is with reference to the incorporation of an anti-injunction plank a declaration against holding labor organizations liable under the Sherman anti-trust law, and a demand for an elective federal judiciary.

Any sort of a compromise on these questions, the labor chiefs contend, would render the labor plank valueless so far as the workingmen are concerned. This much has been decided in the sessions of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor in progress at the Kaiserhof hotel.

A brief session of the council was held yesterday morning and labor's political program was the principal subject discussed. Just what form the labor plank now being prepared will take is guarded with the utmost secrecy by President Samuel Gompers and his colleagues.

Refuses to Discuss Plank.

President Gompers was equally reticent when asked to state when the labor plank would be ready for presentation to the resolutions committee.

"I cannot say when we shall be ready to go before the resolutions committee," said Mr. Gompers. "We still have a lot of work to do."

It is probable, however, that today's meeting of the labor council will see the finishing touches put on the plank, and that negotiations will be opened by the labor leaders with the members of the resolutions committee for a date on which to present labor's demands.

"What will be the form of your demands?" Mr. Gompers was asked.

"I cannot discuss that subject at this time," he answered. "It would be a violation of ethics to give the matter to the public before first presenting our demands to the committee on resolutions. That is a plain duty we owe the members of the committee."

"Will there be anything said about confidence in the courts, in connection with any possible anti-injunction declaration?"

"I have nothing to say about that now, except that we have not lost confidence in the courts. We still have faith in the judicial tribunals."

Rumors of Split Denied.

A rumor gained currency among labor men gathered in the rotunda of the Kaiserhof that a split over the form of the labor plank had occurred among the members of the council. The rumor was denied emphatically by President Gompers and later John Mitchell, former president of the United Mine Workers and candidate for the democratic nomination for governor of Illinois, said every session so far had been marked by the "utmost harmony."

President Gompers and a group of labor leaders went out in an automobile in the afternoon, returning to the hotel for dinner. Mr. Gompers is still suffering from an infection of the right leg, caused by a slight injury sustained several weeks ago. Dr. C. Pruyn Stringfield, who is attending him, said the injury is not serious.

Mitchell Talks of Candidacy.

Mr. Mitchell spent most of the day in the hotel lobby conferring with friends about his candidacy. He held a long conference with Samuel J. Drew of Joliet, formerly a "labor member" of the Illinois legislature, who is a candidate for the republican nomination for lieutenant governor.

Mr. Drew and Mr. Mitchell worked side by side in the coal mines at Braidwood in their youth, and the two are lifelong friends. Mr. Drew is the author of a number of Illinois labor laws and believes his "labor record" in the legislature will give him strong trades unionist support at the republican primaries.

PLATFORM PLANK BY A GIRL

Miss Zoe Akins Has a Plan, Intended to Uplift Negro Race.

WRITES TO TAFT ABOUT IT.

Suggests Emigration of Colored People to the Philippines.

Miss Zoe Akins, 21, pretty, a playwright, a sociologist, fond of society—especially dancing—daughter of Missouri's member of the national committee, brought a plank for the platform to Chicago yesterday. The plank interested the Missouri delegates, and they talked about it and told how well Miss Akins could talk about it.

Miss Akins has a scheme for the uplift of the negro race, and it probably will be presented to the platform committee when it meets Tuesday afternoon. She is much interested in the question of the negro race. She has seen negroes in the cotton fields of Mississippi and Louisiana, where she has visited, and she has known them as servants in her father's home and in the homes of her friends in St. Louis.

"There is no such thing as racial equality for the negro in the United States, there never will be, and the quicker they get it out of their heads the better," said Miss Akins at the Grand Pacific hotel last night. "I believe, however, the race is not wholly without a destiny. Just as the Greeks, the Romans, the Carthagenians became the greatest peoples in the world of industry, art, and science after they obtained material advancement and became the owners of vast lands, so can the negroes get to the acme of their development.

For Colony in the Philippines.

"In the Philippine islands are hundreds of thousands of acres of virgin forest waiting for the ring of the ax and the advance of civilization. These lands belong to the government and the government may dispose of them as it sees fit.

"My plan is to establish an emigration bureau at Washington, fitted to explain the advantages of life in the islands to the negroes, and then for the government to send worthy heads of families there to take possession of homesteads on sixty or eighty acre tracts, where they will be members of a community of interest and given, with this bounty of material wealth, a chance to develop themselves in the lines of education and industry.

"By no means must it be supposed that this will be a deportation scheme. The negro without ambition is a thing of value to the south, and he is not the kind we would want in the Philippines. It is only the negro who has proved his worth, who can take care of himself in the wilderness, that the government would transport to the Philippines, and the worthless and the criminal would be shunned."

Miss Akins has not worked out the various minor details of her scheme. She has studied it at length and applied the principles of government to it and has convinced many who have heard her of its feasibility.

She is said to have written a letter to Secretary Taft on the subject, but she wouldn't discuss it, neither would she say whether she would seek to appear in person before the committee on resolutions.

Play to Be Produced Next Fall.

Miss Akins isn't even a believer in woman suffrage.

"I don't believe the women want to vote anyhow," she said. "They know the men wouldn't approve of it, and what's a woman worth who really doesn't strive to please the men? I don't want to vote—but I do like to dance."

She is to have a play produced in New York next fall. It is to be called "The Voice," and probably will be dedicated to Olga Nethersole. Miss Akins says she fell in love with Miss Nethersole's voice, but could never get used to her appearance.

"I started out to write a play for a woman with a beautiful voice—a heroine who should never be seen on the stage—and my opera is the result," she said.

WHITE HOUSE TELEGRAPHER WILL HAVE THE BEST SEAT.

Choicest Place in Hall to Be Occupied by Man at This End of Wire to Roosevelt.

The choicest seat in the whole Coliseum, the one in the corner of the press section nearest to the speakers' stand, immediately at the right of the chairman, is to be occupied by a telegraph operator, who will have direct communication with the White house.

Every word uttered will be flashed over the wires as soon as spoken to President Roosevelt.

Thus, if any speaker, by some remarkable effort of oratory, changes the even, prearranged course of events the master mind of the administration faction, hundreds of miles away in Washington, can formulate a defense and instruct his lieutenants before the orator has taken his seat.

TICKET HOLDERS ALONE ADMITTED

Political Pulls with the Doorkeepers at the Convention Hall Are Barred.

PLACES POLICE ON WATCH

Col. W. T. Stone, Sergeant at Arms, Assigns Detectives to Stop Collusion.

If there are any persons who imagine they can get a glimpse of the convention through personal pull with an assistant sergeant at arms or a doorkeeper they are going to be disappointed. Only persons with tickets will be admitted, and the precautions that are to be taken to prevent "crawling under the canvas" are the product of experience in former conventions.

Col. William F. Stone of Maryland, the sergeant at arms of the convention, had a meeting at the Coliseum yesterday of his assistants, the doorkeepers, pages, and messengers. There he issued credentials and laid down the law on the duties of his subordinates during the sessions of the convention.

Doorkeepers Take Tickets.

The assistant sergeants at arms will not be allowed to take tickets at the doors. This function will be discharged exclusively by the doorkeepers—two at each entrance, and no two from the same state will be assigned to the same entrance. Each doorkeeper will watch to see that the other doorkeeper admits only persons with tickets. In addition there will be a large force of secret service men on watch to see that there is no collusion between the doorkeepers to admit persons without tickets.

Every assistant sergeant at arms and doorkeeper is a republican politician, of course, and he has his personal friends who expect to walk into the convention without tickets, according to the custom of other years. Time was when a sergeant at arms who couldn't get the boys of his precinct in without tickets was no longer entitled to the respect due to a political pull. But this practice doesn't go this time, according to Col Stone.

Clerks Are Instructed.

General Secretary Malley, the man with the voice, also held a meeting of his seven assistant secretaries, four reading clerks, and four tally clerks, whom he instructed in their duties.

At the close of these conferences it was announced that the machinery of the convention was in perfect working order.

Temporary Chairman Burrows and Permanent Chairman Lodge will be guided in parliamentary procedure and decisions by Asher C. Hinds, the parliamentary expert, who for many years has performed this duty for the speaker of the house of representatives.

These are gentlemen's clothes, made for gentlemen and will be sold to gentlemen.

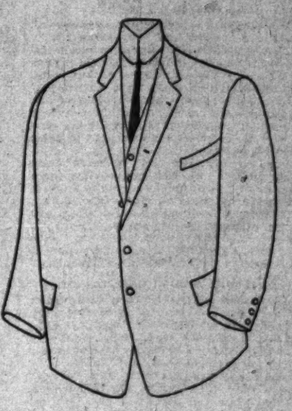

We aren't interested in "fripperies." Our designers believe in the refined lines rather than in vulgarisms. The men who patronize this shop wouldn't have "freaks" even if we offered them.

This is the young men's shop of Chicago. We have the models like those worn by men on the campus at New Haven, Ann Arbor, and Cambridge, at the University and at the Union Clubs. For the older men we have the same models, but toned a little for maturity.

Solid business men patronize this shop.

Every garment offered by us is made of materials either imported or manufactured especially for us. The cloth is made into suits in tailor shops in New York City. The designs are by our own people.

There is an individuality in every garment sold in this shop which at once stamps it as elegant and indicates that the wearer has taste in the selection of his garments—that he patronized a first-class shop.

Every suit and overcoat has sewed in the inside pocket a guaranty on which it is stated that if the clothes are not satisfactory you may bring them back. Your money will be returned, or you will be given another suit, as you designate. It makes no difference whether you have worn the suit or not. If you are not satisfied it may be returned.

49 JACKSON BOULEVARD

IOWA MEN WOULD "SAVE" DOLLIVER.

His Nomination for Vice President, They Say, Means Strife in Their State.

PLEA TO TAFT MANAGERS

Senator Borah Intimates That Fairbanks Might Accept Second Place Again.

When the Iowa delegation got its bearings in its headquarters in the Annex George D. Perkins of Sioux City, one of the delegates at large, started out to find Wade Ellis, Arthur I. Vorys, and Frank H. Hitchcock to "save" Senator Jonathan P. Dolliver from the vice presidency.

He found Mr. Vorys and still is looking for Mr. Ellis and Mr. Hitchcock. To the one Taft manager whom he found he said it was a poor requital for the work which had been done in Iowa for the secretary of war that the state should be dragged into the worst political condition it ever imagined as a possibility.

He was reinforced in his anti-vice presidency efforts by another message from the junior Iowa senator, brought here by M. D. O'Connell, a solicitor of the treasury department, who had talked with Dolliver in his home town. The message was an urgent request that Iowa do everything in its power to keep him off the ticket.

Mr. Perkins reminded the Taft men that when the Iowa state convention was held on March 18 instructions for the secretary of war were needed in the west and the Iowa republicans, in spite of the reluctance of some of the Allison people, gave them to the Ohio candidate.

Vorys Offers No Comfort.

"It isn't fair," said Perkins to Vorys, "to repay the state in this way. Mr. Dolliver feels and we all feel that it is not necessary for him to take a place on the ticket. He can do just as effective work for the party if he isn't nominated and probably more effective work than he could as a candidate. His work in the Allison campaign showed this. It isn't a fair deal to him, to say nothing of the state, to retire him into the vice presidency. He wants to remain in the senate. He doesn't want to be vice president and Iowa doesn't want another senatorial fight right on the heels of the Allison-Cummins contest."

Mr. Vorys was sympathetic but helpless, and Mr. Perkins is looking for Wade Ellis, with whom he worked in the Iowa campaign for Taft. He thinks Ellis ought to have some personal sense of obligation which would lead him to throw his influence in the Taft councils against the naming of Dolliver for second place.

Situation Is Embarrassing.

Of the twenty-six Iowa delegates, eight are Cummins men and they are the original Dolliver boomers. The situation is embarrassing enough to the delegation already with Dolliver merely threatened with the nomination. Whenever the anti-Cummins republicans get out in the open to "save" Dolliver they have the pleasant sensation attending realization of the fact that they are making the Cummins republicans peevish.

If Mr. Dolliver should be nominated, Cummins probably could get the vacancy in the senate, or at least could make another interesting fight for it, and the Cummins men feel that the Allison men are blocking this magnificent opportunity by blocking the Dolliver movement.

For the purposes of the vice presidency the majority in the Iowa delegation is willing to break away from the Taft majority in the convention and line up with Fairbanks, Congressman Sherman of New York, or with any other candidate on whom the "allies" may unite.

Dolliver Expected Here Today.

Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, arriving last night from Washington, announced that Senator Dolliver himself would be present at a conference to be held today with Hitchcock and other Taft managers and representatives of Hughes and Fairbanks. He said he had had a conference with President Roosevelt and Secretary Taft before coming on to Chicago.

"The vice presidential situation is gradually coming to rest with three men under consideration," he said. "Cortelyou is out of it. It would never do to take two cabinet officers for the head of the ticket. Murphy, Hammond, and the others have their following, but their chances are slim. Vice President Fairbanks is the likely nominee and the other two who may be considered are Gov. Hughes and Senator Dolliver.

"To simmer the matter down to a basis of fact, Gov. Hughes says he will not accept second place and that he will not withdraw as a candidate for president. He will be given his final chance to get in the vice presidential race tomorrow. If he continues to insist that he cannot withdraw from the major contest and to insist that he will not accept the vice presidency he will be dropped by his friends.

Iowa Still in a Turmoil.

"Senator Dolliver is the choice of the president and Secretary Taft, but conditions in Iowa make it dangerous for him to accept the place. He was affiliated with the Iowa faction which has just won a great victory in his state and matters are in a turmoil there yet. It would be dangerous, and Mr. Dolliver has told the president as much, for him to accept the nomination and leave a gap in the senate to fill for which another fight in Iowa would be provoked.

"If by any chance Senator Allison's health should make his retirement necessary there might be two places in the senate to fill from Iowa and a bad situation would be created.

"If it could be proved that no disastrous results would follow his nomination for the vice presidency he might be moved to accept it. If this cannot be shown then the nomination will be in the hands of Mr. Fairbanks.

Fairbanks a Good Campaigner.

"Fairbanks has made an ideal presiding officer in the senate. He is a good campaigner. He is fitted for the higher office and would make a safe, sound, and sane president if that office should become vacant during the term of President Taft."

Some of the members of the New York delegation, who are more for Sherman for vice president than they are for Hughes for president, are renewing their efforts to get a release from instructions from Gov. Hughes. Such efforts were made by the delegates before they came to Chicago, but without result, the governor's telegram to Congressman Littauer expressing his sentiments on this point.

Nevertheless further efforts are being made and some of the delegates talk of dropping the governor as a presidential candidate and of throwing their support entirely to Sherman or Tim Woodruff for vice president.

LITTLE STORIES OF THE POLITICIANS "IN OUR MIDST."

"I'm out off from reinforcements; I surrender," the general announced, rising and following the picture man to a spot outside the hotel, where the sun shone.

Within two minutes he was back in his seat.

"My goodness! Where do they all come from?" he ejaculated. "You can't look around at this convention without seeing a platoon of photographers bearing down on you. The only thing that compares with keeping track of them is the job of keeping track of board in this place.

"There's so much that's 20 cents straight and mighty little that's two for a quarter.

"When it's a choice between politics and baseball, it's baseball every time for me. Going to the game? Yes, sir. Wouldn't think of missing it.

"When I was backing the 'Brotherhood' I used to have to go in the back door to escape photographers. And here come some more of 'em."

OW come the "boiled shirt" delegates from the rural districts of these United States. To those of them who have lived fifty-two weeks of each of the last four years on a farm, with weekly visits to the county seat as the only break in the monotony, "vanity walk" in the Auditorium Annex is a revelation. The shining ones with bisque faces and tan veils who speck the giddy throng exercise a care dissipating influence upon the politicians whose stiff white shirt fronts stick out like inclined toboggan slides because of the absence of vests.

"Some of these wimmin look just like the figgers in the milliner's window back home," was the audible reflection of a Kansas delegate. "They don't look any more real, 'ceptin' that they can walk. Some on 'em have such starry blue eyes one might take 'em to be glass. And the dresses these wimmin wear must have cost a heap.

"What d'ye 'spose it'd cost fellers like you an' me to support a wife like one of these wimmin, John?"

John didn't know, but he allowed that it would cost a lot.

"Anyway, they look mighty scrumptious," said the first critic, figuring mentally on the probable cost of ostrich feathers and French gowns.

"I 'low the wimmin at home would look a little scared beside 'em," was the opinion of John.

John and his friend may be deacons or something like that, because when a little later they saw some of the women with bisque faces sipping wine in the Pompeian room the good old farmers looked startled and hurried away to their headquarters.

NDICATIVE of the esteem in which Pittsburg millionaires — and others from Pennsylvania — are held in stageland is the presence of chorus girls in fetching frocks in the hall outside the Knox headquarters at the Annex. How can a simple chorus girl overlook a chance to meet a live Pittsburger with quantities of golden discs to buy fizzle water?

It would be unkind to the chorus girl to tell her that the Pittsburgers who are here claim to have an eye single to politics. She wants the excitement of a 100 to 1 shot and for that reason she's apt to remain close to the front rank of the crowd when a Pittsburg marching club is following the band.

They're a wealthy crowd—the Pittsburgers. Among those best able to pay their room rent at the Annex without having to ride back to the smoky city in a day coach with a bag of bananas for sustenance is Thomas W. Phillips, who happens to live in Newcastle, Pa., but is rich enough to be a Pittsburger. His wealth is said to touch the $30,000,000 mark. He's here to "root" for Knox for president.

Charles A. Rook of Pittsburg is another man with money who has come to march. James Elderson of Philadelphia will have money left when he pays his fare back home, and William Connell, the anthracite coal man and banker of Scranton, won't worry about his board bill a bit. Louis Emery of Bradford, the Taft suspect in the delegation from Pennsylvania made his pile while batting against the Standard Oil company. Israel W. Durham, "boss of Philadelphia," who "has money," also is here.

A word in your ears, girls:

Most of 'em are married.

NCE there was a Man named George Ade, who made an Humble Beginning as a Writer. By Hard Work and Constant Industry he Rose to be the Proprietor of a Farm in Indiana, his home State.

For Some Reason that George could not Understand, he became Popular with the Sheriff and the Coroner of his County. He would go down to the Grocery Store in the Village and Swap Stories with them after the Evening Chores were done. The Sheriff and the Coroner would talk to him about Politics and read chapters from Great Statesmen of the Fifties.

They told George that the White House Yawned for him, and that all he Needed was a little Preparation. George said he Didn't believe Them and Thought they were Jollying him. But they Brought Things To A Head by proposing that George take a Course in the Political Kindergarten with the Promise of a Reward of Merit if he Did Well. George Fell for It.

The Neighbors who Thought Well of George Pulled all the Wires they could and got George on the National Delegation. When the Time came George and the Other delegates journeyed to Chicago. They Put Up at the Auditorium Annex. George thought it a Fine Place for Farmers At First. That was Before George Learned that Those who Came Late to the Lobby must Stand Up until their Legs were Tired. That was because Politicians who Came Earlier had all the Best Seats.

When George grew Very Tired a Friend asked him How He Liked Being a Statesman.

"Never Again," were the Words of George. "I am going to the Ball Game, where there May be a Place to Sit Down."

ID Señor Joseph S. Schwartz, Santo Domingo City, D. R., have a good time among the politicians in the lobby of the Annex yesterday? He did.

The reason for the excellent cheer of the señor lay in the fact that most everybody who sees the dark skinned little man with the West Indian hat and clothes, with a big aluminum Taft badge pinned on the front of them, thinks he is a delegate. Not at all; but the señor knows more delegates than do most of the politicians. He is as familiar with the manners and customs of Americans, almost, as if native born.

The fact is that Señor Schwartz is sitting on the fringe of the convention just to have a good laugh and wave his hat when his friend, Mr. Taft, is nominated. When at home he is a mahogany merchant, but now he is a Santo Domingan away from home and having a good time. He came here with the commander in chief of the Cuban army to lend a helping hand and see that the general didn't get lost.

Señor Schwartz just travels amiably from headquarters to headquarters, making new friends and cementing old friendships. His memory for names and faces is so remarkable that he has been suggested as a fit man to pass upon the eligibility of applicants for admission to the convention when they begin to shift the tickets.

"Wonderful are the ladies of this Annex," says Señor Schwartz. "It is worth all the toil of standing up just to see them pass. And your politicians are such big fellows. Why do all American politicians cross their feet?"

"To take up less room," cried the interviewer as he fled.

NLESS all signs fail, there's a good chance for football tactics in the convention when H. E. Cochems, booster of Senator R. M. La Follette for the job of Big Father at Washington, gets busy. Cochems' picture used to be printed in the pink sheets of Sunday newspapers, with a background of waving pansants, and at Madison, Wis., they used to cheer him at students' massmeetings as the great half back. It is recalled that as a football player about eleven years ago Cochems was about the "greatest ever."

It will be up to Cochems to make the "big noise" for the senator from Wisconsin when the time for nominations comes. When Cochems was on the gridiron he made it a practice to butt right through all opposition, and some of his sanguine friends expect great things of him in the field of politics. He is now a lawyer and is said to know as much about oratory as he used to know about football.

Mr. Cochems believes the man of eighteen hour speeches has been selected by Providence to right the wrongs of the masses. He believes Senator La Follette to be the coming emancipator of the American people and perhaps the founder of an Utopian system along republican rather than socialistic lines. For Mr. Cochems, of course, is a stanch republican.

A number of Mr. Cochems' old college chums have framed up a plan for him to be welcomed on the floor of the convention by a great waving of pennants and college yells. The Wisconsin delegates who are not college men are to be initiated into the proposition, and the band is expected to play the universal college anthem, "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight."

OME odd freak of management has operated to make the Taft headquarters at the northeast corner of the parlor floor of the Annex—the most expensive suite of rooms in the hotel—a lonesome place. Only a policeman and a hotel housekeeper have held sway there for the last two days, although the suite is delightfully restful and enticing to the tired politician.

"What are those flags with red rings with white centers on them?" ask visitors.

"Don't know," responds the policeman.

"Where can I get information about——"

"Don't know," answers the housekeeper, anticipating the questioner.

"But surely you must know?"

"Haven't heard a word in the way of explanation," is the reply.

"Funny, isn't it?" say the visitors as they go away.

Across the street, at the Auditorium hotel, the Cannon quarters are filled with all the joy of a merry-go-round. An indefatigable band plays afternoons and evenings, secretaries shake hands with visitors, and women "boomers" of "Uncle Joe" are escorted to comfortable seats under palms, just as "Uncle Joe" would do the courtly, were he here.

Some persons who don't know the Danvillian well were ready yesterday to swear that he was present in the flesh. But it was only an elderly man who looks almost exactly like "Uncle Joe"—a Mr. Souchette of Chicago.

Many delegates from other states used "Uncle Joe's" stationery during the afternoon to write home to their wives, and many more rested in the seats at his quarters.

ADIATING smiles wherever he goes, Congressman J. Adam Bede of Minnesota is one of the wits of the convention.

Adam is a droll little man, who is celebrated for having made a proposition in congress to "sell the Philippine islands and buy Ireland, so we could raise our own policemen." He goes around to the various headquarters of candidates and lets the managers pin on badges, just to relieve any gathering gloom. Then he cracks a few jokes, picks a cigar from an entertainer's vest pocket, and goes off to radiate in another place.

When the funny statesman entered the Cannon headquarters the band struck up "See the Conquering Hero Comes," and Adam immediately assumed that he was meant and went out to thank the band. Congressman McKinley pinned a Cannon badge to Adam's coat lapel and a watchful newspaper artist sprang at the Minnesotan from behind a door.

"Stung!" cried Adam.

"Not so," quoth Congressman McKinley, "but you're going to be drawn, and if the reporters get you you will be quartered."

It was difficult to get the lively one from Minnesota to sit still long enough for the artist to make a faithful representation of his features.

"You look like a man of convictions," said the artist when he had finished the sketch.

"I should say I do—a good many of 'em," acquiesced Adam, looking at the sketch, which accentuated his close cropped head and seamed countenance.

HINKING over the probable cost of campaigning has become a favorite pastime with delegates who are not accustomed to seeing money spent in the lavish way that it is being dispensed in Chicago by the candidates.

"Seems to me the Cannon campaign will cost somebody $100,000," said one of the thoughtful ones.

"I'll bet after it's all over the papers will be printing estimates of how much money was spent in Chicago and what the convention cost. I wish I was going to get 5 per cent of what the hotel people will make out of it."

"Political gatherings are more expensive than formerly," said the calculator's comrade. "The day of railroad passes has about vanished and politicians from other states have to pay full fare or walk. When they bring marching clubs and crowds of rooters they must stand for a good part of the expense, it appears to me. For a trainload of political 'rooters' to come to Chicago and eat and sleep during a convention lasting a week means money."

"I'll bet the convention will last nine or ten days," opined the first speaker, who is strong for an anti-Taft candidate. "It'll cost $50,000 for each presidential and vice presidential candidate, with the exception of Cannon, who is spending more than anybody else. It doesn't take a fine suite of rooms during a Chicago convention to eat up $200 a day."

Banners show which way the wind blows.

The makers of campaign paraphernalia are shewing huge silk bannaces with hand painted pictures and lettering on both sides. They are mounted on expensive brass mounted staffs and cost $50 each. The only ones which have appeared so far bear the pictures of Secretary Taft and the words, "Our Choice."

There is nothing of the whirlwind about Mr. Fairbanks, and at the same time he manages to accomplish an immense deal of work without any fireworks. He stopped his car at out of the way stations, talked to the farmers on the platform, and practiced the Ohio plan of infinitesimal politics on a national field.

Fairbanks' Missouri Campaign.

Those who are acquainted with the inside history of the last campaign know the case of Missouri. Vice President Fairbanks went into that state and spent a good deal of time there against the advice of many of the leaders of the party. They told him that the Missouri republicans were always full of promises as to what they were going to do, but that they never produced results at election. These leaders insisted that they had been fooled so many times they did not consider it worth while to spend time on Missouri.

In spite of this fact Mr. Fairbanks criss-crossed Missouri in a remarkable fashion, and he came back to headquarters full of the idea that Roosevelt was going to carry the state. He was laughed at for his pains, but after the election the laugh was on the other fellow, and since that time the political sagacity of the vice president is not called in question by those who know what they are talking about.

Of course the situation in Iowa and in Indiana is much like the two sides of a coin. In Iowa the old time republican leaders don't want Dolliver taken away from them. In Indiana the party managers are rapidly coming to the conclusion that the name of Fairbanks on the national ticket may save them from defeat at the polls next November.

Conditions in Indiana are not as satisfactory as they might be. There are rumors that Jim Watson will have a hard fight to secure the election as governor. At the same time there is some question as to the legislature. Senator Hemenway's term expires next year. The legislature to be elected this fall will help fill his place. It is figured out that if Vice President Fairbanks is renominated state pride and the perfection of the Fairbanks machine will carry both Watson and the legislature through beyond all question. Every one knows that Indiana is a doubtful state this year and the republican leaders are making the most of that fact in pressing the Fairbanks boom for second place.

Organizing for Convention Work.

It can hardly be said that the Taft managers have even interfered in the vice presidential situation as yet. They have been paying their attention to other things involving the organization of the convention, with plans for the work immediately following.

They picked out some of their committee chairmen, like Senator Fulton of Oregon, for the credentials committee; ex-Gov. Hill of Maine for the committee on permanent organization, and Senator William Warner of Missouri for the committee to notify the presidential candidate, in addition to Senator Hopkins of Illinois, who was a long time ago slated for the position of chairman of the resolutions committee.

There is an obvious good sense in the selection of Senator Warner for the committee to notify the candidate for president. In the first place, it should be said that this duty, according to the unwritten law of the party, devolves upon the permanent chairman of the convention. He always heads the committee to notify the presidential candidate, while the temporary chairman performs a similar duty for the vice presidential candidate.

In the convention this year Senator Lodge of Massachusetts, the president's friend, will be the permanent chairman. It would ordinarily be his duty to go to Cincinnati to notify Secretary Taft of his nomination. This ceremony naturally would take place after the democratic convention, when the issues of the campaign were fairly joined, so that the candidate in making his reply accepting the nomination could sound the first real keynote of the whole campaign.

Lodge Going to Europe.

Unfortunately, Senator Lodge, who would perform this duty admirably, is obliged to go to Europe about July 1. There has been a recent bereavement in his family, and he would not have attended the convention in Chicago had it not been for a strict sense of his duty to the party. He, therefore, notified the Taft manager that some one else would have to be selected to make the formal notification.

In view of this fact the personnel of the convention was carefully scanned and a fortunate choice was made of Senator Warner of Missouri. He has been a warm champion of Roosevelt politics, but a more important fact is his former office of commander in chief of the Grand Army of the Republic. He is a veteran soldier, who is respected by all of his comrades. His appearance at Cincinnati tendering the republican nomination for president to Secretary Taft will unquestionably be made a notable event, aside from its ordinary significance, because of Senator Warner's military record.

It will show that the old comrade of Grant fully understands the point of view and the tenderness displayed by Secretary Taft in his Memorial day speech. Fortunately, too, Senator Burrows, who will be temporary chairman and will notify the vice president, is also a veteran soldier of the civil war.

CHILDREN'S DAY IN CHURCHES.

Three Thousand Sunday School Pupils of Oak Park Form Veritable White Army.

Eight churches, with 3,000 Sunday school pupils, observed children's day in Oak Park yesterday. All the churches were decorated prettily and the programs were welcomed by full houses.

More than 1,000 pupils were in attendance at the First Presbyterian, First Congregational, and Episcopal churches. When the classes reached the street and merged they made a veritable white army.

At the First Congregational church a special vesper service was held in the afternoon by the Rev. William F. Barton, with administration of the Lord's Supper and consecration of the Rev. and Mrs. A. W. Staub of Oberlin college, for missionary service in China.

NIAGARA FALLS FREE FOR DAY.

Rise in River Level Is Noted When Power House Cap Wheelpits.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., June 14.—The American Niagara today piled over the cataract as free and unharnessed as it did the day it was discovered. The powerhouses on the American side capped their wheel pits and the long tunnel that carries the bolt of water ran dry.

The plants were closed to allow divers to inspect the American abutment of the upper steel arch bridge at the mouth of the tunnel. The divers found the abutments of the bridge safe.

Engineers of the United States government took measurements of the river while the water was unharnessed. A rise of one-tenth of an inch was noted.

FALLS DYING ON THE STREET.

Henry W. Chandler, Head of Hoops Tea Company, Stricken with Heart Disease.

While walking in West Madison street near California avenue early last evening Henry W. Chandler, president of the Hoops Tea company, was seized with an attack of heart disease and died shortly afterwards. Chandler was on his way to his home, 883 Warren avenue, when he was stricken.

DEFINES "PARTY" OF FUTURE

Dr. Gunsaulus Says It Will Be One Doing Most for Most Needy.

POINTS OUT THE DANGERS.

Declares Time at Hand When Flag Must Mean More than Ever.

"The party of the future is the party that does the most for the man that needs the most," said Dr. Frank Gunsaulus at the Auditorium yesterday morning. His statement was greeted with continued applause.

"The emancipation proclamation does not," continued the speaker, "make a man free; neither does the declaration of independence. The question with the party should be: 'What are you doing for the weakest and the most needy? Is your party filling the pockets of the powerful leading up to the conditions that produced Rome?' Our government is based upon Christianity, and Christianity never invented a scheme that made puppets of men. The so-called 'lower classes' have been educated into believing that wealth means power and aristocracy—a pernicious belief.

"Our party today is filled with an atmosphere of expectancy and hope and that which is of utmost consequence to a republican form of government. Americanism is the oldest of all forms of ideal government, and the problems the American people seek to solve today is an old passion of the soul.

New Era Is Coming.

"We are not Rome, publishing dominating words and backing them with the sword. We are not Germany nor France nor England, but Americans in whose blood is planted the seeds of self-government. We stand on the verge of an era when our flag must mean more than it ever has—with its red for valor, white for purity, and blue for justice.

"Imperialism is the hardest of all things to kill, but it must go down before a Christian conception of government. A monarchy is as a man of war, which may be stranded on any submerged rock. Republic is a raft hard to steer, your feet are always wet, but it cannot sink. The consent of the governed must go with the government.

"One danger that stands at the door of every convention is that those people who have come from monarchies may become the dominant power, and be tempted to do, inside the party, what no third person would be allowed to do outside the party.

Points to Temptations.

"The temptation today is the same as that Christ met in the wilderness. That party that can make the most bread out of stone will have the day, by its own popularity. Many a best, is thus lost by compromising with the better. This makes a kingdom of the stomach, not of the mind and conscience. I tell you the exigency of the hour is not to get a majority, for you cannot found a kingdom if you take from a man his highest manhood."

FIRE DRIVES OUT BIG FAMILY.

Girl, Wakened by Smoke, Rouses Her Father and Mother and Ten Brothers and Sisters.

Thirteen persons were driven from home last night when fire started at 198 West Chicago avenue, presumably from spontaneous combustion. Rosie Bziulinski, 15 years old, discovered the fire and awakened the others. The girl had gone to bed, but was disturbed by smoke. She went about the house to learn the cause and on discovering the fire she aroused her mother and father and ten brothers and sisters.

FOURTH'S DEATH TOLL NEAR; TRAGIC CERTAINTY COMBATED

Health Department Fights Annual Sacrifice to Screaming Eagle and Tells How to Treat Wounds.

The screaming eagle's annual toll of human life is about to begin. With the approach of the fourth of July celebration, the doctors of Chicago are preparing for the inevitable epidemic of the deadly tetanus. The city health department, in its weekly bulletin issued last night, warned the people of Chicago of the peril.

"The proper control of the celebration would prevent the occurrence of the epidemic," says the bulletin. "As it is too much to expect the proper control, let us prepare for tetanus.

"Fourth of July wounds, no matter how apparently insignificant, should be attended to by physicians. All such wounds should be kept open to the air until dressed by the doctor.

"The department recommends the use of and will supply tetanus antitoxin for the treatment of all suspicious injuries during the two weeks preceding and two weeks following the fourth of July.

"Treatment of thousands of cases throughout the country demonstrates that tetanus antitoxin, if administered soon—within twenty-four hours, if possible—after the infliction of an injury, affords perfect protection from tetanus."

OFFICIAL FOE OF SPEEDING ARRESTED IN HIS MOTOR CAR.

Appearance in Court of Ald. Geroudl of Evanston Causes Justice to Say: "Well, I Declare."

The truth of that old expression, "hoisted by his own petard," was impressed forcibly upon Frank Geroudl, Evanston alderman and automobile speeder, yesterday.

This is what Justice Boyer said when a large machine halted in front of the Evanston police station:

"Well, I declare! They've pinched Frank Geroudl."

This momentary lapse from judicial dignity is explained by the fact that Geroudl is a member of the council and fought hard to have the minimum fine for speeding placed at $100 when the automobile ordinance was passed in Evanston.

"Well, I guess you better give me the limit. The joke's on me," was the good natured remark to the court by Mr. Geroudl, who lives at 1200 Judson avenue, Evanston, and is manager of the Chicago house of A. G. Spalding & Co., sporting goods. The case will be heard June 20.

Policemen of north shore suburbs were out in force during the day, and Evanston, Glencoe, and Wilmette bagged a number of speeders. Winnetka was unable to catch a single offender.

One man, W. H. Lau, 2041 North Paulina street, president of the W. H. Lau company, 12 Adams street, was arrested in Lincoln park. Park Policeman Charles Ohrwally said the machine was going forty miles an hour. Lau was released on cash bond.

FINDS PANTS ON WRONG MAN.

Wilmette Policeman Arrests George Edwin Stafford, Who Is Wearing Stolen Clothing.

George Edwin Stafford—he said that was his name—visited Wilmette last night wearing an overcoat, a pair of trousers, and a pair of gloves that were stolen two weeks ago from the residence of H. S. Judd. With Stafford was a young man who declined to make known his name until he "had consulted his attorney."

This polite way of talking almost pursuaded Policeman Seibert of that suburb to release the men whom he found watching a residence on the east side of the village. Just as he was about to call a carriage for the town's guests Mr. Judd happened along. He remembered his pants and top coat and gloves.

The two men, who are supposed to know a good deal about the epidemic of burglaries that visited Wilmette during the spring, were taken to the Evanston police station for safe keeping.

WHY?

It is foolish and unnecessary to have corns, bunions or any other kind of foot troubles—a little wisdom and investigation will prevent these tortures and miserable annoyances.

Grant, Mrs. John L. McNeil, and Mrs. Charles Schlaacks. Mrs. Helen M. Wixson of that state is already here, and although inactive in the cause, is an interested spectator.

Mr. and Mrs. Longworth Coming.

Representative and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth left Cincinnati last night for Chicago and are expected to be seen in the midst of the political and social activities today.

As soon as Miss Lena Hemenway, daughter of Senator and Mrs. James A. Hemenway of Indiana, landed from her carriage she was surrounded by a throng of women who preceded her here and almost bore her to the elevator in their arms. She is a debutante and made her appearance in Washington society under the guiding care of Mrs. Fairbanks and in the home of the vice president, so the first thing she did upon her arrival was to hunt for the Fairbanks headquarters.

An earlier train brought Representative and Mrs. Van Vechten Olcott of New York, who had scarcely time to settle down for luncheon when they again took the train for St. Paul, where today they will attend the wedding of Miss Frances Gilbert, daughter of the late Bishop Gilbert, and Lieut. Cheeney. Immediately after the wedding they will begin the return trip to Chicago. They will stay at the Annex.

Newport Golf Champion Comes.

Miss Maud Wetmore, daughter of Senator George Peabody Wetmore, a golf champion at Newport and Washington and a social leader in both places, arrived last evening, and will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Walsh at the Annex, where they have a large suite of rooms. She also will accompany them to Colorado, and their party will include Ned McLean, son of Mr. and Mrs. John R. McLean of Washington and a great friend of Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, and others.

Mrs. William Barret Ridgely and Mr. Ridgely's younger daughter, Miss Eleanor Cullom Ridgely, will join Mr. Ridgely here this evening, and a number of plans already have been made for their entertainment. Mr. Ridgely's first wife was the daughter of Senator Cullom, while the present Mrs. Ridgely is a bride of a year and was formerly Miss Katherine Deering, daughter of a navy officer and famed for her picturesque beauty and quaint and beautiful costumes. Miss Eleanor Ridgely made her début in Washington last winter, coming out with a notable number of "buds," including the present Mrs. Joseph Leiter. She at once became a belle. They will occupy apartments in the Annex.

Mrs. James Wadsworth, whose fresh beauty has charmed every one, and whose ambition to have her husband governor of New York is known from one end of the country to the other, wore for her carriage ride about the city in the afternoon a costume of white and black in quarter inch stripes, the coat cut in empire effect in the back. She wore a white straw hat and a long white chiffon veil.

Frank Hitchcock a Hero.

Frank Hitchcock became something of a hero when one of his admiring friends told a story of his bravery and forethought which saved two carloads of human freight. The story ran thus:

Mr. Hitchcock was on a west bound passenger train. One of the most hazardous parts of the road was reached; the train coupling parted, leaving two rear cars detached. As soon as this became known the passengers were thrown into a panic. Mr. Hitchcock took in the situation quickly and sent a man to the front while he manned the rear brakes. He threw all his strength and energy into the work and brought the train to a standstill just in time to avert a catastrophe.

The man who told the story said that Mr. Hitchcock probably was never so embarrassed in his life as when the dozens of passengers overwhelmed him with thanks and praise.

There is a suggestion of romance in the story, too, which pleased the women who heard it, for while Mr. Hitchcock is a bachelor, it is said a pretty girl was so enthused with his bravery that she gave him her heart, but—.

Few Entertainments as Yet.

Entertainments to date have scarcely had a place in the schedules of the politicians or the politicians' wives. Each afternoon some of the women usually telephone some of the other visiting women in the hotels and ask them with their husbands to make up a little dinner party.

Such an affair as this Gen. and Mrs. Woodford gave last night in honor of their guest, Mrs. Tryphosa Bates Batchellor, who has just arrived from the east for the convention. Even such little informal parties as these, however, have not been frequent.

But the next week promises more in the way of social diversion. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Taft will entertain a small party in their rooms on Tuesday evening to listen to the concert on the lake front.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold McCormick will give a dinner for M. and Mme. Jusserand on Monday night.

Today two entertainments will be given for the distinguished women visitors to the city.

Reception at Athletic Club.

The afternoon reception of the Daughters of the American Republic at the Woman's Athletic club promises to be attractive. The guests of honor will be the following:

Mrs. Charles Taft,	Mrs. Shelby M. Cullom,
Mrs. M. A. Hanna,	Mrs. Charles S. Deneen,
Mrs. John A. Logan,	Mrs. Elmer Dover,
Mrs. Myron T. Herrick,	Mrs. Nathan B. Scott,
Mrs. Donald McLean,	Mrs. James Bryce,
Mrs. Seth Low,	Mrs. Wu Ting-fang.
Miss Taft.

The members of the society who will receive and who will have charge of the guests are as follows:

Mrs. J. Ellsworth Gross,	Mrs. Thomas White,
Mrs. L. K. Torbet,	Mrs. E. L. Masters,
Mrs. S. W. Earle,	Mrs. A. H. Dainty.

Reception to Precede Banquet.

The Elisabethan room at the Annex will be the scene of a reception given by the wives of the Sons of the Revolution preceding the Flag day banquet in the evening. The reception will be in the charge of Mrs. Scott Jordan, Mrs. Louis A. Bowman, Mrs. Nelson Ludington, Mrs. L. L. Austin, Mrs. Walter Frasier Brown, and Mrs. R. P. Benedict.

DIPLOMATS WILL WATCH WORK.

Jusserand, Bryce, and Many Others Are Coming for Convention Week—Practically All Nations Represented.

J. J. Jusserand, French ambassador to America, who, with Mme. Jusserand, is to be the guest of the Harold McCormicks during the convention, may be the next president of the French republic. Therefore the visit of M. Jusserand to watch the making of an American presidential candidate is likely to be fraught with special interest.

M. Jusserand is looked upon by many keen observers of international politics as the foremost figure in the French diplomatic service. He is popular at home, because of his deep insight into economic problems and his devotion to his government. His popularity has led many French politicians to demand him as the successor of President Fallieres.

With the other distinguished foreign diplomats from Washington he is expected to be at the opening of the convention, Tuesday noon.

Bryce Also to Be Guest.

The Right Hon. James Bryce, British ambassador, who, with Mme. Bryce, is expected to arrive at the Annex this morning, will take special interest in the representative gathering of Americans at the convention. He desires to study the personalities of the men who have been drawn from every corner of the nation—their sectional characteristics. It is well known that the ambassador expects to add a book or perhaps books to his standard writings on the subject of this republic.

L. A. Coromilas, minister of Greece, who was expected at the Annex last night, is a Greek diplomat in whose veins runs the bluest blood of the kingdom. He can trace his ancestry back for 2,000 years. The minister is a man of high literary attainments.

Capt. Horace Hood, naval attaché of the British embassy, who registered last night at the Virginia hotel, is expected to be made an admiral soon. He looks young enough to be a lieutenant, but he has an "old" head.

Russ Officials Are Here.

H. F. Charteris, honorary attaché of the British embassy, also is here. It is expected that some day he will be master of a dukedom.

Lieut. Col. B. R. James, who, with Mrs. James, will attend the convention, is military attaché of the British embassy and one of the most distinguished representatives of Great Britain in this country.

B. Kroupensky, chargé d'affaires of the Russian embassy, is chamberlain to his majesty, the czar. Mr. de Thal, secretary of the Russian embassy, is a gentleman in waiting at the Russian court.

Dr. Luis Melian Lafinur, minister of Uruguay, is one of the most scholarly men of South America.

WOODMEN PASS THROUGH CITY.

Thousand Members, Including Numerous State Delegations, on Way to Peoria Convention.

Almost a thousand Modern Woodmen of America passed through Chicago yesterday on their way to the annual convention of the society at Peoria. The reception committee from the Chicago camps has established headquarters at the Palmer house, where the delegates and the members of the teams which are going to contest are being registered. During the day the entire delegations from Michigan, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin, Ohio, the District of Columbia, New York, and Idaho passed through the city.

Black Boy in Cuba Says That Brugos Kidnaped Victim for the Purpose.

HAVANA, June 14.—Victor Navarro, a negro boy arrested at Alacranes on the charge of complicity in the kidnaping of Luisa Valdes, a white child, has confessed the girl was the victim of a band of brujos, or negro wizards. He said the girl was murdered for the purpose of using the blood of her heart to cure an old negress of consumption.

KING BARS SKIRT DANCING AMONG HIS ARMY OFFICERS.

Edward Forbids What He Terms Inane Exhibition Among Men of One of the Crack Regiments.

LONDON, June 14.—King Edward has absolutely forbidden what he calls one of the most inane exhibitions he has ever heard of. Several officers of one of the crack regiments in London recently went in for skirt dancing, engaging the services of an eminent professional teacher of the art, and a few days ago sent out invitations to all their friends to a forthcoming exhibition of their latest accomplishment. One of the invitations came into the hands of his majesty, who immediately made personal inquiries, and finding that it was no joke, but that it was really intended to give the show, placed his ban upon it.

The officers who are concerned are indignant over the fact that their little affair has been interfered with and many of their friends, who believe with them that skirt dancing is a commendable activity for an army officer, join with them in a guarded condemnation of the king's action. One of the army men points out that he has been practicing under the professional coach twice a week for more than three months. It is said that the costumes which were to be worn at the entertainment have already been bought from a well known French shop in Leicester square which supplies professional dancers with their dresses. The elaborate outfit of a second lieutenant who was expected to make a sensation by his agility and skill is said to have cost $300.

No one in England likes a lark better than the king, but he dislikes to see a man play the fool. It is said that his telegram to the senior officers of the regiment concerned forbidding the performance contained a severe reprimand from which they will not recover soon.

CENTRAL AMERICA FOR PEACE.

Central Court of Justice in Costa Rica Greeted by Display of Good Feeling.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

HAVANA, June 14.—Judge W. I. Buchanan, who attended the inauguration of the Court of Justice of Central America at Cartago, Costa Rica, last month, accompanied by his son Donald and Señor Calvo, Costa Rican minister at Washington, arrived here today on the cruiser Des Moines from Vera Cruz.

Judge Buchanan says he was received with great cordiality everywhere he went and the utmost good feeling was shown towards the establishment of the court of justice. Costa Rica will work strongly for the general peace of Central America and all the countries participating in the court seemed enthusiastic and sincere.

Andrew Carnegie's gift of $100,000 for the purpose of erecting at Cartago a temple of peace is greatly appreciated. The five republics interested made the date of the inauguration of the tribunal a national holiday.

The new institution gives new machinery for the settlement of differences, making possible the adjustment of questions which hitherto would have caused a recourse to arms. Donald Buchanan was made an honorary captain in the Costa Rican cavalry.

Londoner Discovers Ancient Roman Secret to Prevent Rust and Banish Moisture.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, June 14.—Inspector Simpson of the Blackburn fire brigade claims he has discovered a liquid, the principle of which after many months' test is pronounced by leading engineers to be an ancient Roman secret lost 700 years ago. When painted with this composition the dampest room becomes dry and freshly plastered walls treated with it may be papered immediately. Ironwork painted with it cannot rust and it completely prevents the "weepings" of the inner skins or iron ships. It also prevents oxidization and marine growths such as barnacles on the bottom plates.

Delegates to Pan-Anglican Congress in London Make Sartorial Event of Meeting.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, June 14.—One of the curious results of the great gathering of delegates to the pan-Anglican congress is the tremendous rush on London's clerical tailors. Hundreds of delegates, anxious to have the correct ecclesiastical cut, especialy the bishops, have overwhelmed the tailoring firms with orders. Tailors familiar with all the details of clerical garb are rare, their number even in London being a scant dozen, while the men who know how to turn out a bishop faultlessly clad are veritable black swans.

Commission and Assembly Agree on General Appropriation of $8,400,000—No Salary Reduction.

MANILA, P. I., June 14.—After many conferences the insular commission and the Philippine assembly have arrived at an agreement upon the general appropriation bill. The compromise measure appropriates $8,400,000, the assembly making a concession of nearly $750,000. The appropriations agreed upon are practically the same as the expenditures last year. The commission declined to assent to the reduction in salaries and the consolidation of some of the bureaus as proposed by the assembly.

PARIS, June 14.—Emulating the English socialist and labor members of parliament, the French socialists are opposed to President Fallière's impending visit to the czar. The national council of united socialists has adopted a resolution indignantly protesting against the visit on the same grounds as did their English brothers, and urging all allied organizations to make a similar protest.

WHAT LEADING NEWSPAPERS PRINTED THIS MORNING FROM CHICAGO.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat

Now comes the stage of the convention with the sizz, boom, and the great hurrah, for the district delegate has come to town. He brings with him the brass band, the marching club, and the leather lungs. He crowds the sidewalks and blocks the corridors of the hotels. He talks learnedly of the "quiet" convention which is to begin on Tuesday and hustles for the latest "tip" as to the vice presidency. In time he will get his suggestions from the leaders in his delegation, who, in turn, are passing the word down the line from the national leaders. He does not change the situation, but adds to its picturesqueness and gives color and noise to it all.

In private rooms and in the exclusive clubs of the near hotel section the Taft leaders confer and dicker with the men who have not been identified with them in the movement for the nomination of the leading candidate.

Two things of great importance are yet to be decided, and gradually they are working out. One is the candidate for the vice presidency and the other is the character of the platform.

For the first, the leading candidate is still Senator Jonathan P. Dolliver of Iowa. He is leading because he is the choice of Mr. Taft, the leading candidate for the presidency, and the choice of President Roosevelt, who comes as near running this convention as any one individual can, through personal friends and representatives and the use of the long distance telephone.

I have discounted some of the talk that Senator Dolliver is the Taft choice for the vice presidency, but today I was shown a letter, over the signature of the secretary of war, which makes this clear beyond question, although the name of Senator Dolliver did not appear in its brief text. Let it be here asserted that if the administration-Taft decision is for Dolliver, despite the opposition in his own state, and among his own friends—it will be Dolliver. Mr. Fairbanks is running in a "dark horse" way because he has been the choice, from the first, of some of the strongest republicans of the country, and their quiet but forceful expressions with regard to him are having an effect.

As to the character of the platform the one great fight is to be over the so-called anti-injunction plank. I know at first hand that it is in the platform and that it is the intention of the men who have the tentative draft to keep it there, and that Washington is determined in this connection.

I saw Speaker Cannon tonight as he stepped from the train at La Salle street station, and I knew trouble had come from Danville for the pre-convention anti-injunction plank makers.

So determined are the president and the secretary of war that they are openly canvassing the proposed membership of the resolutions committee and are urging that fights be made against certain men in the state delegations who oppose the administration-Taft will in the anti-injunction and other planks. Of this number is Representative Sereno Payne, leader of the republican majority in the house of representatives. That fight was not effective.

The work of platform building goes forward in advance of the appointment of the resolutions committee of the convention according to a well arranged program. Mr. Wade Ellis, attorney general of Ohio, is in charge of the tentative document and to him the men of ideas and with special propagandas are referred. For example, he conferred at length with Samuel Gompers, head of the Federation of Labor. Then an hour later he went over the same platform propositions with J. W. Van Cleave, head of the Manufacturers' association. Tomorrow he will find he is meeting some steady opposition directly from the hand of Mr. Joseph G. Cannon, speaker of the house of representatives, who came to the city at the call of some of the leaders and is going to openly engage in a fight on the present anti-injunction plank and seek its elimination. JEWELL H. AUBERS.

The Cleveland Leader

While Washington lounged in Sunday ease, with one hand firmly grasping the long distance telephone which is to convey to convention politicians at the proper time the name of the vice presidential nominee, Chicago quite seriously made up its mind to eliminate from the race for second place all aspirants but Dolliver and Sherman. The Iowa senator still occupies the place of vantage as the known favorite of Secretary Taft and the president. In spite of the increasing vigor of the fight that is being waged against him, He will retain it as long as they are silent; for their silence will indicate that the first plans have not been changed.

Sherman is tacitly accepted as New York's choice of a survivor from the quartet of aspirants for the nomination. The delegation is expected to eliminate at its caucus meeting tomorrow the names of Cortelyou, Woodruff, and Fassett. By a further process of anticipatory elimination, the ante-convention politicians have set aside the names of Guild and Murphy, and have taken precedent as a guide pointing to the selection of New York's candidate, if an eastern man is to be chosen.

All these calculations, however, are made with the reservation of "if no word to the contrary comes from Washington."

Gov. Hughes is the only one whose name has been mentioned for the second place to whom this restriction does not apply. His absolute refusal to accept the nomination, taken by every one at its face value, has eliminated him from the consideration of possibilities. However, if he should consent even now to take the place, he could get it in spite of any opposition from headquarters, if such opposition were a possibility.

New York will make her choice of a vice presidential candidate merely to be prepared should the antagonism to Dolliver make it advisable for the Taft leaders to select some other running mate. The verdict of the caucus, however, will be that of Washington. The big men of the delegation will name the man regarded as the most suitable substitute for Dolliver. That man now seems to be James Schoolcraft Sherman, the close political friend of Speaker Cannon and no ardent admirer of the administration. His selection by New York on orders from Washington will be taken to indicate the strength of the Taft leaders' determination not to permit the opposition to Dolliver to bar the Iowan from the nomination. Also it will not be regarded as committing the Taft organization to the nomination of a New York man. It merely will mean that the best understudies for the place slated for the Iowa senator are being chosen, so that there will be a fair field to pick from if the anti-Dolliver influences make it advisable to retain the Iowan in his senate seat. Guild and Murphy will be on this list of second choices.

The struggle of the Allison-Dolliver men of Iowa to keep the junior senator from the vice presidential nomination in order to bar Cummins from the senate is not the only influence that is being brought to bear upon Secretary Taft and his advisers. Congressman Bartholdt is doing his utmost to prevent Dolliver's selection. He is endeavoring to line up against the senator the German-American alliance, an organization which claims to represent the wishes of 2,000,000 German-American voters.

A telegram from Bartholdt to Adolph Timme, secretary of the organization, urges the coöperation of the members of the organization against Dolliver. The Iowa sen-American alliance on account of his part in framing the Dolliver-Hepburn bill, which made it illegal to ship liquor into a prohibition state. The members of the organization also are indignant on account of Dolliver's temperance speeches in the Iowa campaign and on the Chautauqua platform.

The efforts of Congressman Bartholdt to impress the Taft people with the undesirability of Dolliver will be seconded by those of the Iowa delegation, composed of Allison's supporters at home. They will do anything to keep that senate seat full enough to prevent Cummins from squeezing in.

FREDERICK WEIMER.

The Sun. NEW YORK

The situation is all in the air. It is distressingly complicated.

It does not matter a particle what anybody tells you, the Taft people, including Charles P. Taft and Henry W. Taft, are afraid of a Roosevelt stampede. The Roosevelt specter is constantly before them day and night.

There is no reason to believe that Secretary Taft will not be nominated on the first ballot by a handsome majority, but he is not nominated yet.

There is no logic for the situation here. Taft has no strength of his own. Left to himself he would not have a dozen delegates in this convention. It is all Roosevelt, Roosevelt, Roosevelt.

To many of the more thoughtful leaders the danger of a Roosevelt stampede was never greater than it was today. Charles F. Scott, national committeeman for Alabama, a man thoroughly familiar with all the workings of the southern delegations, declared emphatically today that Taft men in all the southern states were breaking away and talking Roosevelt. This fact is all the more important because the national committee has completed its labors and has practically made up its temporary roll of the convention.

There is no more consistent friend of Secretary Taft in this city than ex-Gov. Myron T. Herrick of Cleveland, whom Taft defeated for reëlection as governor by that untoward speech at Akron. Yet Mr. Herrick is alarmed over the Roosevelt sentiment. Senator Dick is in the same frame of mind. It can be said without fear of the slightest dispute that the majority of republican congressmen nominated in Ohio and the republican state officers nominated at Columbus are much more for Roosevelt than they are for Taft, because they believe Roosevelt could carry Ohio in November and Taft's candidacy for president would make the state doubtful.

The Boston Daily Globe.

Taft on the first ballot, with all of 200 votes to spare, and for the vice presidency a free field and no favors.

This is the entire situation in Chicago tonight, with nearly all the delegates present and accounted for.

It may be said with absolute confidence that there should be no interference on the part of either Mr. Roosevelt or Mr. Taft and that they have no present intention to interfere with the filling of the second place on the ticket. They only delude themselves who think otherwise. The timid are alarmed when no man pursueth with a big stick or the steam roller.

Mr. Roosevelt proposed the candidate for president and the republican masses in primaries assembled enthusiastically and indorsed his choice of Mr. Taft. He has taken every care to see that no one should pluck the fruits of this victory for his leadership and policies and that the popular will was carried out.

Let men say what they will about it, they all admire the skill and thoroughness with which he has done his work. Being the chosen leader of his party, it was also Mr. Roosevelt's right and duty to see the thing through. In fulfilling this task no one can say that he has practiced any hypocrisy or worked by stealth.

Now, however, the presidential game is won, this vice presidential game is not his at all. He has announced no candidate and probably in his inmost thoughts he cares no more about it than the average citizen.

Yet a notion to the contrary is abroad. Politics is about two-thirds suspicion. There is no other field where men are so prone to imagine vain things.

There are no signs thus far, however, of any playing of favorites at Chicago. For several reasons the subject promises to receive unusually earnest attention before it is finally settled. The supposed state of Mr. Taft's health suggests one reason, while it is not forgotten that in forty odd years vice presidents have filled the president's chair a full fourth of the time.

It is whispered, whether warrantably or unwarrantably, that the secretary of war is showing the wear and tear of his campaign for the nomination. Hence, a man approaching presidential proportions is desired in the second place. Half of the entries in the race are barred at the start by this test.

Detroit Free Press

It is a tame convention, though this statement is not to be taken in a numerical sense. One of the most striking features is the absence of United States senators who have long been wont to grace such occasions with their presence and wisdom.

Perhaps it is well that the deliberations of the temporary and permanent organizations are to be presided over by Senators Burrows and Lodge, else the members of the august senate might be suspected of desertion. True, Senator Dolliver also occupies the limelight by reason of his being sought to take a place on the ticket, but the old régime, when senatorial dictum controlled, seems to have passed out.

With Taft an assured proposition, the realm of uncertainty has been transferred to the vice presidency, and there are so many angles to the latter proposition that it has become a guessing contest. It is being told that the "allies" had several motives in fighting Taft to the last minute and throwing out the scare that he had to win on the first ballot. As the story goes, they knew they had no chance to defeat Taft, but the interests were vitally concerned in securing concessions in the platform for one thing and in making sure that no fight would be made against the reëlection of Speaker Cannon for another.

What they feared was too much radicalism. So the warriors were sent out to do battle until something definite could be secured as to the future.

One can hear most any story he wants regarding the vice presidency. There is a lot of genuine sentiment for both Hughes and Dolliver. In some quarters it is figured that Dolliver is the real man wanted by President Roosevelt, because of his radical reform tendencies. It is conceded that the president is soft on Cortelyou and would like to see him land, as it would make a simon pure Roosevelt ticket.

On the other hand, the situation is figured out to be that Taft wants Dolliver on the theory that the real fight will be in the west, and that Cortelyou would be a weak sister even in New York. No one seems to know what the Taft program is going to be, whether they are holding back in an effort to find a landing place or whether they have fixed on their man and are keeping him in the background until the game is further along.

In the Michigan camp sentiment is strong for Dolliver, while a few express the hope that Fairbanks will consent to take another term. H. A. GILMARTIN.

THE INDIANAPOLIS STAR

It may sound paradoxical, but with the arrival of delegates to the republican national convention today both Taft and Fairbanks sentiment increased. If the delegates did not come in on a Taft-Fairbanks wave they soon felt it after reaching this city. Indiana, those close in touch with the situation are agreed, can not land the first place, but it can secure the vice presidential nomination if Vice President Fairbanks will but intimate he will accept the honor.

A decision must be made at once, as there is danger of jockeying. Facing a situation like the present the convention would naturally turn to New York for its vice presidential candidate. It is a fact, however, that it has not been able to do so up to this time as the result of several of the members of the delegation having up lightning rods of their own. Former Lieut. Gov. Woodruff, for example, desires the place. He was taken none too seriously in his own state and did not create any deeper impression throughout the country. Sherman is a good congressman, but little known save to members of the lower house and to voters of his ballwick. Cortelyou has made an excellent record as a cabinet official, but the members of the New York delegation, and they count for New York in the present instance, do not want Cortelyou.

This inability to unite precludes the possibility of New York securing the place. This prediction is based on conditions as they stand tonight. Senator Dolliver feels that a peculiar situation prevails in his state which requires that he continue to be a factor in its politics. Again, the presidential candidate will do no speaking. The vice president must do all the stumping. None of the New York men can arouse any enthusiasm. Fairbanks can, having a record excelled by none in this respect. This accounts for the increase of sentiment in his favor as a vice presidential candidate. B. F. LAURENCE.

The Minneapolis Tribune

The Iowa political situation has come to be a national affair through the possible candidacy of Senator J. P. Dolliver for the vice presidency. The boom started for Frank B. Kellogg of Minnesota has attracted the notice of the country to the political potentials of the northwest, but attention is mainly focused on the Hawkeye state, where one of the strangest situations ever evolved at a national convention now exists.

The administration wants Dolliver to be the vice presidential candidate. He is wanted because he is a spellbinder. He is wanted to give added strength to the ticket in the Mississippi valley, where the force and strength of William Jennings Bryan, or possibly Gov. Johnson, is feared.

Senator Dolliver is the strongest campaigner in the country today, possibly barring Bryan. He has magnetism and physical endurance. He would add fire, spirit, and enthusiasm to the campaign, which up to the present time the candidacy of William Howard Taft has lacked. That is why the administration wants Dolliver of Iowa.

Here enters the dramatic character of the situation. Dolliver does not want to be vice president. He would rather remain where he is, but no one, with the possible exception of Gov. Hughes of New York, would turn down absolutely the second greatest office in the gift of the country.

The tip has gone out that Dolliver would not absolutely refuse if drafted, and he is in danger of being drafted. On the other hand, the supporters of Gov. Cummins are boosting his candidacy and are doing everything in their power to make him the candidate.

MOB AMERICAN BORN DUCHESS BECAUSE OF DIRECTOIRE HAT.

Londoners Make It Unpleasant for Former May Goelet on Account of Daring Headgear.

LONDON, June 14.—For the second time since her marriage to the duke of Roxburghe, the former May Goelet has been mobbed in the streets of London. On this occasion the English crowd took exception to the daring style of her hat and followed her, giving vent to audible remarks of an unpleasant character. The independent young American matron is "to the manner born," as they say over here, and calmly ignored the commotion she had caused. Finally, securing no response from the victim, the crowd gradually dwindled away.

The duchess is "previous" in her style of dressing. She always is garbed in the mode of the day after tomorrow. Even those authorities on the proper things, the duchesses of Marlborough and Westminster, make no attempt to keep up with the duchess of Roxburghe. The other day, soon after 5 o'clock, she appeared in Hyde Park wearing an amazing hat of the Directoire period, now so popular and eminently proper in the French capital.

The park was full of the mixed crowd which at this hour gathers to watch the turnout of fine carriages and people taking their afternoon sunning and they immediately set upon the astonishing headgear of the duchess as a butt for their ridicule.

A former experience of the American born peeress occurred soon after her marriage with Roxburghe. She was walking down St. James street wearing the first large veil depending from the hat that had yet made its appearance here, although they have since been common enough sights. A crowd soon formed in her rear and followed her for blocks until she finally had to enter a shop to escape their chaff.

HILL GREETED BY KAISER; ENVOY FORMALLY RECEIVED.

New U. S. Ambassador Granted Audience—American Diplomat in Full Dress to Meet Social Requirements.

BERLIN, June 14.—The emperor today received in audience the new American ambassador, David Jayne Hill, who succeeds Charlemagne Tower. The emperor's greeting was hearty.

The emperor's master of ceremonies, Baron von Dem Knesebeck, called at the hotel yesterday where Dr. Hill was stopping and informed him that an audience with the emperor had been granted for today in the old palace, his majesty coming in from Potsdam for the purpose. Three court carriages called for Dr. Hill today and, accompanied by his staff, he proceeded to the palace. On his arrival there he received a message from the emperor that the presentation would take place in the garden in one of the palace courts.

Count von Eulenberg and Baron von Dem Knesebeck conducted the ambassador thither. After the formal presentation and the delivery of greetings from President Roosevelt and the official letter the emperor engaged Dr. Hill in conversation for half an hour.

Dr. Hill did not wear an official uniform, but in deference to German social requirements full dress.

SAMOAN VOLCANO IS ACTIVE.

Long Eruption Followed by Greatest Flow of Lava in History of the Islands.

AUCKLAND, N. Z., June 14.—Advices received here state that for three nights, beginning on May 10, there was a remarkable volcanic outburst on Savaii, the largest of the Samoan islands.

The first eruption was followed by the greatest flow of lava in the history of the island, it being estimated at nearly 3,000 tons per minute.

Soon there was an almost continuous sheet of lava, eight miles wide and from six inches to six feet deep, flowing down the mountain side. It overflowed the cliffs, destroying many natives' houses on its way, dropping into the ocean, and causing an immense uprising of steam.

Mrs. Stearns was lovely in a white lace empire dress with a large white hat.

USEFUL HINTS TO HOUSEKEEPERS.

A COAT of Natural Jap-a-lac applied over old or new linoleum or oil cloth will double its life, by preserving the original coat of varnish which would otherwise soon be washed or worn off.

WEATHERBEATEN front doors are revived and beautified when coated with Jap-a-lac, and "newness follows the brush." It is best to use the color nearest that of the old finish.

WINDOW and DOOR screens should be coated with Jap-a-lac each spring, using the Brilliant Black on the wire, and the Mahogany, Oak, Cherry or Walnut on the frames. It gives them new life and the wire cloth is protected from rust.

PORCH FURNITURE should be protected and beautified each spring with Jap-a-lac. It is best to use the color of the old finish; but if you wish to change the color, use Red or Green Jap-a-lac.

WICKER FURNITURE coated with Mahogany, Ox-Blood Red, Malachite Green or Gloss White Jap-a-lac looks better than new.

WATER PIPES, furnace fronts, radiators, hot water tanks and iron fences are preserved and beautified with the use of Jap-a-lac. Use the Gold, Aluminum, Dead Black or Brilliant Black.

PICTURE FRAMES, candelabra, gas fixtures, lamps, etc., given a coat of Gold, Aluminum or Dead Black Jap-a-lac, are renewed almost beyond belief—the Dead Black produces that beautiful wrought-iron effect.

OLD AUTOMOBILES, carriages, wagons, agricultural implements, etc., Jap-a-lac-ed with either Brilliant Black, Red, Green or Empire Blue, look 100% better, and are given new life. The cost is nominal, and the work can be done by an inexperienced person.

JAP-A-LAC is a household necessity, and can be used in a hundred and one ways, from "cellar to garret," and is especially adapted for finishing old or new floors and woodwork. Ask your paint dealer.

CHURCH JUBILEE DRAWS THOUSANDS

St. Mary's of the Lake, Celebrating Seventy-fifth Year, Filled Nine Times.

POINTS TO NEW DANGER.

Rev. D. J. Riordan Says Catholics Must Not Rest at Ease on Laurels Won.

"Old St. Mary's." St. Mary's of the Lake, Chicago's oldest Christian congregation, which is now celebrating its diamond jubilee, was filled with worshipers nine times yesterday and numbered among its visitors many of the most prominent Roman Catholics in the city.

The services of the day began at 3 o'clock in the morning with the usual mass for the night workers. The regular parish masses were said at 6, 7, 8, 9, and 10 o'clock and each time the church was crowded to the doors because of the convention visitors, who have doubled the size of the parish in a week. Following the 10 o'clock mass street cars, automobiles, and carriages began to deposit throngs of people from all over Chicago who had been invited to attend the pontifical high mass celebrated by Archbishop Quigley in formally opening the week of jubilee. Admission was supposed to be by card only, but this rule was not enforced, and in one of the pews was seen a laborer, evidently just released from work, seated beside a well gowned woman and a judge.

Priests Who Assisted Archbishop.

Archbishop Quigley was assisted by the Rev. Arthur Wall of Birmingham, Eng., and the Rev. Joseph De Nicola of Lake Forest, as deacons; the Rev. Dennis Hayes, a former pastor of St. Mary's, Dr. Edward Dunne, chancellor of the archdiocese, and Bishop Maurice Burke of St. Joseph, Mo., as deacons of honor, and Father Vitalis of the Franciscans, as master of ceremonies. Other clergymen, who were on the altar, were the Rev. George T. McCarty of Harvey, the Rev. T. F. Cashman of St. Jarlath's, the Rev. M. Bonfield of St. Agatha's, the Rev. Andrew Croke of St. Cecelia's, and the Rev. T. A. Kearns of St. Mark's.

The sermon was preached by the Rev. Daniel J. Riordan of St. Elizabeth's church, who spoke on the occasion of the celebration in the same church twenty-five years ago at the golden jubilee of its foundation.

Father Riordan related the history of the parish, and, commenting on the growth of Catholicism in Chicago, he declared that the church now seemed to be approaching a time of trial which would be as severe as any through which it had gone.

Father Riordan Sees Danger.

"We are still growing rapidly," he said. "We are still in the constructive stage. Thirty-eight new parishes have been organized in the city of Chicago in the last five years, and many more new church, school, and institutional buildings have been planned or built to replace the old. But we can now see the end of this in sight. The end of this constructive work has nearly come in some parishes. The people have built their churches and schools and are threatened with the danger of prosperity and ease.

"We must withstand this insidious evil. We must not rest on our laurels. We must remember that it is still for our own good that we should make sacrifices. It is good to work for others; to work for the support and spread of religion. We must not rely on past good works, nor worship without making our own sacrifices in churches others have builded for us. A soul may grow to spiritual perfection under the lash of poverty and contempt that would sink into indifference or sin under prosperity. Let us in our strength and prosperity do our duty as well as did our predecessors in their weakness and poverty."

Discusses Parochial School System.

Father Riordan urged the necessity of active work to weld the many nationalities now composing the Roman Catholic church in Chicago into a homogeneous whole. He also referred to the parochial school system and its future, saying:

"If we should discontinue the parochial school system, which we have built up without a dollar of outside aid, it would cost the city over $10,000,000 to replace the buildings and at least $2,000,000 a year to provide teachers for the children.

"It may seem unjust for us to bear this burden, but I believe that we will feel well repaid in time for our sacrifices. I feel sure that in time the American people will see by contrast the foolishness, the grave danger of maintaining a system of education from which God is excluded. They will conform their system of education to our model and we will by our example have done a great work of patriotism."

For a short time after the close of mass the church was comparatively deserted, but before 3 o'clock it was again crowded to witness the confirmation of 230 people by Bishop Burke of St. Joseph. About 200 of those confirmed were adults, converted by the Paulists, and the rest were children of the parish.

Closing Exercises of Day.

The closing services of the day were pontifical vespers and the benediction of the blessed sacrament, celebrated by Bishop Burke, and a sermon delivered by the Very Rev. Alexander J. Burrows, S. J., superior of the Society of Jesus in Chicago, in the evening. Father Burrows said in part:

"It is sometimes said that the money spent on churches would be better spent if used for the poor. The money spent for churches is given to the poor, but in no passing temporary way. It provides a place where the charity of Christ will be preached for ages to come; a place where the minds of men will be inflamed to take care of generations of poor."

A pontifical mass of requiem for the deceased members of St. Mary's parish will be celebrated at the church this morning at 10 o'clock by Bishop Peter J. Muldoon. The sermon will be preached by the Rev. J. J. McGovern. In the evening a reunion of the old parishioners of St. Mary's will be held at Temperance hall, 55 Eldredge court. The oldest parishioner who is expected is George Beaubien, who was christened by Father St. Cyr, the first pastor, two weeks after he arrived in Chicago in May, 1833.

MULDOON SPEAKS ON DIVORCE AT LAYING OF CORNER STONE.

Bishop, Who Officiates in St. Bride's Parish Ceremony, Praises State for Combating Evil.

More than 5,000 persons listened to Bishop Muldoon's address at the laying of the corner stone of the St. Bride's Catholic church, Seventy-eighth street and Coles avenue, yesterday afternoon. Thirty policemen, under the command of Capt. John Halpin, were necessary to keep the crowds back.

Bishop Muldoon was assisted in the laying of the corner stone by the Rev. Father T. D. Sullivan, pastor of the church. After the laying of the corner stone Bishop Muldoon addressed the crowd which had gathered in the streets.

"But one-third of the people of the United States are consistent churchgoers," said Bishop Muldoon. "The other two-thirds prefer to sit at home on Sunday and read the paper, sleep, or go any place but church.

"Another great evil that the state of Illinois and the United States are making strong efforts to curb is the evil of divorce. It draws people from church, they forget the vow made at the altar, and when they tire of each other they go to the divorce courts."

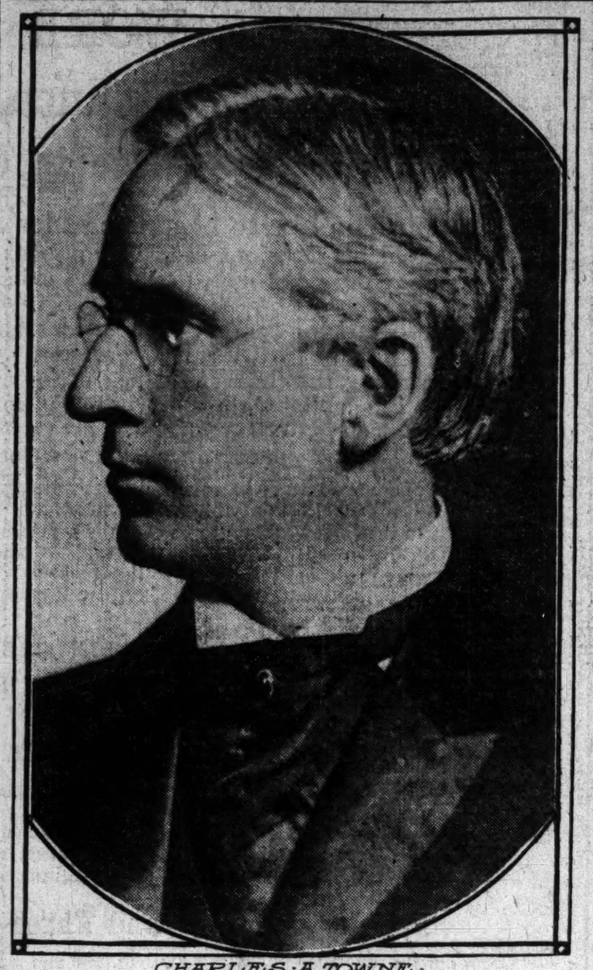

After the address the St. Michael's church cadets gave a drill on the shore of Lake Michigan.

The new church building will cost $45,000 and will be finished about Sept. 1. It is the only Roman Catholic church in the district and has a parish of 3,000 persons.

"ENEMY'S FLEET" IN ATTACK; MIMIC WAR TO AID MILITIA.

New York to Be Scene This Week of Training in Coast Defense of National Guard Regiments.

New York, June 14.—[Special.]—New York is being approached by the enemy's fleet, two battleships, three armored cruisers, two monitors, and a whole swarm of torpedo boats and torpedo boat destroyers.

A state of war has been formally declared by Col. Garland N. Whistler, commanding the east artillery district, and from now until the end of the week, Forts Hamilton, Wadsworth, and Hancock will fight to keep the enemy from making harbor from the open sea, and Forts Totten and Schuyler will defend the approach from the sound.

The formidable attacking ships headed for New York are theoretical, but are represented by two mine planting tugs carrying an attacking force under Capt. Mauldin of the coast artillery.

The mimic war is designed to give practical training to those national guard regiments to be called in coast defense service in case of actual war. The Forty-seventh and Seventy-first regiments are encamped at Forts Totten and Schuyler, while the Ninth and Thirteenth regiments are divided between the forts guarding the sea and the approach to harbor.

All week scout ships will watch the outside harbor for the approach of the ships, signaling the forts with bombs and then running to cover. It is expected the first big attack will be made either on Tuesday or Wednesday. Full charges will be used in the big guns, and New York and environs will get a good shaking up when the giant twelve inch guns and heavy mortar batteries get busy.

No flags will be lowered on any of the forts until the war is over and all night the big searchlights will be kept going. With the aid of the regulars at forts, the national guardsman will learn to handle the big guns and carry out the routine work of a fort in action.

MURDER MYSTERY MAY BE CLEARED.

Chinese Back of Hip Lung Prosecution Show Signs of Permitting Leniency.

FEUD SEQUEL IS FEARED.

Attorney Erbstein Insists Cantwell Knew Nothing of Perjured Testimony.

With only two days intervening before the case of Harry Lee and his co-defendants in the Chinese murder trial goes to the jury, undercurrents swept through Chinatown yesterday which may clear up the mystery still surrounding the case.

Recent dissensions among the defendants and an anxious letter written by Harry Lee to a friend with reference to the case formed the basis for rumors that the bond of secrecy which all the defendants have maintained thus far may be broken.

Lee's letter, written from the jail, showed him to be largely in the dark as to what has been going on and uneasy about it.

"I do not understand what went on in court Friday," he wrote, referring to the voluntary withdrawal by the defense of the testimony of Stridiron and Moissand. "Is it beneficial to me or not?"

Willingness among the Chinese to see the prisoners get light sentences if they are guilty was explained by Chan Kew, a Yale graduate, who has been serving as interpreter for the state during the trial.

"Fear that the entire Chin family of which Chin Wai, the murdered man, was a member, would be wiped out unless his murderer was punished, is the actuating motive of the Chin family and its friends in this trial," he said. "The great aim has been to get a conviction as a warning that the government will punish any further attacks on the family. But endless feuds might result from capital punishment inflicted upon the prisoners and the end would be worse than the beginning. So a sentence as light as could be inflicted probably would satisfy the Chin family."

Erbstein Defends Cantwell.

Attorney Cantwell's position regarding the charges which the state's attorney will bring against him at the convening of the July grand jury was outlined by Attorney Charles E. Erbstein, his former enemy, who has come to his support. Cantwell himself was reported as recovering from an attack of stomach trouble, but asleep and not to be disturbed.

"Mr. Cantwell holds that if Stridiron was on a train with him on the way to Milwaukee at the time the murder was committed he does not know anything about it," said Attorney Erbstein. "There were a hundred men in the crowd which had its picture taken before the train started, and twenty-two of them got on the train. Cantwell does not know today, of his own knowledge, whether Stridiron was on the train or not, nor did he notice him at the station. Stridiron brought him the case and got part of the fee for it. Naturally he was interested in seeing it win."

Secret Document Made Public.

The secret explanation made by the Chin family to the Chinese Empire Reform association for asking the arrest of Hip Lung, who was the association's local president, was made public in a translation by two Chinese students at the University of Michigan who were sent to Chicago for that purpose by President Angell.

This is the document by which the defense in its opening address declared that it would show a conspiracy on the part of the Chin family to kill Hip Lung and to put a Chin in his stead as president. In picturesque language it describes Hip Lung as "stirring up storms and waves" and declares it to be the duty of members of the association to "beat the drums and charge"—that is to say, to stir up sentiment against him. The letter explains at length Hip Lung's high position in Chinatown and asserts that because of it he might have headed off the establishment of a new society opposed to the Chin family.

at State, Washington, Wabash and Randolph

TODAY, THE MEN ESPECIALLY ARE INVITED BEFORE THEY BECOME ENGAGED IN THE WORK OF THE CONVENTION.

This store is one of the city's chief points of interest. A trip through the various sections is not unlike a visit to a great exposition. It is in fact Chicago's permanent exposition of the rarest, the finest and the best merchandise gathered by its own agencies and traveling representatives in almost all parts of the world.

In its appointments there is to be seen everywhere the thoughtful consideration given the comfort and convenience of its patrons.

The Reading, Writing and Rest Rooms have almost all the comforts of one's own home. Visitors will find them an ideal place to attend to their correspondence, to make appointments with their friends, or to rest for an hour or so.

A small library of the best of the recent books, all the latest magazines and newspapers, and stationery, are at their disposal. There is a branch of the Chicago postoffice, a telegraph office where messages may be sent or received and reservations made for sleepers, a theater ticket office and a bureau supplying information of every sort concerning the arrival and departure of trains, routes of street cars, locations of streets and buildings, etc.

The telephone system is the largest private exchange in the world, with over 350 stations, reaching all parts of the store.

In brief, from the great cold dry-air storage room for furs on the twelfth floor, to the underground tunnel station and the modernly equipped engine room in the third basement, there is a succession of entertaining and instructive features which are well worth seeing. Guides may be had upon application to the floor managers or salespeople.

In passing the displays of beautiful and exclusive merchandise one is immediately and forcefully impressed with the style atmosphere of this store. It is universally recognized as an authentic source of first information concerning fashions.

Through the exacting demands of its clientele and its own efforts to attain still greater distinction, this store has become a world-wide power in the creation and the production of unique merchandise.

This high standard of style and quality perfection is not less evident in the splendidly equipped "Store for Men" than in the various sections devoted to every requisite in apparel and accessories for women, and throughout the Juvenile Division, in which is assembled on one floor everything for the complete outfitting of misses, youths, girls, boys and infants.

One of the prime advantages of this store is the saving of the customer's time. Intelligent salesmanship, comprehensive displays, the assembling of allied stocks, the best of modern store equipment and rapid elevator service combine to reduce to the minimum the time required for making any purchases.

EDUCATORS SCORE EVILS OF THE DAY

Revolt Against Political and Corporate Ills as Baccalaureate Subjects.

HIGHER MOTIVE IS DUE.

Students Told That Awakened Public Conscience Demands Betterment of Society.

Ann Arbor, Mich., June 14.—[Special.]—The sixty-fourth commencement exercises at the University of Michigan began tonight with the baccalaureate sermon by President Angell. The week's festivities include the laying of the corner stone of the new Memorial building Wednesday and an address by Lawrence Maxwell Jr. of Cincinnati, solicitor general during Cleveland's administration. About 900 graduates will receive degrees.

The subject of Dr. Angell's address was "The Age of Quickened Conscience."

"It is not strange that in our time, at least in the middle west, the passion for popular education should be spreading everywhere and overflowing school and college and university with eager youths longing to train themselves in the most efficient manner for business or professions," he declared.

"How or why, for the purpose of this discussion it may not be important to decide. But this awakening manifests itself in a great variety of ways. Its reaction in our own country against intemperance in drinking has been so sudden and has spread over so wide a territory and among communities where it was unlooked for that the movement has seemed almost incredible.

People Angered at Public Evils.

"Even in Germany, and France, and England science is beginning to warn the public that reform in the drinking habit is essential to the preservation of national vigor, that higher morality is essential to the protection of the public health.

"But especially has indignation been excited at the malfeasance in the management of great corporations, in the discharge of the duties of public office, in the betrayal of fiduciary trusts.

"No doubt in the excited state of the public mind reckless charges have been made against innocent corporations and individuals, and have been widely and unjustly circulated before the accused have had opportunity to defend or explain their acts.

"But even those who condemn such unjust attacks or deem extravagant the language used in assailing some justly criticised, confess there are many public evils rightly and severely complained of. Now this new condition of things, this widespread quickening of conscience, is a great, palpable fact which deeply concerns all of you who are just going out into active life. You cannot, if you would, disregard it.

"The legislator who gives himself to the wretched work of drafting laws so that they may easily be evaded, the attorney who makes a special business of helping crafty men evade wholesome laws, the physician who by quackery and pretense seeks opportunities to trifle with human life or to conceal crime, the engineer who draws papers so as to further the plans of fraudulent contractors, the teacher who organizes and conducts his school so as to make sure of drawing inordinate compensation from wealthy parents rather than to impart solid instruction to his pupils, the captains of industry who coin their gains out of the lifeblood of helpless and impoverished operatives—these and all others of kindred spirit, whatever their vocation, will hereafter face a public more vigilant in exposing and more merciless in punishing their sins than the generation just passed from the stage.

"The colleges and universities of the country are about to be subjected to a severe test. The public seems convinced the schools are furnishing the intellectual training to fit their graduates for useful service in every vocation.

High Moral Purpose Demanded.

"But now it is to be demonstrated whether our graduates carry away from the university that high moral purpose the quickened conscience of our day is going to demand of all upon whom the seal of public approbation is to be set. No intellectual furniture will supply the lack of that.

"No institution will long command public esteem whose graduates do not command the confidence of the communities in which they would dwell.

"Hence it is that the teachers urge with an insistence that often seems to the undergraduate excessive and puritanical, that he shall in his college life cherish high ideals of character and life."

"Paralysis of Public Conscience."

Iowa City, Ia., June 14.—[Special.]—The Rev. Dr. Joseph W. Cochran, Philadelphia secretary of the American board of education of the Presbyterian church, delivered the baccalaureate sermon to the University of Iowa this afternoon. His theme was "The Abundant Life." He said:

"Americans have been moving along the lines of least resistance. Political corruption, wanton extravagance, official incompetence, and corporate criminality exposed during the last five years have disclosed a paralysis of the public conscience. It has been easier to carry out the will to be rich than the will to be honest."

Life Lesson in Skyscraper.

Oxford, O., June 14.—[Special.]—The exercises attendant upon the eighty-fourth annual commencement of the Miami university began with the baccalaureate services this afternoon, the sermon being preached by President Benton, who used as his theme: "The Fundamentals of the Larger Life."

President Benton said:

"This is the day of the skyscraper. The utilization of air space by lofty buildings is the wonder of modern times, and I find myself asking, as I look with strained eyes up towards the tops of these high lifting structures, 'Is man himself in this latter day growing proportionately to these prodigious productions of man's handiwork?'

"I dare to say that if man is to stand relatively as high as the buildings he rears, he must be above the foundation at least seven stories. Beneath the first story of the godlike manhood and womanhood of our new day must be laid deep and broad and strong the foundation without which no superstructure can weather the storms of life—even the foundation of faith.

Seven Stories of Character.

"The first story of elemental character is virtue, the second knowledge. The third is temperance—not temperance in its narrowed meaning, which implies total abstinence from the use of intoxicants, but in its literal meaning, which is moderation. The fourth is patience, that fortitude in suffering which makes pain or sorrow a ministry and a benediction to all who see it.

"The fifth story in the lofty character of our new day is godliness—that conformity to the laws of God which compels loving obedience, unaffected reverence, and the towering manhood and womanhood, which is veritable god likeness. Let the sixth story be brotherly kindness, that fellow feeling which establishes a loving kinship with all mankind.

"The seventh and last story is that which Henry Drummond has denominated the greatest thing in the world: Love of self, love of country, love of God, love of humanity. Faith is the foundation which supports all, and love is the consummation that reaches up and down and includes all."

BRYCE SEES ILL IN MATERIALISM.

New Danger in Teaching of Practicality at Expense of Theory.

PROFIT IN LIBERAL ARTS.

British Ambassador Gets Doctor of Laws Degree at Wisconsin University.

Madison, Wis., June 14.—James Bryce, British ambassador to the United States, addressed 500 members of the graduating class of the University of Wisconsin this afternoon. His subject was "University Recollections in After Life."

He pointed out the new danger which the wonderful development of industry and commerce and the material prosperity of the country has brought to the universities, deploring their tendency to emphasize practical training at the expense of pure science and the humanities.

The degree of doctor of laws was conferred on Ambassador Bryce by the university.

Text of Ambassador's Speech.

Mr. Bryce said:

"The progress of science has been so rapid, the results obtained by the application of science to all forms of industry and commerce so wonderful, the eagerness of every man to get wealth and of every nation to outstrip its rivals in material progress so keen, that there is a strong temptation to favor those branches of university teaching from which direct material advantages may be expected.

"This temptation is felt everywhere, in Europe no less than in America, and many persons while ready to spend large sums in the development of practical departments of a university, such as agriculture, mining, and engineering, disparage the study of theoretical science and deny the value of 'human subject,' such as history, economics, philosophy, or language.

All Human Effort Connected.

"This is a fatal mistake. Whatever an individual achieves, whatever a nation achieves, is the result of observation and reasoning. A university exists to train men to observe and reason.

"If it is to do this effectively it must provide training for them in all the branches of thought and give them the opportunity of acquiring every kind of knowledge.

"No one can tell from what quarter new light may come, for all branches in human effort are interconnected. Any nation which should so narrow its energies as to follow purely practical lines would soon fall behind its competitors and see its intellectual life wither.

Love of Truth Best Aim.

"Any university which so restricted its field would be unworthy of its high calling and would discharge even the practical part of its functions far less effectively.

"The study of the liberal arts fits men to profit by teaching they will receive in the other colleges. They will be all the better chemists, engineers, lawyers, bankers, because they have received a training in scientific theory or in language and literature which has given them a wide outlook over the field of knowledge.

"The university will be remembered for many things it has given, but for nothing ought it to be remembered more gratefully than that it taught its students to love and follow truth."

THOUSANDS IN NIGHT RIOTS AFTER MURDER BY ITALIANS.

Mobs in Pennsylvania Town Fight Police in Effort to Get Suspects Following Shooting and Stabbing.

Pittston, Pa., June 14.—[Special.]—Following the murder of Park E. Clelland and the fatal wounding of Councilman William Vanderberg by five Italians at midnight the streets were filled until 6 o'clock this morning by angry mobs who attacked the police in efforts to get the prisoners they had captured.

One suspect was beaten almost to death and several were saved from lynching only by the vigorous fighting of the police and the state constabulary. The whole city is aroused and is demanding vigorous measures to drive out all unruly Italians.

The murderous attack was made upon Clelland, Vanderberg, and William Evans as they were going home at a spot in the Italian quarter where two other murders occurred in the last eighteen months.

Five rowdies blocked the sidewalk, and as the three men approached they were assailed with revolvers and stilettos. They ran and a dozen bullets followed them.

Clelland fell and died in a few moments. Vanderberg was stabbed six times. Evans escaped.

The police quickly had four men in custody. As they were being taken to the station the way was blocked by thousands of men and boys. Several charges upon the officers were made and the prisoners were placed in the station house only after a hard fight. While Mayor Gillespie and Fireman Sloan guarded the jail the police force went after other suspects.

Six patrolmen had Antonio Verzassa, but as they neared the jail the mob overpowered them and took the prisoner. He was being mercilessly beaten when Mayor Gillespie made a successful appeal to the people to observe the law.

By that time a squad of the state constabulary had arrived, but even with the reinforcements disorder prevailed every time a prisoner was taken. Twenty Italians were arrested, all armed.

DEAD MAN IN BOAT AFLOAT; DOUBLE MURDER IS FEARED.

Lightkeeper on Lake Superior Isle Is Missing and His Assistant Beaten Beyond All Recognition.

Munising, Mich., June 14.—[Special.]—George Genery, keeper of the north light on Grand Island, in Lake Superior, is missing, and his assistant is dead, with his face disfigured by beating beyond recognition. It is believed both men were murdered.

The patrol of the Au Sable life saving crew, between Munising and Grand Marais, discovered a boat afloat yesterday. It proved to be from the north light of Grand Island.

In it was the body of the lighthouse assistant, who had been on duty only a short time and whose name cannot be learned.

Genery was in Munising on June 6 for provisions and started back for the light, intending to return June 13 to move his family there. The provisions were found in the boathouse near the light, but both boats are missing. Genery is said to have received his pay and that of his aid on the day he was here.

The lighthouse is on the extreme north point of Grand Island, seven miles from the home of the gamekeeper of the Cleveland Cliff game preserve, and sixteen miles from Munising.

It is an isolated spot upon a rock coast. It is said the light was not seen Thursday night.

Immigrant Goes Insane on Train and Escapes Through Window After Killing.

Fort Wayne, Ind., June 14.—Just as the west bound Wabash passenger train was pulling into this city tonight a Spaniard who occupied a special coach with Italian immigrants bound for St. Louis went insane, and, leaping into the aisle, plunged his dagger into the heart of one Italian, fatally stabbed another, and painfully wounded another. He then leaped through the car window and escaped. All parties are immigrants taken on at Detroit. The car is held here.

A WORD to Men of Substance, Success and good taste in dress:

Men who like to heed the saner and healthier of fashion's variations—and who also like to save themselves a degree of time, trouble and money, where no loss of distinction results—have been paying more attention to our history-making garments, and to our Shop, this season than in any two preceding seasons together; more, apparently, than to even the best of the few custom tailors who can contest with us in workmanship. We reach this conclusion from the remarkable activity in the Shop and from the class and character of the new patronage.

There are few men of judgment in dress who are not aware of the distinguished superiority of our garments, but there are many to whom the personal advantages of really high-class tailoring READY FOR USE are still an untried luxury. To them we have special pleasure in stating that owing to the frequency of our shipments of our new creations, our Chicago Shop is constantly in possession of a

Remarkably Complete Assortment of the very best productions designed by our Tailoring Institution in Rochester

For Immediate Summer Wear

The fabrics are mainly exclusive with us and need no other remark as to their character.

The design, execution and finish support our position as serious competitors of the most select custom tailors, and plainly restrict our competition to them—except, of course, in the matter of price. On our range is $25, $30, $35, $40, $45, $50 and $60 for the Summer weights, and at every figure you save from $15 to $40 of the sum you would pay a merchant tailor to match our garments.

You will be equally welcome either as patron or critical investigator.

Charles Hamilton of New York fell into Long Island sound with his airship this afternoon, winding up a nine mile trip, which he said was the longest he has been able to take. His attempts before have been confined to New York and Coney Island. He started from Savin Rock today for New Haven. His first exploit was to hover about Yale field and excite the crowd and players at the Yale-Princeton baseball game. Passing into the center of New Haven he steered around the City hall dome for nearly an hour. Turning toward New York he sped as far as the Union station, when the machine failed to work properly, and he watched for a soft landing spot. He just escaped being wrecked on the roof of the Union station and came down hard in a switch yard just beyond the station. After an hour spent in repairing the ship he turned his face homeward in the teeth of a small gale. He tacked persistently, but his supply of gas was limited and the steering apparatus balked. He saw he was being carried to sea, and determined to fall on the mud flats in shallow water rather than in the open sound, where help might not be handy.

He came down in the flats in only a few feet of water and was picked up by a motorboat and taken back to Savin Rock. The ship was damaged slightly.

ROBBED OF $10,000 IN CASH.

Seattle Capitalist Jostled and Relieved of Money as He Steps from Chicago Train at St. Paul.

St. Paul, Minn., June 14.—H. C. Taylor, a capitalist of Seattle, Wash., was robbed of $10,000 in cash at the Union station in this city this morning. Mr. Taylor, with his wife and daughter, was en route to Seattle from Europe. As the party was about to alight from a sleeping car on a Chicago and Northwestern train from Chicago Mr. Taylor was jostled by two men, one of whom reached inside Taylor's coat and secured a wallet containing the money. Mr. Taylor shouted an alarm, but the man escaped.

EX-SUITOR SLAYS WOMAN WED.

Mrs. Van Hooser of Birmingham, Ala., Called to Porch of House and Shot Down.

Birmingham, Ala., June 14.—T. Luther Birchfield, a former suitor, this afternoon shot Mrs. W. A. Van Hooser and himself. Both died soon afterward. The tragedy occurred at the woman's home. Birchfield went to the house, called her to the porch, and began firing. She ran inside and sank unconscious. He followed her and fired a bullet into his breast.

FRAULEIN EMMA DESTINN—

Fraulein Emma Destinn, soprano of the Royal Opera at Berlin, will be a member of the Metropolitan Opera company when it comes to Chicago next spring. She has had a tremendous success in Europe. In London Queen Alexandra went three times to hear her sing "Mme. Butterfly."

NEWS OF THE THEATERS.

COUSIN KATE.
A Comedy in Three Acts
BY HUBERT HENRY DAVIES.
Presented in Powers' Theater, Chicago, by Chrystal Herne and Company, on June 14, 1908. The Cast:

Heath Desmond	Wallace Eddinger
Rev. James Bartlett	Roy Fairchild
Bobbie Spencer	Eugene Savoyard
Mrs. Spencer	Lois Frances Clark
Amy Spencer	Hazel Lowry
Jane	Alice Leonard
Cousin Kate	Chrystal Herne

Fortunately, Chrystal Herne is, as yet, a star in name only. Therefore she is still something minus as a personality and something plus as an actress. Leading five other earnest young people of the stage, this young woman gave a delightful performance of "Cousin Kate" in Powers' theater last evening, and added one more to the worthy theatrical attractions that should this week appeal between cheers to the visiting delegates.

As a matter of record, though the facts are seldom printed, the stars of the stage spoil quite as many plays as they improve. They have a way of pulling a playwright' scheme all askew. They have another way of taking the dramatic bit in their mouths and running away with it. And they have a third way of sitting complacently on the wrong end of the teeter board and smiling their fascinating smiles while everything and everybody else in the play is high in the air at the other end.

Which is an elaborate and not particularly clear way of saying that a fault of the star system is that it teaches us to judge an author's work by the sweetness, or the force, or the charm, or the eloquence of an individual we have grown to admire, rather than by the content and purpose of the work itself. It would probably surprise some of us, and undoubtedly it would hurt our pride, to know the number of plays there are that would never have lived through a season without the bolstering influence of an accepted personality; and it likewise is quite possible that several of our most popular young stars would know the sting of a shattered self-confidence were they to learn the extent to which their authors and not themselves were responsible for favors received.

"Cousin Kate" is a charming little comedy that needs attractive personalities, but it does not need a star. Three years ago Miss Ethel Barrymore made of it a pleasant evening's entertainment because she twittered prettily and, at that time, rather consciously through it, and usually we are, all of us, agreed that no one can be more charming than Miss Barrymore. Yet last night Miss Herne made it quite as pleasant an entertainment and frequently a more convincing one by playing it as though it were the one object of her life to obliterate herself and to emphasize its underlying note of pathos and expend upon it the wealth of her emotional equipment.

There were moments during the performance when this more serious treatment stemmed the current of the play's buoyant comedy, because Miss Barrymore is instinctively a comedienne and Miss Herne as unmistakably an emotional actress. But there were other moments when the scenes fairly pulsated with the youth and life and inspiration of a fairy like romance made real. And this was directly owing to the fact that the young people who were playing it felt their individual responsibilities and did not feel that they were merely playing up to, or in support of, a star sufficiently high in the public esteem to bear the brunt of all the blame and sufficiently popular to accept all the praise that came.

Chrystal Herne may never reach the far goal on which her hopes and ambitions are set. But if strength of purpose, an honest if still unformed technical method, hampered slightly by mannerisms but devoid absolutely of tricks, an inherent love of the real and genuine, and a sincerity that is so magnificently true that it can fairly be felt—if these virtues entitle her to success as a star, then she will succeed. There is no American actress in the younger set for whom we shall pray more earnestly.

"Cousin Kate" will be recalled as an ingenuous little comedy in which a young novelist from London arrives at the home of a relative in rural England, after having fallen in love at first sight with a dashing young Irishman she met on the train, to find that the daughter of the house has to all intents been jilted by a careless lover. She sets out to straighten the tangle, seems in a fair way of success, and then learns that the young man of her adventure, to whom she pledges her heart at a second meeting before she knows his name, is none other than the runaway wooer.

Her love affair is most serious with Kate, who had tried to be a scoffer and was therefore more than usually hard hit, and the complication that results is for a moment interestingly distressing. But the young man, famously honorable though he is, finds a way out when the young woman with whom he thought he was in love practically confesses that she is marrying him out of a sense of duty. There are explanations and Kate's real romance is prettily ended.

The story is deftly told with a variety of subtle shades and in a vein of superior romance. There is little that is conventional in scene, character or dialogue. Wallace Eddinger, who is another of the youngsters with ideas and a decidedly promising future, plays the hero with a sincerity that beautifully matches that of Miss Herne, and with the tinge of a Dublin brogue and the edge of a Dublin wit that are delightful. Assisting are Lois Frances Clark, who gave a finely if now and then consciously etched picture of Yankee primness that did not seem out of place in England; Hazel Lowry, whose ingenue would-be bride was especially well done, taking account of her experience, and Roy Fairchild, who placed a trifle too much emphasis on the pomposity of a curate, but succeeded in projecting the character effectively.

PRESIDENT SCOUTS BONAPARTE SPLIT

White House Lays the Story of Cabinet Friction to Wall Street.

TALE CALLED LUDICROUS

Reported Differences Over Policies of Government Declared Without Foundation.

Washington, D. C., June 14.—"The president and Attorney General Bonaparte intend to go out of office on the 4th of March and Mr. Bonaparte has just as little idea as the president of going out sooner."

This statement was made at the White house today in reply to rumors that there existed serious differences between the president and his attorney general that would probably lead to Mr. Bonaparte's leaving the cabinet soon after the presidential election.

The special differences cited in this connection related to the removal of District Attorney Ruick and United States Marshal Rounds of Idaho, which, it was declared, was opposed by Mr. Bonaparte and insisted upon by the president, and to alleged differences over the bringing of a suit against the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company.

"Removal Agreed On Long Ago."

At the White house today it was declared the removal of Ruick and Rounds was determined on six months ago, but it was deemed best to wait until certain suits, on which they were engaged, were concluded, and then to have Assistant Attorney General Cooley go to Idaho and while on the ground recommend who should be their successors.

Mr. Cooley's recommendations have been received and after the attorney general calls at the White house tomorrow the appointments will doubtless be agreed upon.

It is positively asserted there has never been the slightest difference of any kind between the president and the attorney general in regard to this matter, both agreeing the charges against Ruick and Rounds justified their removal.

Stories Are Called Ludicrous.

"A sample of the ludicrous inconsistency of these stories," it was said at the White house today, "is shown by what was said by the papers representing the Wall street views in the Mellen case, in which it was first of all asserted that a suit had been brought by Mr. Bonaparte against the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad company against the president's wish, and that the attorney general threatened to resign if he could not bring it.

"Two or three days later it was asserted the president had forced Mr. Bonaparte to bring suit to punish President Mellen because the Connecticut member of the republican national committee had not voted for the administration's policies.

"The fact was exactly the reverse. The president and Mr. Bonaparte had agreed over three months previously that the suit should be brought.

"Not a Suspicion of Trouble."

"There never had been the slightest question, except as to whether the suit should be brought in New York or Boston, and there never had been a suspicion of difference between the president and the attorney general."

It is said there are many cases in the department of justice with which the president is not familiar, but it so happened that in this case he was familiar with all the details and approved all that was done.

IDA TARBELL DENOUNCES MEN

Trade Union Only Hope of Woman Worker, She Declares.

PREPARE FOR 8 HOUR WAR.

Members of Chicago League Soon Will Demand Shorter Day.

Miss Ida Tarbell, foe and historian of the Standard Oil company, was the principal speaker at the monthly meeting of the Women's Trade Union league, held yesterday at 275 La Salle street.

"I never have been in a trade," said Miss Tarbell, "but I have toiled for more years than I would like to tell. And I've had to fight our common enemy—man.

"It has given me great pleasure to see women combining together in order to fight their battles better. One hundred years ago women had no opportunity for education and advancement, but the combination of the modern women for the purpose of demanding their rights has made it easier for you and me.

Unions Lighten Woman's Work.

"By your unions you make the world understand the things you are fighting for and you make the world better and happier. I hope you will be successful in everything good and right which you undertake."

Miss Tarbell is the guest of Mrs. Raymond Robins, president of the league.

Louis F. Post gave a talk on how books have served the cause of industrial freedom, and recommended to the league the reading of the bible, Tom Paine's works, "Mark Twain," and "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

Will Demand Eight Hour Day.

It was announced the league is to hold a meeting soon to discuss the best means to secure state enactment for an eight hour working day.

During the summer the league is to hold Saturday afternoon outings in the different parks of the city. The next meeting, July 12, will be held in Jackson or Washington park.

The league also has made arrangements to furnish public library books to members on Sunday, making use of a messenger squad to deliver the books to the different homes.

CHICAGO GAINS NEW PASTOR.

Call of Waveland Congregational Church to the Rev. Philip W. Yarrow of St. Louis Is Accepted.

A call to become the pastor of Waveland Avenue Congregational church has been accepted by the Rev. Philip W. Yarrow, who for six years has been pastor of Olive Branch Congregational church in St. Louis, Mo.

Dr. Yarrow read his resignation last night to his congregation in St. Louis at the completion of his sermon.

When he took charge of the St. Louis church, six years ago, it was in a feeble condition. With youthful enthusiasm he virtually built up the church.

GETS IN AUTO'S WAY; ARRESTED.

Man Who Suffers Slight Injury Is Taken Under Care of the Police.

H. O. Fay, who lives at 1705 Sheridan road, was arrested by Policeman T. G. Walsh of the Central detail station yesterday at Fifth avenue and Jackson boulevard after he had been struck by an automobile and slightly injured. Fay, who is 52 years old, imbibed during the day, according to the police, and his condition was such the police thought he had better be taken care of. A charge of disorderly conduct was made against him.

there are several points to consider if you wish to add significance to your gift and distinguish it from the merely perfunctory tokens. The prestige of the establishment from which your gift arrives should be perhaps the first consideration.

If the name of the house is one which yields to the recipient of the gift a spontaneous sense of added pleasure, by reason of her inborn confidence in the material and artistic superiority of its products—this point anticipates and covers every other question.

This degree of reliance upon the name of Peacock is practically hereditary in Chicago and the entire west, and is so well-nigh universal in great sections of the east and of many foreign countries that signifies more—to more people—in more places—than almost anything else that can be bought for giving.

At no time in our seventy-one years of continuous business life has the house shown so varied and excellent an assortment of our own and other famous products in Gold, Silver and Cut Glass, Sheffield and other Plate as are now at hand.

Never have our prices been more consistently moderate—their range being from seventy-five cents for a small Solid Silver Teaspoon to many thousands of dollars for single jeweled pieces.

Never have we better justified the pre-eminent repute of the house—never has the immemorial Peacock Guaranty been more appreciated—or so little needed.

Visitors are invited to rendezvous in the store with entire freedom from any implied obligation to purchase.

WHAT the next few days will bring forth in the matter of weather is not half so certain as what the convention will bring forth.

A CONSIDERABLE number of persons, it might be mentioned in passing, still believe Billik to be guilty.

MUSIC AND POLITICS.

It is wisely proposed to make music a conspicuous feature of the republican national convention. Upon the first day there will be a band concert preceding the session in which patriotic airs will play a prominent part. Upon the second day there will be a concert with a program of vocal and instrumental solos. Upon the third there will be a grand opera prelude. And if the convention should last another day there will be more music.

The local committee has done well to recognize the important influence of music in large gatherings. Plato recognized it long ago and affirms in his "Republic" that warlike airs inspire courage and calm, sedate airs tranquillity and gravity. Aristotle also declares that music inculcates religion, and morality, and obedience to laws, excites generous feelings and inspires patriotism. Burton not only declares that it is a sovereign remedy against melancholy but that it revives languishing souls, cheers up the countenance, expels austerity, and brings in hilarity, mitigates anger, appeases wrath, abates heaviness, removes spleen and hatreds, and that it is an emollient which all politicians approve.

It will be seen from Burton's catalogue of the merits of music that it is specially applicable to national conventions. It will remove the spleen and hatreds of the "allies," bring in hilarity for the victors, and appease the wrath of the vanquished. The latter will find, as Martin Luther found, that "by music many tribulations and evil thoughts are driven away."

TROLLEY CAR FATALITIES.

It was but a few days ago that a serious disaster happened upon the electric road near Aurora in this state. A day or two later a still more serious one occurred near Germantown, Pa., in which seven or eight persons were killed and forty injured. On Friday night last two electric cars, going at a high rate of speed, collided near Annapolis, Md., and eight persons were killed and twenty injured, some of them fatally.

These trolley road accidents are increasing with alarming frequency. Since the first of January last there have been few serious disasters on the steam railroads. The number of killed and injured is much smaller than during any preceding six months. On the other hand, the number of killed upon the electric roads is larger during this period and the number of injured greatly larger than upon the steam roads.

The electric roads are now using cars almost as long, wide, and heavy as those on the steam roads. Their routes are coming to be almost as long. Their speed through rural districts is well up to the average steam railroad speed. They should be handled and equipped and manned as carefully, therefore, as the steam railroads.

That they are not is demonstrated by the fatality lists. The electric roadbeds cannot compare with those constructed for steam trains. The rails in most cases are too light for the weight they have to bear and offer little resistance to the tendency of the swaying car to leave them. It is evident, also, that there is not proper discipline maintained and that too many inexperienced or inefficient men are employed.

In every one of the recent disasters it is clear that the necessary precautions were not taken and that the train dispatching was loose and confused.

As electric trains are now competing with steam trains in many parts of the country, their management should be as careful in all its details and as prompt and efficient in its executive oversight as that of the steam trains. The management of the latter has long been the subject of governmental authority and restraint, and public opinion has been so rigorous in its expression that there has been manifest improvement in all directions looking to public safety.

The fatality record shows that it is time for similar measures in the case of the electric roads.

THE PERILS OF ALTITUDE.

The eastern democracy has learned that the democratic national convention is to be up in the air geographically if not politically. Denver, it has been discovered, is 5,280 feet above sea level, and the voice of Tammany can be heard faintly calling for help.

Tammany cares nothing about the sea level, per se, and Denver could separate itself from both salt and fresh water by two miles instead of one if the matter rested there and had no disagreeable consequences. Unfortunately it has.

Portions of the eastern democracy admit a liking for the trencher and a fondness for the flowing bowl. When they are informed that persons moving suddenly into high altitudes must avoid excitement and worry, shun heavy eating and the social cup, and get plenty of sleep they are filled with fear and view with alarm.

Tammany sees itself eating two crackers and drinking a bowl of milk at 7 p. m. and retiring to rest at 8 p. m. This is not the gay life, but it has been recommended to the eastern democracy as the safe life by a New York physician recognized as a climatologist.

Medical advice cautions the convention against excitement, and it is suggested that at the thrilling moment when the destinies of the party have been settled and the nominees named some revered elder statesman of democracy whose words carry weight arise quickly, quiet the assemblage with outstretched hands, and say:

"Gentlemen, remember the doctor. Let us tiptoe out of the hall and go down to Omaha, where it is safe to yell."

DIPLOMATS AT THE CONVENTION.

Not the least interesting among the distinguished visitors to the city in connection with the republican national convention will be the representatives of the diplomatic corps.

The company will include James Bryce, already profoundly versed in American political affairs, and M. Jusserand, the scholarly ambassador from the other side of the English channel. They will lend dignity and add interest to the great gathering.

But nothing they see or hear will have any influence upon the political institutions or machinery of the two nations they represent. With another group, however, the convention may have instructional value.

The director of the Bureau of American Republics has arranged for seats for the representatives of the countries on this continent whose form of government to some extent is modeled after that of the United States.

To them there will be more than mere curious interest or friendly feeling in attendance upon a nominating convention. They will see the machinery of politics in actual working. They will have first hand information regarding methods which are perfectly familiar to citizens of the United States but are not so well known in the neighboring republics.

But whether as interested observers or possible learners, the members of the diplomatic corps are welcomed to Chicago. The freedom of the city is theirs. There will be due appreciation of their friendly courtesy in lending their presence at the time of a great nominating convention.

ICE CREAM PARLORS.

The idea of licensing the ice cream parlors is a commendable one. The need of some sort of regulation has been felt by many people for a long time. A business naturally harmless has been brought into disrepute by the misdeeds of a certain class of proprietors. The cases of luring little girls have been so numerous as to arouse a strong sentiment against the persons who have permitted such shameful practices.

The influence of dealers should be manifested in stern condemnation of the disreputables and in demand for their vigorous prosecution rather than in any attempt to stem the tide of popular sentiment which finds in the license plan a satisfactory way of future regulation.

The general principle of regulation of places of public resort is well established. It is proper regulation rather than revenue that is sought in the case of the ice cream parlors. They have laid themselves open to just attack for the reasons already mentioned. The revocation of a license or two would soon check the vicious tendencies which have been marked here and there.

There have been definite charges, too, that much of the stuff sold as ice cream is manufactured under insanitary conditions, and that some of the parlors offer their patrons this tainted product. The license will be a helpful bit of mechanism for due restraint in this direction, also. An automatic deterrent of this type is a good thing. The license fee need not be large. But the possibility of losing the privilege of keeping an ice cream parlor along with the natural suspicion attending a man thus punished will have a wholesome effect in checking the evils which have brought the business under the ban of popular feeling.

It is to be said that no doubt there are many ice cream parlors in the city which are conducted in a clean and wholesome way, both morally and physically. But there can be no discrimination in the matter. The misdeeds of the guilty have brought the business under suspicion. A system of licenses will have a good influence in regulating the bad. The good must share the burden in the larger interest of society.

A SANE FOURTH.

As the anniversary of independence again approaches a sane fourth of July is as usual a topic for discussion. This year the Century dignifies it with a conspicuous place in its current issue. The writer quotes the fatality statistics of last Independence day, using the record of 102 deaths and 1,489 injuries compiled by the Journal of the American Medical Association, although the number is understated, and lays special stress upon the effect of all this noise upon the sick and the after consequences to victims whose injuries are not at first regarded as severe.

The writer also makes copious references to the celebration of national holidays in European, South American, and even Asiatic cities, and shows by comparison how much more impressive and beautiful and much less dangerous they are than ours. In a word, the writer pronounces our "bloody fourth" an "uncivilized holiday," and pathetically inquires whether steps cannot be taken to civilize it.

Undoubtedly the celebration of fourth of July originally was civilized and as sane as any one could desire, but in its evolution the celebration has suffered a change, not into "something rich and strange" but something meaningless and murderous. It is doubtful, however, whether the old time program could be restored now except in quiet, old fashioned places, without being voted a bore. No one cares now to listen to the reading of the declaration of independence or to a two hour oration on the virtues of the fathers and the duties of their descendants. And yet the present manner of celebration is unquestionably uncivilized. The continuous discharge of firearms, firecrackers, torpedoes, toy pistols, and other agents for killing and maiming is certainly inappropriate, for it has no meaning as applied to the day. Its object is mere noise and noise is as appropriate one day as another. In the large cities of the country there is not a feature of fourth of July celebrations which has either direct or indirect reference to the anniversary of American independence.

To this extent, therefore, the present fourth of July celebration is uncivilized. It is mere noise, accompanied by the killing of some hundreds and wounding of some thousands, and general discomfort. But how shall it be civilized? Clearly not by a return to the old fashioned methods. They would not be tolerated. Municipal authorities seek to prevent fatalities by forbidding the use or sale of certain dangerous noise producing agencies and also forbidding the discharge of guns, pistols, and firecrackers except in large open spaces. But the use and the sale continue as openly as if there were no law against them, and streets and alleys ring with noise for days and little or no effort is made to check it. Evidently laws and ordinances are of no avail to civilize the Fourth, for they are not enforced, and the fatality list steadily grows. Is there no way of civilizing the fourth of July?

The Small Boy and the Fourth.

Appeals for a sane fourth are now due again, and they are coming; but unless he is sharply watched the small boy is bound to be just as crazy, just as noisy, and just as patriotic as usual on that glorious day.—St. Louis Republic.

EMPEROR WILLIAM celebrates today the twentieth anniversary of his accession to the throne.

His reign, heralded as an era of war, by reason of the ambitions for military glory attributed to him, has proved an epoch of peace, and while at the time of the Moorish imbroglio he found it necessary to metaphorically rattle his saber in its scabbard to get the recognition of Germany's rights in northwestern Africa which the other powers had manifested a disposition to ignore, he has on at least two occasions used the influence he possesses as ruler of a mighty empire and as master of the most perfect fighting machine of the age to prevent war.

Some of his many foreign critics are fond of alleging that by his policy he has isolated Germany, and therefore weakened her. But it is ridiculous to talk of isolation as long as the triple alliance remains in existence, the bonds with Austria, in particular, being of a closer and more intimate character today than ever.

Moreover, there is every reason to believe Roumania, with its magnificently equipped army, and Sweden as well, are identified with the triple alliance, while the friendship of the padishah and indeed of the entire Mahommedan world, which the kaiser has acquired to an altogether extraordinary degree, would prove of immense value to Germany in the event of her becoming involved in any conflict with a coalition consisting of England, France, and Russia, all three of which have millions of Moslems subject to their rule, whose insurrection in deference to prompting from Constantinople would prove a terrible handicap to the military resources of the three powers concerned.

It is thanks to this friendship with Turkey, inaugurated and cultivated by the kaiser, that Germany has acquired something akin to a monopoly of the foreign trade of the Ottoman empire, and that German commerce in the Levant, insignificant twenty years ago, is now of immense value and importance. Emperor William has likewise transformed Germany from the foot of the list of the naval powers into the one second only to Great Britain, and superior to either France or the United States.

He is the creator and father of the German navy. As to the part the emperor has played in the progress and the development of Germany, it may safely be asserted no German sovereign has been more closely identified with every form of activity of Teuton life since the days of Frederick the Great.

Finally, it may be pointed out that the kaiser's home life has been not only irreproachable but a model to his subjects, and that he and his consort are mainly responsible for the religious revival in Germany, one of the features of his twenty years' reign.

All this may perhaps not be new. But it is timely to call attention to it today, on the twentieth anniversary of his accession to the throne, and in reply to his many critics.

As the duke of Norfolk is the premier peer, the premier duke, and the premier earl of the British realm, as well as hereditary earl marshal and president of the College of Heralds, and of the Court of Chivalry of England, the birth of a son and heir to his many honors and dignities and to his vast estates is a matter calling for mention in these columns.

It is not the first son of the duke. By his former marriage he had a boy, who died six years ago, but who was both mentally and physically afflicted, being deaf, dumb, and blind, as well as an imbecile.

In spite of this, his father was devoted to him, and even when holding government office, which necessitated his being in London, would lease a place in the suburbs for his boy so as to be able to spend an hour with him every day.

Many were the pilgrimages the duke, who is a devout Catholic, undertook to Lourdes and to the Holy Land, in the hope of obtaining from Providence some alleviation of the lad's condition.

But it was all in vain. And when the young fellow died, in his twenty-third year, the duke gave him an entirely white funeral, just as they do to infants, a pathetic indication that young Lord Arundel, though he had attained manhood in years, had nevertheless remained in all other respects an innocent child.

Two years afterwards, in 1904, the duke married his second wife, Gwendolen Constable Maxwell, eldest daughter and heiress of the seventeenth Lord Herries.

The duchess gave birth to a girl in 1905, who, though debarred from the succession of her father's peerages, would have inherited through her mother the barony of Herries, and would have become a peeress in her own right.

His prospects in this respect are, however, terminated through the birth of her little brother at Arundel castle on June 1. The boy, christened on the following day by Father Bernard Vaughan, brother of the late cardinal of that name, received the names of Bernard Marmaduke, the former being one of the names of his godfather and uncle, Lord Edmund Talbot, the only brother of the duke.

Curiously enough, the child was born on the birthday of Lord Edmund, until now regarded as heir presumptive to the dukedom, who, being rich in his own right and having a grown up son, is likely to receive a peerage of his own from the crown.

His wealth comes to him from the seventeenth and last Catholic earl of Shrewsbury, who, dying unmarried and having succeeded in disentailing most of his immense property, bequeathed it to Lord Edmund Howard, younger son of his kinsman, the fourteenth duke of Norfolk, stipulating that Lord Edmund, then a mere boy, should adopt the name and the arms of Talbot in lieu of those of Howard.

The earldom of Shrewsbury went to another distant kinsman, the third earl of Talbot, a Protestant, who thus became eighteenth earl of Shrewsbury, and at once instituted legal proceedings to restore to the earldom the property alienated to Lord Edmund Talbot. The suit was unsuccessful.

Lord Edmund is a familiar figure in parliament, having sat for years in the house of commons for Chichester. He is a soldier by profession, and distinguished himself as a cavalry officer during the Boer war under Gen. Sir John French.

Between himself and his brother the closest and most affectionate relations always have obtained, and that he has given evidence of no disappointment in the birth of the little earl of Arundel, which deprives him of the succession to his brother's honors, is perhaps best shown by the fact he officiated as the child's sponsor at his christening.

It is the first occasion in hundreds of years of an heir to the dukedom of Norfolk being born at Arundel castle, once the home of Alfred the Great, which alone of all castles in Europe endows its owner with a peerage—namely: the earldom of Arundel.

Every one of its proprietors has added to its beauties, but at no expense to his revenues, for hundreds of years ago a strip of real estate in London, off the Strand, now of immense value and producing an enormous income, was set aside with the proviso that all the money yielded by its rentals should be expended exclusively upon the maintenance and improvement of Arundel castle.

Arundel street and Norfolk street, Strand, are comprised in the real estate in question. The castle figures at length in Doomsday book. King William Rufus is on historic record as having celebrated Easter there in the year 1079.

It was the dower house of King Henry I.'s widow, and the headquarters of Empress Mathilda when she was asserting her claim to the British throne in opposition to Stephen.

It passed into the possession of the present owners, the Howards, through the heiress of the Fitzalans, who married the fourth duke of Norfolk, and became mother of the fifth duke, beheaded on account of his romantic championship of Mary Queen of Scots.

The present duke is 61 years of age, is the head of the Roman Catholic laity in England, derives an income of nearly $2,000,000 a year from rentals alone as ground landlord of districts in London and of nearly the whole of Sheffield, and is the most democratic, unassuming, generous, and universally respected member of the British peerage, of which he is the chief.

HIS LETTERS.

IX.

MADRID.

Dear One: The bugle call sounds from the neighboring barracks, the Ave Maria rings out from the bells. Sunset—the hour of the day consecrated to you. Not that thoughts of you do not come with everything beautiful, but especially when the sky is all ablaze with the glory of sunset, and the light fades out in the west (hastening to be with you) do I think of you.

Every nation, not so old as to have grown beyond the faith of childhood, has stories of a beautiful land somewhere in the west where there are always sunshine and soft airs and fragrant flowers and music that exhales from the ground itself. Sometimes it is the Elysian fields, sometimes the Isles of the Blest, the Hesperides, sometimes it bears a soft Indian name, as when Hiawatha launches his canoe of birch bark for the Land of the Hereafter. Sometimes the clouds seem to roll back and give glimpses of a celestial city shining in pearl and gold, but it is always westward. Thither go those shadowy heroes on the border line of fable, Arthur, to return some day; Ulysses, after the long wanderings, his return, and a peaceful reign, feels old age coming on, and before it is too late calls his mariners:

Sitting well in order, smite the sounding billows.
It may be that the gulf will wash us down.
It may be we shall reach the Happy Isles,
And see the great Achilles whom we knew.

So he sails westward. Columbus feels the same mighty impulse when he sails westward to find a new world.

And I—I see to westward more than the glories of a Castilian sunset. I, too, dream of the Happy Isles that lie that way. But the sunlight goes so fast that I could never reach it were it not that some one held it for me in her dear hands. May the royal gold and purple never turn for her to cold gray mist.

The skies here are azure all the day, but at evening the clouds come trooping in like wayward children to stand around the deathbed of their parent sun and inherit his splendor. This they squander soon, and pass into darkness. The weather of Madrid, like that of other mountain heights, is hot in the sun, cold in the shade. By sunshine, and in moonlight, the snowy mountains, not so far away, look beautiful.

I have visited most of the show places in Madrid. I have not seen much of the interior of the royal palace. Sunday I attended service in its royal chapel. The music is meant to be, and probably is, the finest in Spain, and the chapel is a gem. The most noticeable feature is, perhaps, the immense monolithic columns of black and white marble. The opera house is shabby, but better adapted for its purpose than the one in Paris, as it is possible both to see and to hear.

The senate house is a long, low building not far from the palace. The assembly hall where the senate meets has a cheerful look, being well carpeted, and having its elliptical walls painted in white and gold. The members sit on plush covered benches, facing the broad central aisle. The president's desk is on a raised platform, and the throne is immediately behind under an immense canopy. The opening of the cortes is impressive as a friend describes it to me. A few minutes after 2 a big bell is heard in the other part of the building, and into the hall, then empty, come two men in gorgeous red velvet robes, bearing on front and back the arms of Castile and Leon. Each man wears a red velvet hat with a long white plume on it, and bears a silver mace. Entering from doors behind the platform they proceed the whole length of the hall till they reach the door at the opposite end. This door has a red velvet curtain hung before it, and a gold bar in front of that, and is only for royalty.

When the two heralds reach the closed door, they turn and bow to the presiding officer, who by this time is in his place. He, ringing a silver bell, pronounces the session open. The reading of the minutes is proceeded with, rendered inaudible by the loud greetings of the senators, who have followed the heralds into the hall. Immediately after the reading of the minutes the cabinet enters by the same door as the heralds. Each of the nine men wears full court dress, glittering with stars and crosses and ribbons. They take their seat on the ministerial bench to the right of the president, a bench upholstered with blue instead of red, and having the arms of Spain embroidered in silver thereon.

Later the ministry files out and goes over to the congress, the building of which is on the Carrera San Geronimo, conspicuous with Corinthian columns in front and two bronze lions made of captured cannon guarding a long flight of steps. It is a peculiarity not only of the buildings of the senate and congress but of the art gallery, the palace, and many others, that the front door is considered too good for ordinary occasions and a side door is used. In the case of the congress deputies use a side door, while the people have to use a back door, going up a winding staircase and through narrow back passages. The hall of congress is much larger than that of the senate, but dingy.

It is strange how little variation there is in human faces. I am constantly bewildered by meeting familiar faces in the theater or in the streets. I saw a young duchess at the Español the other evening—it was a gala night, the king and queen were there, and all the nobility of Madrid—and I was almost certain that I had known her all my life. Then in the art gallery faces of friends look out at me from canvases centuries old. Perhaps the strangest thing is how a touch more of the painter's brush will transform a merely good or pretty face into one of sublime beauty. There is one in particular, the Virgin of the Rosary. Feature for feature it is the likeness of a girl I used to know. I had never thought of her as even pretty, but the painting is beautiful, one of the gems of the collection.

It's an undefinable difference, "the little more and how much it is! The little less and what worlds away!" So sometimes a face that has become familiar to us suddenly takes on a strange new glory, either because our eyes become open to the beauty that is really there—like Lancelot who turned and saw—

The maiden standing in the dewy light,
He had not dreamed she was so beautiful!

Or because the heart reflects a light of its own on features that only in that rosy heart light look beautiful, like dull sunset clouds in the glow. It was in the first way that I suddenly found in your face the beauty that was always there. It is in the second way that I hope my plainness will find favor in your sight.

In ending I want to tell you some of the peculiarities of the life here. There is much that is delightful because it is so queer. A decidedly necessary person to be introduced to is the night watchman. For the house key is so large that one could not possibly put it in his pocket and the watchman carries all the keys of the street. He is a picturesque creature, with a long, sharp pike, with a hook from which hangs an old fashioned lantern. When one comes home at night one must stand before the door and shout "Sereno!" The watchman will appear in due season and unlock the door. As an English resident explained to me, "If I don't shout loud enough I'll not get in, and if I shout too loud another policeman will carry me off. I must learn the proper means by experience."

Sereno is our word serene, peaceful, and the watchman is so called because he keeps everything serene. If I hadn't been introduced to him I couldn't ever be out late. Our watchman's name is Manuel. At our door is a little peephole about the proper height for the maid's eye, and closed by a brass plate with a strong spring. When any one rings the maid hurries to the door and says, "Quien?" (Who?) The answer must be "Paz" (Peace), or "Gente de paz" (Peaceful folk). Then the maid opens the wicket to inspect (literally) the outsider, and if the errand is satisfactory the door is opened.

O, the beautiful sunset over the plains of Castile. I turn away from a sky of gold and purple with the outlines of the mountains plain against it to take the last light of day to finish my letter to you. The light grows dimmer. I can scarcely see the words I write, though I see you far away. Good night. May no evil come to you or yours this night.

Dispatching Trains by Telephone.

Big Rock, Ill., June 13.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In THE TRIBUNE of June 6 I noticed an article on the displacing of the telegraph by the telephone for train dispatching, in which the writer said: "Its gradual displacement in favor of something better deserves more than passing notice." This is a statement with which any one familiar with the comparative merits of the two systems cannot agree. The telephone is more expensive, both to install and maintain; it is no safer, and an actual test has demonstrated that it takes nearly twice as long to handle a certain amount of business with the telephone as it would with the telegraph. The writer further says: "Any one can use it, where the telegraph requires a specially trained operator." This, instead of being an advantage, is a source of danger, for the reason that the handling of trains should not be intrusted to untrained employés without actual railroad experience. Railroads through its use will be able to secure unskilled and incompetent telephone operators at less wages than they are now paying telegraph operators. A certain western railroad is at the present time pursuing such a course, displacing telegraph operators with telephone operators at less wages. There is room for more investigation along this line. Men and Women Wanted in the West.

Milford, Ia., June 6.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—We who live in a farming community in the middle western states read with wonder and pity of the suffering of thousands of willing workers, both men and women, from want of food. Here, either in small towns or on farms, it is almost impossible to get help without paying exorbitant prices, and as for getting girls or women to do housework, it is next to impossible. There is not a town, I dare say, in western Iowa, Minnesota, or the Dakotas but from ten to twenty men can find steady work at wages according to their ability. They at least will have plenty of good food and will be paid for all the work done. There is any amount of ditching and tileing to be done this wet season, and not half men enough to do it. But the average city man is too afraid of starting before 7 or 8 o'clock in the morning and is particular to quit exactly at 6. On our farms there are many idle hours or days caused by rain, etc. So when it is good weather the farmer and his men have to hustle and put in long hours. But on the whole a man does not have to kill himself on any western farm. And we can use thousands of your idle hungry men if they are willing to earn what the farmer can pay. Let them begin at the bottom and learn as they have to in the city and be willing to take pay accordingly. Come west, men. If you can't buy a ticket, walk till you get a job at some price, then come to western Iowa, Minnesota, or Dakota, and get a new start. J. S. W.

Pleads for a Cleaner City.

Chicago, June 13.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I have read with interest your editorial, "Art and Cleanliness." It is pleasing to all people interested in the fine arts to hear that Chicago will some day be the art center of the world, and that this country is destined to become the greatest commercial and industrial nation, but, as you editorial says in regard to art, there is much preparatory work to be done in Chicago before the arts can flourish or rise to the height to which they are destined to climb.

The first step to be taken should be to form a club or society composed of all the people—especially among artists—interested in cleanliness and the future welfare of our city. The club should hold open air meetings in all parts of the city and preach the new gospel of cleanliness. It should be the duty of all members to use as much of their spare time as possible in investigating the neighborhood in which they reside and to request their neighbors to keep their premises clean, especially in regard to those places where garbage cans are placed and where ashes are sometimes allowed to be scattered.

It is a common sight to see a pile of ashes, decorated with tin cans and other rubbish, where flies and disease germs quickly breed. It should be the duty of all members to see that all things opposed to cleanliness are removed as soon as possible. No doubt this would be a herculean task, but continually hammering on the heads of the people and explaining to them the benefits they would derive from keeping their premises clean would soon bring about a miraculous change. All this would be brought about by holding meetings open to all, where intelligent men and women would speak to the people on every phase of this subject—cleanliness.

All that is needed is a start and many people will be surprised that the work had not been begun long ago when they see the wonderful results.

I hope THE TRIBUNE will continue to hammer away on the subject and make the sparks fly, for the sparks burn and should they fall on a disinterested person he will soon follow the great white flag of cleanliness.

Grant Park Plan Criticised.

Chicago, June 13.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Having recently read that "Chicagoans are expected to study the Olmsted model for Grant park, now on exhibition at the Art institute," I made it a point to look at this "model" with a view of obtaining a truer idea of what is contemplated in the way of a park, from a practical as well as an artistic standpoint.

In general outline the Olmsted "model" would appear to be all that could be desired. The larger buildings shown in the design, such as the Field museum, Art institute, and Crerar library, occupy splendid locations, while the driveways, walks, fountains, shade trees, etc., are all handsomely displayed.

Truly, Grant park, if constructed on lines following the design now on exhibition, together with a few important changes, will outrival in beauty and grandeur many of the finest parks of this or any other country, and will be one of the greatest possible factors in creating a "city beautiful."

Some years ago there lived in an eastern state a personage possessed of much wealth. Being a person of large means he set about to build a palatial home for himself and family. To accomplish this he purchased a large tract of land, beautifully located, and capable of being converted into parks, driveways, lakes, conservatories, flower beds, etc. —the whole being encompassed by wooded hills, groves, dells, glens, and many other features of beauty, making it a paradise. A portion of said grounds consisted of a farm, on which were the usual buildings, such as a house, barn, and numerous outbuildings of various kinds, etc., features that, if not removed, would prove out of artistic harmony with the new home as designed by the architect.

The owner, being interrogated regarding the disposition of these objectionable features, replied that he proposed to let them remain undisturbed.

While standing near the park "model" the other day I noticed that a large section at the north end, representing probably about one-fifth of the whole outer park area, appeared to be lacking in artistic design. Inquiring of the workman in charge in what manner the section in question was to be beautified, he replied "freight cars." Whew! Freight cars in a park in the heart of this wonderful city! This seems incredible and would indeed be a reprehensible situation. Is it true that so inartistic a plan is under serious contemplation? The noise, dirt, and various other obnoxious features ever present under such conditions would be deplorable. Such glaring defects would outclass the inartistic ideas of the eastern person with his "outbuildings" previously mentioned.

Aside from destroying the beauty and symmetry of the new park, such a condition would subject the artists and builders to much deserved unfavorable comment.

Don't do it, gentlemen; don't do it! For aside from the rebuke that would be heaped upon you for pursuing such a course, you would thereby openly acknowledge, what is manifestly untrue—viz.: That the interests of one railway are more potential than the wishes of the 2,500,000 people comprising the second city of the western hemisphere.

If you, as a park board, are fortified with the necessary authority to clear the lake front of the offensive freight railway traffic now existing there, by all means set to work to accomplish it before you put in force any plans for the building of this park. Now is the time to take this matter under serious consideration and to act for the best interests of the city.

Some ten years ago, when the reconstruction of the older section of what is now known as Grant park was planned, former Mayor George B. Swift assumed to carry on the negotiations. The Illinois Central railway company, it is said, agreed to fill in the section lying between its tracks and Michigan avenue to the street level and to lower its tracks to the necessary depth. Had this company carried out its agreement it would have left the view of Lake Michigan unobstructed. That the present condition of this section of the park is unsatisfactory every one acknowledges.

To make this new park all it should be I would respectfully request that the park board include in its final plans the following recommendations:

1. Remove all railway freight traffic from the lake front from the mouth of the Chicago river to Twelfth street.
2. Insist upon the removal of all railway tracks and other obstructions between the river and Twelfth street, except such as are needed in the operation of the suburban service.
3. The introduction of electricity in the operation of all suburban traffic should, in this connection, be insisted upon.
4. Compel the lowering of the suburban tracks to a depth sufficient to make possible the construction of both sections of this new park on a level with Michigan avenue.

It is imperative that this should be done, since otherwise the beauties of the outer portion of the park will necessarily be largely hidden from view and the perspective grandeur will be shamefully sacrificed.

Discrimination in Pig Iron Prices.

Chicago, June 12.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Why does pig iron sell for $12 a ton in Birmingham, Ala., and $16.50 a ton in Chicago, when it can be produced at a lower price at lake points than in Alabama? As this condition does exist, how can the manufacturer in Chicago compete with the southern manufacturer outside of the Chicago district, and would it not be better policy to get at the real cause why the Chicago machinery manufacturers do not secure the southwestern and southern trade, rather than to blame the railroads discriminating against Chicago in freight rates? It is not possible to pay $12 a ton for pig iron in Alabama, add two freight rates, and expect to compete for southwestern and southern business.

"Do you think I need it?"

"Yes; it looks pretty long."

"Well, how is the boss barber on hair trimming? Is he pretty good?"

"Yes, he's pretty good, all right. But why?"

"Well, he trimmed my hair yesterday."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

New York World.]

Being a person of large means he set about to build a palatial home for himself and family. To accomplish this he purchased a large tract of land, beautifully located, and capable of being converted into parks, driveways, lakes, conservatories, flower beds, etc. —the whole being encompassed by wooded hills, groves, dells, glens, and many other features of beauty, making it a paradise. A portion of said grounds consisted of a farm, on which were the usual buildings, such as a house, barn, and numerous outbuildings of various kinds, etc., features that, if not removed, would prove out of artistic harmony with the new home as designed by the architect.

The owner, being interrogated regarding the disposition of these objectionable features, replied that he proposed to let them remain undisturbed.

While standing near the park "model" the other day I noticed that a large section at the north end, representing probably about one-fifth of the whole outer park area, appeared to be lacking in artistic design. Inquiring of the workman in charge in what manner the section in question was to be beautified, he replied "freight cars." Whew! Freight cars in a park in the heart of this wonderful city! This seems incredible and would indeed be a reprehensible situation. Is it true that so inartistic a plan is under serious contemplation? The noise, dirt, and various other obnoxious features ever present under such conditions would be deplorable. Such glaring defects would outclass the inartistic ideas of the eastern person with his "outbuildings" previously mentioned.

Aside from destroying the beauty and symmetry of the new park, such a condition would subject the artists and builders to much deserved unfavorable comment.

Don't do it, gentlemen; don't do it! For aside from the rebuke that would be heaped upon you for pursuing such a course, you would thereby openly acknowledge what is manifestly untrue—viz.: That the interests of one railway are more potential than the wishes of the 2,500,000 people comprising the second city of the western hemisphere.

If you, as a park board, are fortified with the necessary authority to clear the lake front of the offensive freight railway traffic now existing there, by all means set to work to accomplish it before you put in force any plans for the building of this park. Now is the time to take this matter under serious consideration and to act for the best interests of the city.

Some ten years ago, when the reconstruction of the older section of what is now known as Grant park was planned, former Mayor George B. Swift assumed to carry on the negotiations. The Illinois Central railway company, it is said, agreed to fill in the section lying between its tracks and Michigan avenue to the street level and to lower its tracks to the necessary depth. Had this company carried out its agreement it would have left the view of Lake Michigan unobstructed. That the present condition of this section of the park is unsatisfactory every one acknowledges.

To make this new park all it should be I would respectfully request that the park board include in its final plans the following recommendations:

OFFICIALS FEAR PANAMA ELECTION

President Is Apprehensive of Trouble on Isthmus After Hearing Reports.

TROOPS HELD IN RESERVE

War Department Prepared to Act and Minister Squiers Fully Instructed for Crisis.

Washington, D. C., June 14.—[Special.]—In finishing up his labors at the war department before his resignation takes place on July 1, Secretary Taft will have a vast amount to do in adjusting affairs at Panama, so that the digging of the canal and the settlement of various controversies in connection with the project may proceed uninterruptedly.

White House Officials Worried.

In this connection the fact may be emphasized that the administration looks with considerable apprehension at the approaching Panama election, and it is known that President Roosevelt, Secretary Taft, Secretary Root, and Secretary Metcalf believe that if trouble in those parts can be avoided it will only be by the narrowest margin. Since the visit of Minister Squiers of Panama to Washington last week, at which time Col. Gorgas of the canal commission was also in Washington, all these officials have drawn long faces and assumed a dubious mien when the Panama situation was mentioned.

A fresh force of marines has been dispatched to the isthmus and another force is being held in reserve. There will also be a warship at either end of the canal route.

Minister Rushes to Isthmus.

Minister Squiers has returned posthaste to the isthmus with explicit instructions as to how to act and carry himself during the apparently impending crisis brought on by the elections. The members of the Panama commission have already received a great many cable instructions from here. There are in the neighborhood of 30,000 Americans at work in the canal zone whose attitude in connection with the elections it is necessary to guard carefully.

MAIL POUCH THIEF CAUGHT, BUT RELEASED BY POLICE.

Kansas City Officials Arrest Negro and Discover Too Late That They Really Wanted Him.

Kansas City, Mo., June 14.—That the Kansas City police department had under arrest last week the thief who stole the missing mail pouch from Los Angeles, which contained money and valuables in excess of $50,000, but released him because of no definite charge against him, was brought out today by the investigation made by the government inspectors. The government men today sent broadcast throughout the United States descriptions of the man.

The pouch was stolen, it develops, from the platform of the Union depot on the night of Saturday, June 6. The following morning a patrolman arrested a suspicious negro. At police headquarters he gave the name of Charles Stewart. The desk sergeant took a large amount of money and several valuable articles of jewelry from him and he was ordered booked for investigation.

Later a lawyer called at the station and was admitted to see the negro. The charge against him was changed to vagrancy, the lawyer was given an order, on the desk sergeant for $200, and the next morning the negro was released in the police court. The negro was ordered to leave town.

After stealing the valuable mail pouch the man is believed to have carried it to a secure place, where it was cut open, rifled of its contents, and destroyed. The money and valuables are believed to be hidden in this city.

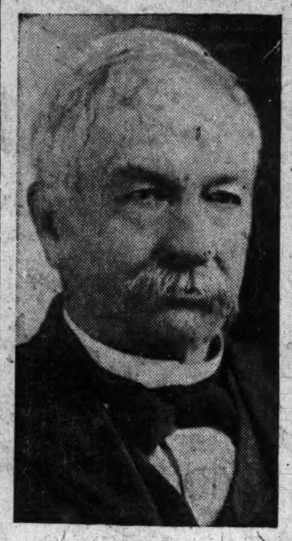

IOWA STUDENT IS DROWNED.

Canoe Strikes Submerged Tree and Youth Loses Life—Girl Companion Rescued.

DROWNINGS OF THE YEAR.....324

Iowa City, Ia., June 14.—[Special.]—Byron Plauts, aged 23, of Lisbon, an engineering student in the University of Iowa, was drowned in the Iowa river tonight when his canoe struck a submerged tree. Miss Elvia Lewis, his companion, clung to the boat and was rescued by Mark Hyland, an Iowa football star, and Sumner Chase, an athlete.

Leader in G. A. R. Dies at Pittsfield.

COL. A. C. MATTHEWS.

Pittsfield, Ill., June 14.—[Special.]—Col. A. C. Matthews, soldier and politician, died at his home here tonight.

Many high political offices were held by Col. Matthews, among them being controller of the treasury, to which place he was appointed by President Harrison.

Col. Matthews was born in Pike county, Ill., on March 22, 1833. He was graduated from Illinois college in 1855 and was admitted to the bar in 1858. He abandoned his law practice at Pittsfield to enlist in the army and was elected captain of the Ninety-ninth Illinois volunteers. He rose to the rank of colonel and was mustered out in August, 1865.

The appointment as collector of internal revenue was given to him in 1869, and later he became supervisor for the district composed of Illinois, Wisconsin, and Michigan.

In 1876 Col. Matthews was elected to the state legislature, but resigned. He was elected again to the legislature in 1878. He resigned the second time when Gov. Hamilton appointed him Circuit judge to fill a vacancy caused by the death of Judge Higbee, the term expiring in 1885.

Col. Matthews' third election to the legislature was in 1888. During this term of office he was chosen speaker of the house, which office he held until he was appointed controller of the treasury in 1889. The delegates to the republican state convention in 1904 discussed Col. Matthews as a lieutenant governor nominee possibility.

The Illinois G. A. R. elected Mr. Matthews state commander in 1907, his term expiring at the time of the recent encampment in Quincy.

WRITES OF SHERIDAN AND DIES.

Capt. Henry Greiner's Life Ends Day After Completing Biography of Lifelong Friend.

Capt. Henry C. Greiner, who died aged 81 years, was buried yesterday. Funeral services were conducted at the residence in Chicago Lawn by the Rev. G. H. Daniel of the Congregational church.

Capt. Greiner was a schoolmate and lifelong friend of Gen. Phil Sheridan and also a friend of President McKinley. He raised two companies for the civil war in Somerset and served through the war as captain of company G, One Hundred and Sixtieth Ohio infantry. He removed to Chicago Lawn in 1892.

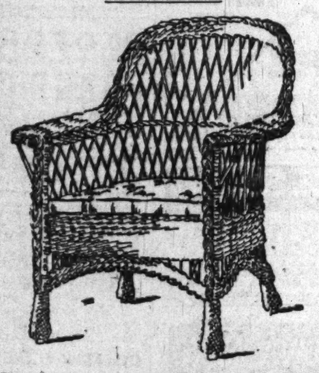

The day before his death he finished writing a biography of Sheridan entitled "Gen. Phil Sheridan as I Knew Him; Playmate, Comrade, Friend." Gen. Sheridan presented Capt. Greiner with the saddle used in the famous ride to Winchester.

OBITUARY.

FREDERICK ARTHUR STANLEY, earl of Derby, is dead in London. The earl was born on Jan. 15, 1841. He married Lady Constance Villiers, eldest daughter of the fourth earl of Clarendon, in 1864. He was lord of the admiralty in 1868, financial secretary for war, and later secretary for war. He held the offices of secretary for the colonies and president of the board of trade. As Lord Stanley he was governor general of Canada in 1888-'93.

HOSPITAL AWAITS PALE CITY BANDS

Finishing Touches Put on Permanent Camp Maintained by 'Tribune' Readers.

FIRST VISIT THIS WEEK.

Ernest Bicknell, Though Called by Red Cross, Aids Inauguration of Work.

They put on the finishing touches at the new dormitory building of THE TRIBUNE'S permanent summer hospital yesterday. Miss R. B. Holmes, who has general charge of the hospital work, went out to Algonquin Saturday night and, with the housekeeper, spent Sunday in a whirl of sweeping and setting things to rights.

It was not an ideal way to spend Sunday, but it was necessary, for the workmen have just left the building, and it had to be put in readiness to receive its first consignment of visitors—ten boys and girls from the Chicago tenements who will be "rounded up" at their homes today and taken out forty miles into the country to the beautiful spot on the bank of the Fox river which has been turned over to THE TRIBUNE hospital by the bureau of charities.

Ernest P. Bicknell, superintendent of the bureau, also spent the day at Algonquin. Mr. Bicknell must close up his affairs in the bureau during the summer, for he is to leave it early in the fall to become director of the national Red Cross at Washington, but this, he says, is not going to interfere with his seeing THE TRIBUNE'S new permanent hospital well on its way.

It Saves Many Lives.

"THE TRIBUNE hospital meets a peculiar need," he said last evening. "Those engaged in charity work in Chicago in the summer are constantly finding themselves at a loss for means to obtain relief for two classes of persons who are among the most needy and helpless of all the victims of poverty and misfortune in the city. There are the sick children and sick women whose condition, circumstances, and number are such as to require care of a kind that is not provided by any institution except THE TRIBUNE summer hospital.

"Frequently a family will have in it several 'cases' to which a hospital has given all the treatment it can under its crowded conditions. It may be a feeble mother with a baby a few weeks old, and in such a case the surroundings of the home make the recovery of the mother and the survival of the child virtually impossible.

"It is the need for trained, uninterrupted care in an institution far removed from the racket and stifling air of the tenement districts that is met by THE TRIBUNE summer hospital. Scores of lives were saved by it last summer, and, with its increased facilities, its usefulness now should be doubled."

Tents for the Overflow.

In addition to the new dormitory building, which will accommodate some fifty women and children, together with a full corps of trained nurses, large tents have been pitched in various places about the grounds and these will be used to house the overflow from the dormitory until the other permanent hospital buildings are erected. The women and babies will be sent to the country in relays—about ten each day this week—until the present capacity of the hospital is reached. Then, as vacancies are made by the return of patients who have been pronounced "cured," others will be sent, from time to time, during the summer.

There will be no lack of patients. If the capacity of the hospital were ten times as great, there would not be enough room to accommodate those who want to go.

CHOIR BOYS IN FEMININE ROLES.

Little Evanston Singers in Girlish Frocks Appear in "Pinafore" This Week.

The choir boys of St. Luke's Episcopal church, Evanston, attired in girlish frocks and with long curls and feminine headgear, will be seen in a revival of "Pinafore," Gilbert and Sullivan's opera, this week.

Three performances will be given, Wednesday evening at Ravinia park, and Friday evening and Saturday afternoon at St. Mary's church hall, Evanston.

The stage setting will be furnished by one of the downtown theaters. The proceeds will be devoted to the annual choir encampment fund.

Lucius J. Cock will sing the part of Sir Joseph Porter, while Master Elmer Warren will be the Midship Mite. The latter also will dance the sailor's hornpipe.

Schiller and Goethe Monuments.

Milwaukee, Wis., June 14.—A monument to the memory of Schiller and Goethe, the great German poets, was unveiled today at Washington park in the presence of a vast throng of people. Christian Steger, president of the Schiller-Goethe association, made an address of presentation and Mayor David S. Rose accepted the gift in the name of the city.

NEWS OF THE SOCIETY WORLD

Marriage of Miss Ida King to Mr. Douglas F. Stevens.

TO TAKE PLACE THURSDAY.

Engagement Announced of Miss Pearl Rolfe to Mr. G. H. Walton.

The marriage of Miss Ida Harriet King and Mr. Douglas Franklin Stevens, both of Evanston, will take place at St. Luke's Episcopal church, Evanston, Thursday evening at 8 o'clock, the Rev. George Craig Stewart officiating. Miss Ethel Marion King will serve her sister as maid of honor and Mr. Frank Ohr Potter of Evanston will be best man. The ushers will be Mr. Edwin S. Braden, Mr. William F. Hanchett, Mr. George Albert Moore, and Mr. Frederic R. Bates, all of Evanston.

The marriage of Miss Anna May Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Wilson, 564 Dearborn avenue, and Mr. William R. Dickinson will take place at noon today at the family residence in the presence of the two families only. The Rev. Percival Marston will officiate. There will be no attendants. Mr. and Mrs. Dickinson will sail on Wednesday for Europe to spend the summer. They will reside on the north side on their return in the fall.

Miss Irene Ladd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Ladd, was married on Thursday at 4:30 p. m. to Mr. William Banon at the Immaculate Conception church. Miss Mae Grier was maid of honor. A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents.

Announcement is made of the marriage at Waban Park, Newton, Mass., on the afternoon of June 4 of Mr. Russel George of the University of Colorado to Miss Marcia Chapman, daughter of the late Henry Whitmore Chapman of Chicago.

Mrs. B. V. Rolfe of the Lessing announces the engagement of her daughter, Pearl, to Mr. George H. Walton. The wedding will take place some time this summer. The young folk expect to live in New York.

Mrs. Frank H. Barry, 1520 Lakeside place, announces the engagement of her daughter, Mary Joan, to Charles Stuart Tagney. The marriage will take place on Wednesday, July 1.

Minister Wu, Mrs. Elmer Dover, Mrs. Nathan B. Scott, wife of the senator from West Virginia, and Mrs. James Bryce will be guests of honor at the reception of the Daughters of the American Revolution given today at the Woman's Athletic club.

The Misses Grace and Mable Nelson gave a "bundle" party—a novelty in entertainment—at their home, 565 North California avenue, Saturday evening. There were a dozen guests and prizes were awarded and refreshments served.

Mrs. John C. Dent and daughter, Miss Edita Dent, left for New York in the early part of the week to spend the summer with another daughter of the household, Mrs. Franklin T. Burt, formerly Miss Lucile Dent. They will sail for China and Japan late in the fall, where they will join Col. Dent, now in the Philippine Islands in command of the Fourteenth Infantry. Mrs. Dent was the guest of her brother, Dr. Clarence L. Wheaton, 39 Pine Grove avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Watson Blair are at the Holland house, New York.

Mrs. Eugene A. Bournique and family of Highland Park will spend the summer at The Overlook at Annisquam, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Charters, 1363 Sheridan road, leave today for New York to sail for Europe.

The family of Dr. W. W. Lazear of 3146 Vernon avenue leave for Seattle, Wash., today to attend the marriage of the doctor's niece, Miss May Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Miller, formerly of this city, to Mr. Joseph Christy Glass, which occurs on July 23. They expect to remain in the west until Oct. 1.

Prof. G. T. Lippold, formerly professor of modern languages of the Boston Polytechnic institute, has taken up his resident in Chicago. Mr. and Mrs. Lippold reside at 49 Pine Grove avenue.

The Zeta chapter of the Iota Beta Phi sorority will give its annual dance Friday evening, June 19, at the Colonial club.

Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Swift of 4468 Ellis avenue are home after spending the winter in southern California.

FRENCH CHURCH IS DEDICATED.

Edifice Provides Place of Worship for the Protestants of That Nationality Living in Chicago.

Four clergymen participated yesterday in the dedication of the French Evangelical Methodist Episcopal church at Thirty-seventh street and Langley avenue, the only French Protestant church in Chicago. Presiding Elder W. E. Tilroe of the Chicago district and the Rev. P. Beachamps of St. Ann, Ill., preached in the morning, and the Rev. A. L. Allais and Presiding Elder H. V. Holt of the Chicago western district spoke in the afternoon.

IN THE SEWING ROOM — TESTED RECIPES

Suggestions for Sewing.

The whole appearance of an otherwise pretty garment may be marred if the fastenings are carelessly or incorrectly put on. There are many garments which are too fine for hooks and eyes and which are, in fact, fitted only for tiny buttonholes and buttons or hooks and loops. These loops are used both for small buttons and for hooks and are put on the collars of lingerie blouses, on baby clothes, and other sheer garments. When they are to be used for buttons they are put at the extreme edge of a hem or band and sometimes they are placed on the underneath part of a hem when it has been folded over and so closes the opening in an invisible manner. They are made by arranging loose threads of a certain length to form a loop large enough for the button to pass through. Use strong sewing cotton and fasten on by passing the middle between the folds to the edge of the band. Make it quite firm by taking a seaming stitch on it and give it a jerk to test it. Now take a stitch like a seaming one as far distant from the first as the diameter of the button, and draw the cotton in to within three-quarters or half an inch from the first stitch. Keep this loop around the forefinger and make another one by taking up the first stitch again, which of course takes the needle back to the right of the one last made. Repeat this four or five times, keeping all the loops the same length over the finger. Let the last stitch come on the right hand side, so that when the work is turned around for the loop to face the worker it becomes the left hand. Holding the work with the loop toward the body, pass the needle under the loops with the point toward you and pass the single thread to the right under the needle. This will make a purled edge at the top of the loop. Continue this from right to left and finish off securely. Loops for hooks are made in a similar manner, but the strands are drawn much tighter and they are made a quarter of an inch or so from the edge of the hem.

IN THE KITCHEN

Do Not Knead Bread.

Many people do not make their own bread because they cannot knead it properly, not knowing that a superior quality of bread can be made without this labor. Mix your sponge in the usual way and when it rises stir in with a wire fork enough flour to roll. Then instead of putting the sponge on the knead board use the chopping bowl. First flour the bowl and dip your chopping knife into flour; chop the bread sponge by drawing the knife through it, but do not pound it, adding more flour as needed. When it has been cut so that pieces are about a half inch square put together smoothly enough for each loaf and put into pans to rise for baking.

Save Pineapple Parings.

Do not throw away the parings nor cores from a pineapple, but after washing them thoroughly cover with water, add sugar, and cook until a thick sirup has formed. This can be used for a sauce, and is especially fine with plain boiled rice.

Remove Disagreeable Odors.

Any disagreeable odor in the sick room may be obviated by putting a few drops of oil of lavender in a cup of hot water and placing it in the room. Any flies which may be in the room will leave it as soon as the odor is noticeable.

To Keep Butter Sweet.

In the summer time when butter is plentiful melt down all you do not need and pour into fruit jars. When cold put a thin layer of salt on top. When winter comes take your butter out of jars, work in the desired quantity of salt. You will have sweet, yellow, delicious butter.

Potato Novelties.

CHICKEN IN POTATO CASES.—Two cups of cold chicken that has been cut into cubes and seasoned with pepper, salt, and celery salt. Stir two teaspoonfuls of flour, one-fourth of a teaspoon of salt, and a little pepper into two tablespoonfuls of bubbling hot butter; then add slowly one-half cup each of milk and chicken broth; cook until smooth and thick; add the seasoned chicken and place it on the back of the stove until ready for use. Line buttered gem pans with mashed potatoes that have been well seasoned with cream, butter, salt, and pepper; brush over with the beaten yolk of egg and brown in a hot oven. Then remove to a hot platter, fill with the prepared chicken, and serve at once.

POTATO PANCAKES.—One cup flour, scant one-half cup grated raw potatoes, heaping teaspoon baking powder, a scant teaspoon nutmeg and cinnamon mixed, tablespoonful sugar, one-half teaspoonful of salt. Mix all dry ingredients together first. Grate potatoes last of all in a little cold water to prevent turning dark. When enough is grated, press out all water and add two well beaten eggs and milk enough to make the batter about of the consistency of griddle cakes; cook them thin and a little more done than flour griddles.

POTATO AND LEMON PEEL CAKES.—Potatoes six ounces, lemon peel four ounces, sugar four ounces, butter four ounces. Boil potatoes until soft then mash them. Grate lemon peel and beat in the sugar, then all together; melt the butter in a little cream, mix all well, and let stand until cold. Put rich pastry crust in little patty pans, and fill with the mixture a little more than half full. Bake about half an hour. Sift fine sugar over them when they go in the oven. This makes about a dozen small cakes.

LIMERICK CAKE.—Six cold, mealy potatoes, mash fine to get out all the lumps. One teaspoon salt, one cup cream, flour enough to make into cakes. Make small and not too thick. Have your griddle hot and buttered, brown on both sides and butter while hot. They are nice for breakfast.

In the Laundry

Iron Stocks on Towel.

When ironing stocks for the neck or embroidered linen collars iron them on a thick towel which has been folded three or four times and laid on the board. Stocks ironed in this manner will appear like new and if you iron the embroidered linen collars on the wrong side on this folded towel the embroidery pattern will stand out in bold relief.

For Rough Irons.

Often the irons will become either rough or rusty and it is most annoying to try to iron with them. To a flat board nail a long strip of sandpaper and use this for smoothing the irons on, if you find that the beeswax does not accomplish this. If the sandpaper is not convenient, sprinkle a little salt on a folded newspaper and rub the irons on this. Then wipe them with a cloth and finally rub with the wax. Ironing will be a pleasure if the irons are treated in this manner.

To Save Gas.

When using a gas stove to heat the irons on for ironing, much fuel can be saved by buying a tin pan large enough to fit over the number of flat irons used. Make a hole in the bottom of the pan and fasten there a holder. These small wooden knobs may be bought for a few pennies at any hardware store. The knob should be fastened on the outside of the pan. Use this pan to cover the irons and the irons will keep the right heat with the gas turned much lower. It will be easy to remove the pan when the irons have to be changed, as the wooden handle does not get hot.

Beveridge's Speeches

A Voice from Now

These are the MOST BRILLIANT of Senator Beveridge's public addresses

The Meaning of the Times and Other Speeches of

ALBERT J. BEVERIDGE

THIS WORD TO YOUNG MEN: How was it that a poor American who was plowboy at 12, logger at 14, plainsman at 20, without money or influence, could reach the Senate at 36, and then steadily rise to be one of its prominent members? This book shows why.

THIS WORD TO CAMPAIGN SPEAKERS:

Senator Beveridge's book contains many notable speeches opening the Republican campaigns in many states, used as campaign documents. They are invaluable to campaign speakers—speeches that thrilled audiences and interested the country.

DR. ALBERT SHAW, Editor of The Review of Reviews:

"Mr. Beveridge is an orator in a time when orators are few. . . . The utterances of a man entitled to be placed in a group of our public men not so large as we could wish to have it."

'FAINTING BERTHA' CAPTURED AGAIN.

After Only One Day's Liberty from Guardians She Is Returned to Asylum.

CAUGHT BY PEORIA MAN.

Famous Female Crook Found Disguised as a Woman Drummer Planning Iowa Trip.

Peoria, Ill., June 14.—[Special.]—Bertha Lebecke, alias "Fainting Bertha," the notorious female crook who cunningly made her escape from the tuberculosis tent colony at the Bartonville asylum at Bartonville last night, was recaptured in this city today by Policeman Damm of the local department as she was reading an account of her escape in a morning paper on a prominent street corner.

Bertha readily accompanied the officer to the police station, where she congratulated him upon his detective ability. She was well disguised as a female drummer when arrested. She said that she intended to go to the home of her mother in Council Bluffs, Ia., today.

Fifth Escape from Asylum.

This is the fifth time "Fainting Bertha" has escaped from her asylum guardians, and she has in addition a record for several clever disappearances from the Nevada (Mo.) asylum.

Robs by Fainting Trick.

Bertha Lebecke, 28 years old, is conceded by the Illinois state authorities and the police to be the most troublesome criminal ever within the state.

Yet "Fainting Bertha" Lebecke is one of the prettiest and daintiest bits of well developed femininity that ever made a marked success of deceiving people in public and afterward deceiving officials of jails, asylums and penitentiaries until frowning walls and steel gates become as cobwebs to her.

"Fainting Bertha's" favorite scheme of robbery is to pretend that she has fainted and so well does she practice the deceit that every one near her rushes to her assistance. While they are ministering to her apparent needs she robs them of whatever she may find in their clothes. They never suspect until they have sent her on her way recovered.

Bertha stole $1,000 worth of goods in two days after escaping from the Elgin asylum Dec. 25, 1906, and taking a train for Peoria. On the train she fainted and robbed the conductor. In Peoria she robbed three stores, registering at three hotels under assumed names and escaping with the goods.

Girl a Cobbler's Daughter.

The girl says she was born in 1880 at Council Bluffs, Ia., the daughter of a cobbler. She looks more like 23 than 28. Her mother and one other of five children are living in Council Bluffs, the others of the family being dead.

Prison bars cannot hold Bertha, and prison officials hate to see her coming. Here is a list of her detentions and escapes:

Asylum for the Feeble Minded, Glenwood, Ia. Discharged.

Insane asylum, Glenwood, Ia. Discharged.

Insane asylum, Nevada, Mo. Discharged after several escapes.

St. Bernard's asylum, Council Bluffs, Ia. Discharged.

Indeterminate sentence at Joliet penitentiary.

Kankakee (Ill.) asylum for the insane. Escaped.

Kankakee (Ill.) asylum for the insane. Escaped.

Kankakee (Ill.) asylum for the insane. Returned to Joliet penitentiary.

Elgin (Ill.) asylum for the insane. Escaped.

Present address, Asylum for the Incurable Insane, South Bartonville, Ill. Escaped June 13 and recaptured June 14.

MRS. GLYN LAUDS MINERS; PEER OF NOBILITY, SHE SAYS.

Writer Returns to New York with High Praise for Chivalry and Worth of Workers at Goldfield and Rawhide.

New York, June 14.—[Special.]—Mrs. Elinor Glyn has returned to town after an eight weeks' visit in the west. She is back with a pearl handled revolver, a deputy sheriff's badge, both gifts of Gov. Hutchinson of Nevada, and some interesting views on masculine gentility. She believes now that the western miner is the highest type of American. Yes, she actually compares the workers of Goldfield and Rawhide to the cream of the British nobility. She said:

"I found the western miners the most courteous and best mannered of all the Americans. They are superb specimens and they treat women with the inherent gallantry which can be compared only to the highly developed gentlemen of England. In meeting these men who worked with shovel and pickax I was astonished at their poise and ease of manner. We saw many of them in Rawhide and I should be quite willing to have luncheon with them. There was no affectation in their chivalrous conduct. We visited dance halls and even with those women of a mining camp they were gentle and considerate. I believe in the union of extremes, and here we have the flower of English nobility and a savage man of toil alike in their deportment and manner.

"Our visit to gambling rooms and dance halls with Mr. Newhouse was revoltingly exaggerated. It was said I won $1,000 at faro. Why, I started with only $5 in counters. With Mr. Newhouse's nieces I put these chips on various cards. We saw the dance halls as any visitor might see them, and there ends the tale of our vividly painted expedition."

GIRL HAS EMPLOYER ARRESTED.

Mobile Stenographer Charges Business Man with Undue Attentions.

Mobile, Ala., June 14.—[Special.]—James C. Simpson, a well known society and business man, is under arrest on complaint of Miss Lena Boyd, a stenographer, the charge against him being an attempted attack in his office.

Miss Boyd stated to the detectives that she had been called back to the office to do some work and that Simpson, while she was there, grasped her about the waist. She threw him off, screamed, and, rushing to the door and finding it locked, burst the glass with her hand, and, thrusting her head through the aperture, called for help.

Men passing rushed to the room and quieted the girl.

Simpson is married and his arrest created a sensation. He was held in $1,000 bail, which was given by friends. Miss Boyd is prostrated at the home of her father, who is foreman of a large manufacturing plant. Simpson's lawyer refused to allow him to make a statement.

Body of Union Official Found.

Amory, Miss., June 14.—[Special.]—The body of C. A. Linxwiler, assistant vice president of the Painters and Decorators' National Brotherhood, whose headquarters were in Decatur, Ill., was recovered today. The coroner's jury decided that he came to his death by jumping from a moving train as it crossed the Tombigbee river. Linxwiler, who was demented at the time, leaves a widow and four children.

Three Soloists Open Saengerfest.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 14.—With a concert Wednesday evening in which Mme. Marie Rappold, Adolf Muehlmann, and David Bispham will be the soloists, the thirty-second saengerfest of the North American Saengerbund will open at the Coliseum of the Indiana state fair grounds adjoining this city. The New York Symphony orchestra will furnish the instrumental music.

HONOR FLAG AND KOSCIUSKO

Polish Patriot Eulogized in Exercises at Humboldt Park.

G. A. R. POSTS NOT IN PARADE

Commander Burton's Order to Veterans to Observe Flag Day Is Read.

On account of Gov. Deneen's proclamation making today the official date of the Flag day celebration, the Grand Army posts did not assemble yesterday at Wicker Park for the parade to Humboldt park. Two detachments of Polish cavalry and the Pulaski Citizens' club were the only organized orders that marched.

A halt was made at the equestrian statue of Kosciusko in Humboldt park, where T. M. Helinski eulogized the patriot Pole in his native tongue.

Next came the ceremony of raising the flag in front of the north pavilion. Then the parade moved to the racquet court, where several addresses were made. The celebration was a success in point of public attendance, as several thousand people assembled around the speakers' stand.

Commander's Order Read.

H. H. Cleveland of Winfield Scott post, G. A. R., who was in charge of the proceedings, read the order of Commander in Chief Burton of the Grand Army ordering all posts to observe Flag day. Miss Cora Quinn of Lafayette school sang "My Own United States," and Mr. Helinski spoke in English in praise of the flag and the country of which it is the emblem, and expressed pride in the fact that he came from a nation which gave two sons—Kosciusko and Pulaski—to the cause of American independence.

Former G. A. R. Chiefs Speak.

Past Commanders G. W. Rich of Kilpatrick post, S. H. Bascom of Hazen post, and E. E. Clapp of Weitzel post, G. A. R., made brief patriotic addresses.

Lucius Fairchild corps, No. 194, of the Women's Relief corps, and George A. Custer circle, No. 22, of the Ladies of the Grand Army, were represented on the speakers' stand.

SPREAD OF RABIES REPORTED.

Washington Bureau Figures Show Increasing Number of Verified Cases.

Washington, D. C., June 14.—An increasing prevalence of rabies or hydrophobia in the District of Columbia is indicated by a statement prepared on the subject by Dr. A. D. Melvin, chief of the bureau of animal industry of the department of agriculture, which was made public today.

The statement shows that since Jan. 1 last forty-three people and twenty-five animals were bitten by sixty-three dogs received at the bureau from the District of Columbia and vicinity, which have been microscopically examined on suspicion of having rabies. The examination of these sixty-three dogs showed forty-seven cases of positive rabies; six negative of the disease; and ten undetermined, awaiting the results of rabbit inoculations.

DISPLEASED WITH NORTHWESTERN 'L'

Evanston Man Points Out Defects in the Service Which Could Be Remedied.

ANNOYING WAITS ON LINE

Loop Agents Unable to Tell the Patrons When the "Owl" Trains Are Due.

While the elevated railroad companies are fighting off the effort to compel them to install through routes, universal transfer privileges, "aisle door" cars and other improvements which they oppose on the plea of the impoverished condition of their treasuries, letters have begun to come to THE TRIBUNE containing complaints that cannot be excused upon that ground.

The most important of these so far is one from F. A. Davidson, assistant treasurer of the Bowman Publishing company, arraigning the Northwestern elevated road for the faults of the service upon its new suburban extension.

Hereafter THE TRIBUNE will publish communications of this sort intended to point out and work for the remedy of the inadequacies of the elevated service. Criticisms of the entire system, the loop, a single road, or any of the branches may be made.

Double Fare for Short Ride.

Part of Mr. Davidson's letter follows:

"Having learned that THE TRIBUNE is anxious to place the elevated railroad situation squarely before the public so that the companies themselves may see the way for improvement and, if necessary, the officials who have that power may compel the installation of necessary changes, I desire to call your attention to several things in connection with the Evanston extension of the Northwestern which hitherto have been unmentioned and, in a general way, to sum up the shortcomings of that branch of the system.

"Here is an important point that has aroused indignation among the residents of the north shore. Do you know that on one part of the Evanston lines it costs 10 cents to ride half a mile? That is the extreme case, but Evanstonians and Rogers Park people protest every day against paying an additional nickel for the mere crossing of a line.

"Boarding a train at one of Evanston's south end stations to go only to Rogers Park, or vice versa, the passenger must pay 10 cents. A kick without a suggestion for cure may be open to criticism, so I suggest that persons boarding northbound trains above Wilson avenue or taking trains in Evanston to go to points north of Wilson avenue should be given transfers across the dividing line.

Needless Delay at City Limits.

"In this same connection there is another ground for complaint. At least in the night service, the trains are stopped just before crossing the line, a collector enters and holds the trains tied up sometimes four or five minutes until he goes through all the cars for the fares. This delay could be alleviated by having the guards collect the fares or putting one collector for each car at work.

"Another delay that exasperates us is the usual tieup at Wilson avenue, where, for some reason unknown to us, the motormen take a few minutes off.

"In the night service there is another fault. The man who can find out when he can catch a night train to Evanston will be given a vote of thanks by his fellow sufferers. It seems that there is not a ticket agent on the loop who can guess within twenty minutes of the arrival of the next train.

"All of these things are such that the company will be hard put to find excuses for their existence. It cannot offer increased expense or any similar excuse for its failure to bring its service to a standard unmarred by such grievous faults as these."

FLEET SAILS FOR HOME JULY 7.

Battleships Assembling in San Francisco for Voyage Around the World.

San Francisco, Cal., June 14.—The ships of the Atlantic fleet are beginning to assemble in San Francisco harbor preparatory to leaving for the long homeward voyage across three great oceans to Hampton roads. Nine of the fighting vessels are now in man-of-war row, and at Mare's island navy yard and in dry dock at Hunter's Point are twenty-five fighting craft of various kinds, some of them among the number which will make the long voyage.

The ships of the Atlantic fleet now on the northern Pacific coast have been ordered to proceed to San Francisco as soon as possible, the last to arrive here on June 29.

The protected cruiser St. Louis will leave Puget sound on June 15 for Honolulu on a practice cruise and will bring Secretary of the Interior Garfield back to the Pacific coast.

All the vessels of the Pacific fleet are scheduled to return here tomorrow from San Pedro and other southern harbors. The Pacific squadron will remain in this harbor until after the departure of the Atlantic fleet for Hampton roads on July 7.

The Platform's Yellow Streak.

They say the Republican platform was sawed out, fitted and glued, nailed up and painted in the White House and sent to Chicago to be shown.

It has one deep stripe of "yaller" which insults Americans and will be a lasting disgrace to the man who placed it there in exchange for some promised votes of designing law-breakers.

Three times the President "ordered" Congress to pass an anti-injunction law to win the "labor vote."

Three times the manly Americans in Congress stayed his hand trying to avert the dishonor.

Defeated in Congress, the "Labor Trust" leaders barter for that plank in the platform and proffer votes for it, and to the disgrace of an otherwise honorable career, the President, in an insane scramble to insure party success, forgets all principles of Right, Law, Order and Justice to the Common man, crosses palms with these intending law-breakers, and now demands that an anti-injunction plank be included in the platform.

"What about anti-injunction laws?" some one asks.

Labor union leaders and their sluggers and toughs have been prevented (at times) by an injunction of a court, forbidding them to do things which they were known to be contemplating, that would result in slugging or killing American citizens, destroying property, etc., etc.

The courts can now be called upon to issue such injunctions and protect persons and property.

The sluggers and dynamiters don't like any law, and particularly hate this one, for it prevents them from committing acts of lawlessness under penalty of contempt of court and imprisonment.

Therefore they demand a law to prevent the courts from issuing any such restraining orders, for protection of men, women, children and property. They now say "tie up your courts so we can insult, attack and slug men, picket and destroy property and force all other men to pay fees to our leaders and 'obey.'"

It makes an honest American sick at heart to see a President of this country stoop to pander and offer to exchange the eternal Principles of Right, Justice and Honor for the hope of a few votes for his party. And it sickens one to see a great career thus besmirched and blackened.

If a man does not intend to assault a citizen, set fire to another workman's home, dynamite a car or factory, strip the women who ride on cars, cut the tongues out of some horses, or wreck a passenger train, an order of court to prevent will not hurt him in the slightest degree; but intending criminals hate the people's law and their courts, and particularly hate injunctions.

What says the merchant to the proposal to withdraw the protection of the courts? Some boycotted workman might buy food of him and thus bring down the fury of the Labor Trust and wreck his business, or a ruined factory, whose former weekly pay roll had made his business possible, would now mean ruin to him.

What says the skilled mechanic of too high a grade to join a labor union and be scaled down to a lower wage than he can earn, and who perhaps wouldn't put himself under control of the managers of the Labor Trust anyhow? Nowadays, when he gets word that the "entertainment committee" of some labor union is going to slug him or blow up his home, he can call for the protection of the courts he pays to support. How would he feel to be asked to vote for a party pledged to tie up the courts and allow the criminals free range to commit their acts and get away?

What would a newspaper publisher say if deprived of his present protection when threats are made to destroy his presses?

What says the union man who may be a home owner and responsible, and who does not countenance the slugging, boycotting, assaulting, murdering and burning tactics of those who now demand immunity from the law?

Honest union men have joined in petitions to the courts to issue injunctions to prevent the union sluggers from committing their accustomed acts and keeping the peaceful members from work.

What says the average law-respecting citizen to the proposed plan to turn loose the mob whenever it forms?

All law-abiding, property-owning citizens pay to support their own established courts and have a right to expect protection under them at all times.

This periodical bluff of the labor leaders has been called time and again. They brought all their power to bear to defeat Chas. E. Littlefield for Congress on this same issue and afterward massed against some 15 candidates for Congress. But when the great reading, thinking and voting masses understood the case they promptly elected these candidates and set back the laborites with their plans for lawlessness.

"Labor leaders" is not a proper term. The great mass of workmen do not belong to the "Labor Trust" but prefer to be free from the bullying and arrogance of paid members of the labor unions. Certain it is that the great big majority of the people will not submit tamely to any shrewd bargaining away of human rights and freedom in exchange for the few votes of law-breakers. The big vote of free Americans has taught a lesson in the past. It will again, Mr. Roosevelt.

Many million people in America believe in and will support the laws they and their fathers have made and the courts they established, and they do not look with favor on any attempt to taint or destroy them.

Let a political party advocate "class legislation" either for capital or labor and the millions who love fair, square, honest treatment, and to have every man an equal before the law and every man protected by the law, will be quick to discover the effort to destroy their liberty, freedom, and rights and will resent it at the polls.

Let me tell you something about Americans which you seem to have forgotten, Mr. Roosevelt.

When one set of men bully, threaten, and assault other men who are working to earn a living for wife and little ones, and try to force them to either lay down their freedom or their lives, then comes to those who know of it a peculiar thrill in the throat and a quickening of the pulse. It's the push and flow of the blood of ancestors crying out, demanding that the manly man protect his brother from the old, old demon of human tyranny and oppression. Men have died willingly, Mr. Roosevelt, in defense of human liberty and they will not now vote with a party which "sells its birthright for a mess of pottage." The winning of the votes of a few criminals will not be even a good business exchange for the loss of thousands of votes of peace-loving and law-respecting citizens. Leave the pandering to some other party foolish enough to bid away eternal principles for such votes, but don't forget that the party which fearlessly stands for the rights, freedom, and protection of all the people, rich and poor, high and low, and does not countenance class laws to give one set of men power to tyrannize over others, will win the approval and votes of the great mass of people, descendants of the forefathers who risked life and their all to establish forever and hand down to their sons God's law of human freedom and justice.

In this land, Mr. Roosevelt, we try to use the best thought of our great men and forget their weaknesses.

Here's hoping your friends will save you from the proposed trade with intending criminals.

"There's a Reason," Mr. Roosevelt, and a big one.

The Barber with a "Side Line."

Barbers who keep their eyes open and their brains busy, have many opportunities for making extra money "on the side."

The nature of his work permits the barber to form a wide acquaintance. Unlike the salesman or solicitor, he does not need to send in his card and then cool his heels in an outer office, or run the gantlet of a clerical "skirmish line," in order to obtain "personal interviews," but can talk business with customers as they luxuriate in comfortable plush-upholstered chairs.

An enterprising barber on the South Side is a clever amateur photographer, and makes a nice extra income dealing in second hand cameras.

He watches the classified advertising columns of THE TRIBUNE for "snaps" in second-hand cameras and keeps several in the neat show case on which the cash register stands.

As he shaves a customer, this man talks "photography," and incidentally flashes a few "snap shots" of wife or baby. Customers get the fever. Asks questions as to cost of a new camera. Barber advises against NEW camera. Explains how a second-hand one, at much less cost, answers the purpose of an amateur just as well. Shows him a camera at a bargain price. Just a little dickering and the sale is made.

It pays a barber to use the odds and ends of time between "nexts," in reading the classified advertisements in THE TRIBUNE. These pages fairly bristle with business chances. They vie with the Sporting Page in interest and open up a wonderful field for the man with the trading instinct.

BY CHARLES DRYDEN.

John Anderson's family and next door neighbors should be pleased to learn he has again covered himself with schmeerkase. His powerful blow over the block of Hemphill in the eighth round tied the count and enabled the Sox to win No. 11. Score, 5 to 4.

If ever a big crowd went dippy it was when the bulging south siders pulled up and won against a 4 to 0 handicap. Mr. Griffith felt he had at least one game stowed away, and the New York scribe, who got a notice of recall because of the losing streak, expected a flash from the sporting editor telling him to linger yet a little while longer. But alas, you never can tell in these parts, and when it was all over Mr. Griffith said he felt like the United States had been dragged from under him just as he was about to step out of a balloon. The recalled scribe is on his way.

What's Matter with Anderson?

In the language of the links, Joe Lake foozled his putt when he sent one over for Anderson in the eighth with two men on. John is what they call a driver on the links, a sad fact now known to Mr. Lake, who is an expert golfer in New Choisey. The Sox compiled but six swats all told, and each one of them counted. The six were paired off in three rounds, a single and double to each of the scoring innings, and they changed almost certain defeat into victory. That sort of hitting is what you might call continuity of thought, or muscle, or something like that.

Piano Smith's arm was entirely too good. Nothing ailed it. Not a thing. He said nothing about rheumatism in advance of the game nor did he swathe the hurling stem in plasters. Result, the Yankees whaled the bitumen out of him in four rounds and chased the piano mover to the unaxed timbers. Two bases on balls, four singles, and one triple gave the hostiles a lead of four runs.

As Good Clean as—Otherwise.

Moxey Manuel flew to the rescue, and pitched as well in a clean suit as a dirty one. He anchored the Yorkers with two hits in four rounds, while the bats of Jones, Atz, Anderson, and Donohue compiled a couple of tallies, one each in the fourth and sixth.

At this epoch the twenty-four H. P. jump-spark intellect of Timber Jones began to emit inklings. It was time to switch things and get busy. To start the eighth the boss manipulator of demon athletes subpœnaed Hahn to bat for M. Manuel, and Eddie tore off a single. Loud yelps of delight from the half million bugs and bugines. Dougherty skied to right and Jones monkeyed around until he coaxed a pass from the unwilling Lake. That brought up Jakey Atz, who had smitten a double earlier in the fray, but this time he grounded to Chase. The out put runners on second and third with two gone.

Hail! Conquering Hero Comes!

When the threatening bulk of John Anderson, King of Sweden, loomed up at the pan Wid Conroy slipped over and poured some advice into Mr. Lake's starboard ear. We don't know what Wid said to Joe, and what's more it doesn't make any difference. Then Mr. Kleinow trotted out and said some more things into Mr. Lake's other ear. With his bean full of wise counsel, Joe slung up a couple and then put one over.

Bing! Right on the frontispiece, and away went the ball far over Hemphill's turret in deep center. Hahn and Jones counted, knotting the score, and the King of Sweden rested from his labors at second base. Such howls as went up from the folks who packed every inch of space under cover and in the open, but the Sox had not yet finished with J. Lake, the New Choisey golfer.

Donohue nudged a polite grounder at Lake. He pawed it some and then threw wide to first. Chase shifted his pose to fake the ball. Instead, he impaled Mr. Donohue's stomach on his piercing elbow and our first baser hung there writhing in great pain and anguish until John Anderson scored the winning run from second base.

King Comes Into His Own.

Chase did extract his elbow from Mr. Donohue's vitals long enough to make a miscellaneous heave to the plate, but even then the King of Sweden was bowing to the plaudits of his frenzied subjects. Donohue was too busy plugging up the hole in his stomach with his hands to run to second, but it wasn't necessary. Purtell grounded to Conroy for the third out.

White started to pitch the ninth, and Conroy opened on him for a single. Jones yanked the dentist and sent for Walsh, who retired the side in order. Technically, White is guilty of winning the game, but the credit probably will go to Walsh. The doctor pitched one ball.

Smith started his career by walking Niles in the first inning. The next two made outs, and Chase drove Niles in with a single. Chase stole and came home on Ball's triple. Stahl flied to Jones. One out in the fourth, Ball walked, and went to third on Stahl's smash through the box. The out of Conroy, second to first, tallied Ball. Donohue knocked down Kleinow's line shot, on which Stahl gained third. Kleinow's start to steal pulled Tannehill out of plumb and Lake rolled a single through the gap, scoring Stahl. Niles flied to Jones.

First of the Sox Hits.

In the local fourth Jones landed on Lake for the first Sox hit. Atz flied to Keeler, whose wide throw to double Jones sent the runner to second. Anderson fanned and Donohue doubled, scoring the run. Purtell was thrown out by Niles. Two were gone in the sixth when Atz doubled and tallied on Anderson's single. Donohue struck out. Score:

CONVENTION BASEBALL SKETCHES.

NOTES OF THE WHITE SOX.

Three more games here with the Yankees.

The defeat of St. Louis tightens the Sox grip on first place.

Anderson struck out twice before inflicting the fatal dents in Joe Lake.

Griffith put in a busy hour on the coaching line at his famous specialty of detecting phantom balks.

How the exploits of John Anderson must gripe the vitals of his late proprietor and manager, J. Cantillon.

Freddie Parent's wrenched knee is resting easily in his apartments. The doctor has ordered absolute quiet for at least one week.

During his brief whirl on the slab White pitched one ball to Conroy and he lofted a Texas leaguer into left field. Any pitcher is subject to sudden changes.

Jones found fault with the way Lake wore his feet on the slab and Griffith evened the score by picking flaws in Manuel's hoof action. Managers cannot be too careful these days.

Had Smith's arm been ready to drop off at the elbow, as it was the day he shut the Quakers out with three hits, the chances are New York would have been unable to touch him.

And still the fame of B. Sullivan, inventor, continues to spread. Dr. Casey has telegraphed for a package of the windless wind for his Montreal team. Seems like they cannot wait to write for Mr. Sullivan's device.

In the four rounds he worked, Manuel allowed two singles. Hemphill led the fifth with a safety and stole second. After Keeler fouled to Purtell, Sullivan nipped Hemphill stealing third and Chase struck out. Ball worked Mozey for a pass and stole after two out in the eighth, but Stahl fouled to Sullivan.

Philadelphia, 5; Detroit, 3.

Detroit, Mich., June 14.—Smith's home run hit over left field fence, the first hit of the kind in two years, drove in two men and won the game for the visitors, their first victory in eight games. Detroit's three runs came on three successive passes by Schlitzer, another by Vickers, and a lucky single. Killian was hit hard until benched for disputing in the fourth. Mullin finished in style, barring one throw into the grandstand that cost a run. Vickers was a puzzle to the champions after he steadied. Score:

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Philadelphia, Pa., June 14.—[Special.]—The Cubs are facing another serious handicap just before their invasion of New York this week for what they consider the crucial series of the eastern trip.

Just after Mordecai Brown had departed last night for Atlantic City, after his victorious battle with McQuillan and the Phillies, a telegram was received at the hotel from his wife bringing news that the great pitcher's mother was seriously sick and asking him to come home at once. Manager Chance, who opened the telegram to ascertain its import, immediately tried to reach Brown or Treasurer Williams, who accompanied the pitcher for a cooling dip in the old ocean, but neither telegrams nor telephone calls located them. Early this morning Chance and several of the Cubs went to Atlantic City to carry the bad news to Brown in person.

The pitcher returned by the first train and left tonight for his home in Rosedale, Ind. He will not be able to rejoin the Cubs in the east nor until after their return home. Chance had planned to work his staff so that Brown could pitch two of the four games against the New York Giants. To that end he sent Mordecai against the Phillies yesterday, with orders to rest up carefully until Thursday's game in New York. Then it was planned to give him another respite until a week from tomorrow, when the final clash with the Giants is scheduled.

Plans Go Awry.

These deep laid plans are frustrated and Chance must work out a new scheme. Another element of discouragement to Chance is the failure of Overall's wrenched back to yield to treatment of any kind. Overall and his wife were booked to return to Chicago tonight, but the departure of Brown changed their plans and Overall will stay. Not since Decoration day in St. Louis has "Jeff" been of service to the Cubs. Then he wrenched his back early in the morning game, stopping a line drive from Jack Barry's bat. Overall is able to pitch with all his accustomed speed and curves and without distressing him in the least. But the instant he attempts to stoop over something catches near the base of his spine and gives him great pain.

If somebody could field bunts and grounders and do the base running for him Overall could pitch all right, but if he tried it the first bunt by an opponent would put him out of commission and perhaps delay his recovery many days.

A bright spot is the recovery of control by Reulbach, who demonstrated in Friday's game at Brooklyn he has mastered his cranky delivery at last, and a little earlier in the season than usual. Not before July has big Ed been considered reliable hitherto. This gives the Cubs four men for slab duty despite the loss of Brown and Overall, but the hot weather is expected to affect Lundgren's strength before long. If it were possible to inclose the pitcher's position in a cold storage plant Lundgren would be invincible the year round, but the superheated atmosphere of midsummer has weakened him heretofore.

Cubs Seek Cool Spots.

The Cubs found the elegance of their ultra-fashionable hotel palling on them before half of a lamblike Philadelphia Sunday had passed. So before noon today more than half the players departed for Atlantic City for the afternoon and evening. Those who remained in town sought coolness and diversions of nearby parks and outdoor amusement places. The players found out a review of the costly paintings with which their hotel is adorned and a single inspection of the solid silver plate and table service which came to the hotel with the purchase of the Elkins mansion was enough for one trip.

Having exhausted the curiosities of the hotel they found the soft tapestry carpets, rugs, and costly furniture of their suites no more alluring to open air athletes than the cheap contraptions of any old boarding house. Therefore, cards being tabooed, they one and all went in search of breathing spots more ample than even a swell suite of four rooms and a bath. Gorgeous weather increased the outdoor temptations. Tomorrow the Cubs face another strenuous battle and the beginning of their hardest week on the road.

Three More with Quakers.

Three more games are to be played with the Phillies, and Pfeister, Fraser, and Lundgren or Reulbach, are to be assigned to pitch them. They expect to face Sparks or Corridon tomorrow, Moren on Tuesday, and to get McQuillan again on Wednesday. Then comes four games in New York, carrying the Cubs over to Monday. One week from today an exhibition game is scheduled for Troy, with J. Evers in the hero's rôle. The trip to and from Troy is to be made by boats.

ROGERS PARKS IN A RALLY BEAT WHITE ROCKS 6 TO 2.

Visitors Tally Three Runs Before Victors Begin to Count, but Final Innings Turn Tide of Battle.

Rogers Park defeated the White Rocks by the score of 6 to 3 at Rogers Park yesterday, the visitors shoving across three runs in the fifth before the home team scored, three hits being made off Wiggs in a row. In the sixth inning the home team slipped in three runs by heavy hitting and tied the score. Manager Mackey sent "Dunk" Boyle in to finish the game for Love after two more hits had been made and before he steadied down the locals had the game on ice. Score:

PLAY A THRILLING CONTEST

Gunthers Defeat Anson's Colts by a Score of 5 to 3.

STAR STUNTS ON EACH SIDE.

Losers Prove Best at Nailing the Runners to Bases.

Gunthers downed the Anson's Colts in a thrilling exhibition at Gunther park yesterday. A couple of skimpy singles by Parker and Riley, followed by Medwtzky's double, tied the score in the fifth. Medwtzky beat out a bunt in the eighth and was sacrificed by Stellman, scoring later on Ransome's double along the left foul line, and Ransome came in right after when Jay Parker shot a grounder to Brosius.

TURNERS HOLD FIELD SPORTS.

Central Team Wins the Second Annual Meet at Riverview Park with Score of 284.01 Points.

Athletes from the Central Turners won the second annual Turner's field day meet held yesterday afternoon at Riverview park under the sanction of the International Gymnastic union with a total of 284.01 points.

The Aurora Turners wrested second honors from the Sleipner Athletic club by a small fraction, the former team having 261.28 while the Sleipner boys earned 261.11 points. Fourth in the list were the Norwegians and the South Turners were last. Individual honors were awarded to Peter Olsen of the South Side Turners with 53.65 credits, with Mundt of the Central second with 52.70, and Schwindt, also of the Turners, had next place with 52.50.

Several hundred girls took part in the mass drills, and it is estimated that over 2,000 boys, girls, and men participated in the day's games. Many little girls performed creditably in the drills. Summaries:

Radical changes in the Chicago City Baseball league can be expected in the next week. The Riverview team, one of the park organizations in the association, yesterday failed to live up to its agreement by forfeiting the game against the Marquettes at Riverview park, the gates being locked when the visiting team arrived at the grounds. Umpire O'Brien declared the game forfeited to the Marquettes by 9 to 0. The park will forfeit its franchise, according to the constitution of the organization, and some other park team will be taken in, three applications being on hand, according to statements made by members of the league. Which park will be chosen to fill the vacancy is not known, as it was impossible last night to get into communication with any of the powers that be in the league.

Only two games were played yesterday. The Logan Squares were beaten by a score of 4 to 1 by the Spaldings, while the West Ends trimmed the South Chicagos, 5 to 0.

Teddy Opfergelt was the main factor in the Spaldings' victory over the Logan Squares, holding Callahan's men to five hits. FINAL TRIBUTES TO GEORGE SILER.

Funeral to Be Held Tomorrow Morning from Corpus Christi Church.

BURIAL AT MT. OLIVET.

Simplicity to Mark Services in Accordance with Wishes of Veteran.

Funeral services for George Siler, the veteran referee and writer on pugilistic topics, who died Saturday night, will be held tomorrow morning from Corpus Christi church, Grand boulevard and Forty-ninth street. Interment will be at Mount Olivet cemetery.

The funeral sermon will be preached by Father Kennal of St. Elizabeth's church and the requiem high mass will be celebrated by the pastor of the church. De Molay lodge of Knights of Pythias, of which Mr. Siler was a member, will attend the services in a body. The Order of Elks also will be represented. Pallbearers will be chosen from Mr. Siler's active associates on the staff of THE TRIBUNE as follows:

Hugh E. Keough,	Joseph G. Davis,
John P. Brady,	A. J. McFaul,
P. P. Pomeroy,	Harvey T. Woodruff.

Friends are requested by the family to omit flowers.

Tributes to Manly Personality.

Messages of sympathy and condolence from all sections of the country were received by the stricken family at the residence, 786 East Forty-sixth street, yesterday, the expressions of respect and sorrow coming not alone from men who had known Siler in his capacity of referee and as an authority on pugilism, but men of all walks of life who had known "the squarest referee of them all" in many different capacities.

One characteristic of the many came from Billy Madden of New York, who once toured the middle western states with Siler as a sparring partner, the pair meeting all comers in limited round bouts. The message read:

Please accept my condolence. My old pal was an honest sportsman.

Mr. Siler is survived by a widow and two sons, one of whom, George Siler Jr., resides in this city. The second son, 20 years old, is employed in Panama and, owing to the distance, will be unable to attend the funeral. The request on the part of the family to omit flowers is in accordance with the deceased man's ideas of simplicity and lack of ostentation.

Baptized in Catholic Church.

Mr. Siler, who originally was of the Episcopalian faith, was received in the Roman Catholic church on the day following that on which he was stricken, in accordance with the wishes of his wife. Father Kennal received the confession of faith. The day on which Mr. Siler embraced the faith of the church of Rome was the only one during his last sickness when the game battler for life did not expect to recover, at least temporarily, from the attack of heart failure which seized him as he was about to depart for Milwaukee to attend the Ketchel-Papke bout. At least, if the stricken man did not expect recovery he did not confide his fears to the anxious watchers at his bedside.

Saturday morning, his last day of life, Mr. Siler, in his waking hours of the early morning, called his wife to his bedside and made plans for a trip to the Iowa farm of his brother-in-law, Dr. Cole, where he should recover his lost health.

Merely Hints at Death.

"I'll tell you what I want you to do," the sick man said to Mrs. Siler, "for I'll not come back for six months or a year, and maybe I'll never come back."

That was the only reference the veteran made in the later days of his illness to the possible end of his sufferings. He then told Mrs. Siler of his business affairs and various accounts and some debts owing to him, for Siler was a man from whom any one could borrow money, and arranged all his worldy business in the methodical manner which was characteristic of all his works and plans. He continued until Mrs. Siler stopped him for fear the talking would weaken him.

In the afternoon he appeared stronger than for many days, but at 10:30 o'clock the end came suddenly without a struggle. George Siler's generous heart merely ceased to beat.

The following expressions regarding Mr. Siler were made yesterday by friends of the deceased:

Charles A. Comiskey.

"The followers of sporting events the world over will miss George Siler, and I mourn the loss of a true friend and good fellow. He stood for all that was clean and honorable in his profession, and his death will be regretted even by those who did not know him personally."

Umpire Tim Hurst.

"I would have gone a long way and at any time for George Siler. He was my friend of years and an honored one. I'll grieve for him. A fairer man never officiated in the ring or expressed his views in print, and that is my sincere and honest tribute."

Manager Clark Griffith.

"I was more than sorry to hear of Siler's death, for he was a true friend not only to me but to thousands of others identified with sports. I have followed his writings for years and shall miss them now that he has failed to answer the call of time. The New York players join me in an expression of regret."

Malachy Hogan.

"For twenty-two years I have known and been a close friend of Siler and I can say nothing too good of him. It was on his second trip to Chicago to live that I met him and when he started a boxing school on the west side I was one of his first pupils. He was the greatest referee in the world, bar none, and he knew more about the game than any other man. His loss to the boxing game is too great to be estimated."

Jack McCormick.

"Having known Siler for several years, I want to say that I believe no fairer man ever judged a ring battle. Only a few years ago, when I was fighting, the mention of Siler's name was all that was necessary as far as I was concerned in a contest."

John Condon.

"I was shocked and greatly grieved to learn of George Siler's death. Although he had been in poor health for a long time, I had felt that his indomitable will and tenacity to the life he loved so much would in the end prevail and that he would be able to pull through. George Siler will be sadly missed by all classes, as his popularity was universal. He was a man among men. I had known George for twenty-five years and am in a position to pay the highest tribute to his enterprise and integrity, as for a long time he was my head publicity man at the Harlem track. Siler was one of the brighest men who ever lived and he was as straight as a string and faithful to duty."

Tom Foley.

"George Siler was my ideal of a sporting man. He was honest and capable in everything he did. As a referee of pugilistic contests the world never had his equal. In other lines, particularly billiards, no writer understood the game better. He was a good player himself and his knowledge enabled him to write the real happenings. I first met Siler in 1873 and from that time until his death we were fast friends. Siler's every act was honest, square, and true, and in his death sport in general is a heavy loser."

William P. Mussey.

"It would take more than a few words to tell all the good I know of George Siler. I know of no man that I held in higher respect in every way. He was an honor to pugilism and other sports, but with this was combined a nature courteous, kind, and true, not often found. He was a warm friend and I knew him for many years. I admired Siler and all his acts, for behind all of them he was true blue to the core. We all shall miss him."

"Jim" O'Leary.

"The sporting world has lost one of its most honorable men. George Siler was fair and square in everything and particularly in business. Such a man was an honor to pugilism, to racing, and every other sport in which he became identified, no matter to what extent."

Champion Joe Gans.

San Francisco, Cal., June 14.—[Special.]—"I knew George Siler for about twelve years and he refereed half a dozen fights for me. I always thought he was one of the best referees of the country and a great judge of boxing. In my dealings with him I always found Siler an honorable man and a square fellow who never wanted to give anybody the best of it, but treat all alike. I stopped to see him on my way to California this last week and am sorry to learn of his death. More men like him would have helped the boxing game."

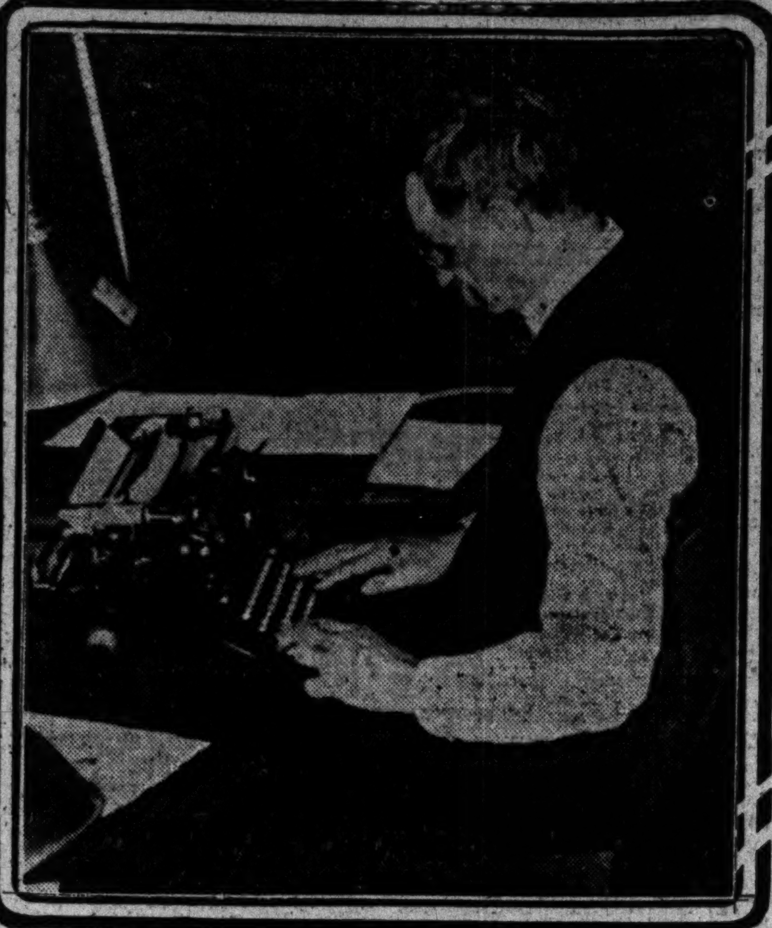

Charles E. (Parson) Davies.

New Orleans, La., June 14.—[Special.]—From the sick bed on which he has lain for weeks "Parson" Davies spoke reminiscently of George Siler. "He was an honest man and one of the best referees. As a sporting writer he had few faults if any. I knew George about thirty-seven years. I met him in Chicago when he and Billy Madden were sparring on the road. I found fault with George on his decision on the Sharkey-Corbett fight at Coney Island, but I lost $13,000 on the result, which probably had something to do with it. If a man does what he thinks right, as George did, he cannot please everybody."

E. S. Sheridan.

Washington, D. C., June 14.—[Special.]—Rather taciturn and apparently phlegmatic, George in reality was readily sympathetic and decidedly sensitive. He did not betray his feelings and often was misunderstood on this account. He hated cant and was seldom effusive toward any one, and, on the other hand, appeared indifferent about criticisms when they really affected him deeply. His great self-control, of course, was of wonderful help to him in his engagements as a ring official, but his actions belied his feelings. He shared his joys with his friends, but kept his troubles to himself. Quite likely his health was more or less affected before he told his friends of it. That was his way. He doubtless did more to enlist interest among intelligent people in the particular sport with which he was concerned then any other man in America.

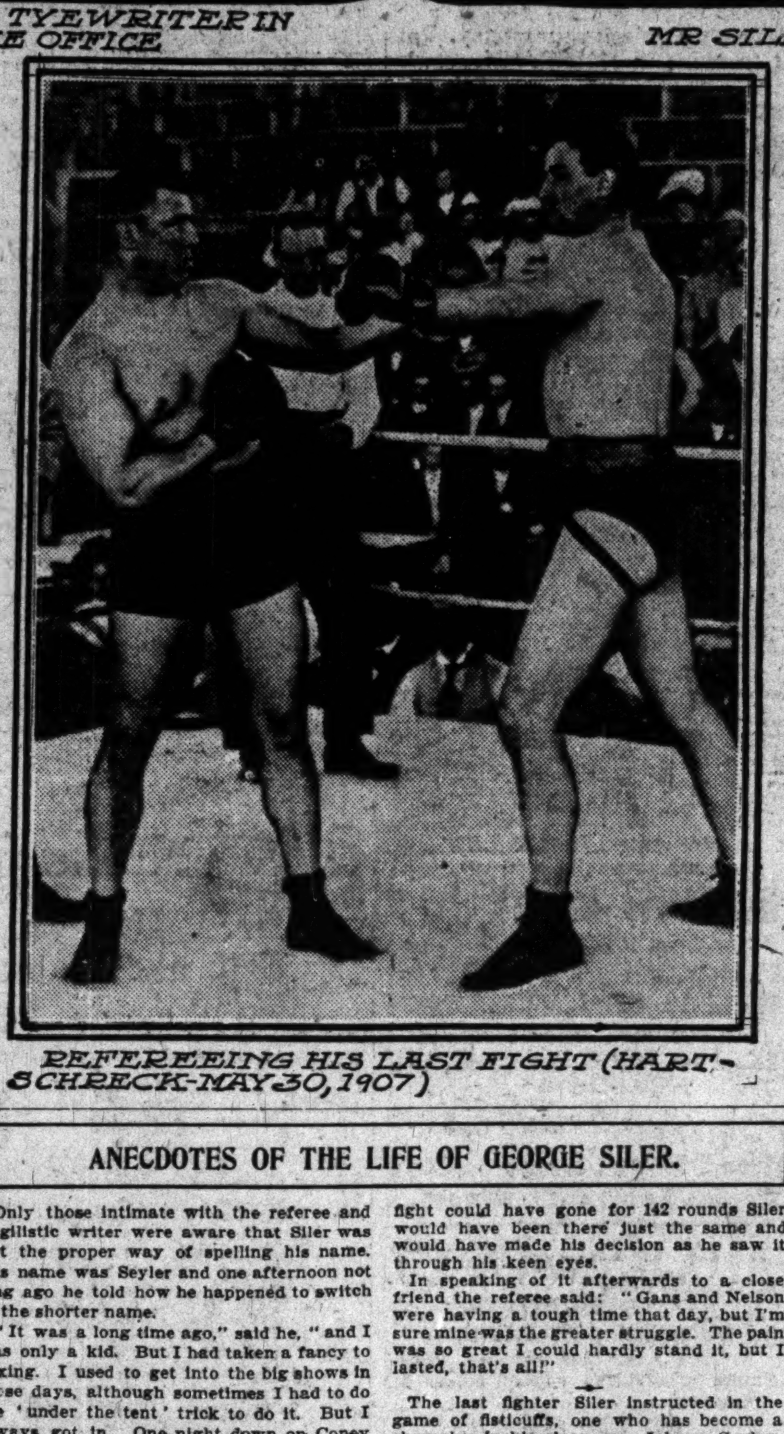

Early Picture of Siler and Two Scenes from His Later Life.

MR SILER AT HIS TYEWRITER IN THE TRIBUNE OFFICE

MR SILER IN 1872

REFEREEING HIS LAST FIGHT (HART-SCHRECK-MAY 30, 1907)

NEW YORKERS ARE SHOCKED ON LEARNING OF SILER'S END.

Surprise and Sorrow Shown by Friends Who Knew Him Long Ago—Link Connecting Past and Present Broken.

New York, June 14.—[Special.]—News of the death of George Siler came as a great shock to all men along the Bright White Alley who are interested in any branch of sport. Oddly enough, perhaps, on account of the day, it was not generally known until THE TRIBUNE reporter spread it through the cafés and billiard parlors.

One man after another received the announcement with an incredulous "No, you don't mean it!" and then with a sorrowful shake of the head, murmured: "Well, another one of the fine old guard has gone forever!"

This was the sentiment expressed on every side. Another link was broken which had bound the present to the golden past of American sport, when racing was the sport of kings and boxing the sport of men and gentlemen.

"America's representative referee," one prominent sporting man denominated the deceased man. "The finest and fairest referee I ever saw anywhere," said another, "and one of the men in American sporting life who was from the beginning of his life to the end always on the level."

Only Praise from Wakely.

Jimmie Wakely, a well known sporting man, was found in the back room of his place, at Sixth avenue and Forty-third street. He shook his head. "George was a grown young man and I was a little kid when I first knew him," said Mr. Wakely, "that was thirty-five years ago, and I have known him and admired him ever since. George was a New York boy. He jumped into the boxing game early. He always was a boxer, mind you, and a fine one. He never wanted to be a fighter. But he was ambitious to be and was a fine lightweight boxer. I remember George at Harry Hill's place in Houston street. He was one of the best of a crowd of young fellows who put up their hands there.

"Around these years he took Billy Madden for his sparring partner, and the two went through the east, giving boxing exhibitions, and when it was possible taking on the local champion for a purse of $25 or $50, which was big money in those days. Later Billy became John L. Sullivan's manager and George became referee and newspaper writer. You can't quote me as saying anything too strong in praise of George Siler."

Brandt Recalls Old Days.

Eddie Brandt, the yachting reporter of the New York Herald, and an equally well known fight reporter in the days when there were fights in the east, had a better stock of anecdotes on the early days of Siler than any one else who could be found tonight. He said:

"I remember George as a young fellow. He was often seen not only at Harry Hill's Houston street place but at others of the good sized circle of boxing clubs which flourished in those days. Bill Clark was George's mentor. Bill had a prosperous boxing club in West Houston street, just off Broadway. He was generally considered the best boxer in the country, and George Siler was his best pupil.

"Another place where George was seen with the gloves on was at Prof. Charley Ottington's place. That was in Broadway, near Houston street, first, and later in University place, only a little distance away, and right in what you would call the sparring district.

"It seems a long time ago to think back. It's a funny thing. Here's George Siler, a comparatively young man dead, and old Bill Clark, his boyhood teacher, still alive and hearty at 86. Bill's running a natatorium in St. Louis and George is dead."

Gallagher Tells of Siler.

Tom Gallagher, the billiard crack, was watching his beloved game from an arm chair in Maurice Daly's parlors. "I expected to hear news of Siler's death any day," he said. "Since his collapse on the street there has been every reason, of course, to fear the worst. Well, God bless him! He was a fine man and a true sportsman. I shall always think of George Siler and Al Smith together. They were equally long experienced as referees. Their friendship was mine—for I knew both of them these forty years. They were both fine examples of the honorable man in American sport, Al Smith the stakeholder and George Siler the referee. By their deserved reputations for honorable, straight dealing, their absolute integrity, their geniality and fair dealing with every one whom they came in contact with, these two men made a legion of friends not only for themselves but for the sport of boxing. They imparted a tone to the game which was certainly good for its health and prosperity. Al Smith will join me in expressing sorrow for the passing of an old friend, a noble fellow, and one of the chiefest ornaments to the American world of sport."

Sharkey an Admirer.

Tom Sharkey said over the wire from his Sheepshead bay home: "Mr. Siler was only a name to be looked upon with awe during most of my younger days. He was a good bit older than me and was already quite far along in life when I left the navy and went into the fighting game. However, I am glad to have a chance to express my regard and admiration for him. He was always a fair and honorable man as I knew him. He was a great referee, the best I ever saw. He not only was always on the level, but also knew the game. He saw things that none of the spectators could ever see and wouldn't be dictated to by any one. I'm mighty sorry to hear he's dead, and here goes with my sincerest admiration for him."

"Honest" John Kelly, a gambler of national repute, was also a friend of Siler's. Kelly also had been a backer of many fights, and as such is qualified to speak of him with more than ordinary authority. He said:

"I always regarded Siler as the greatest referee in the fistic world. His combination of absolute integrity, absolute knowledge of the game, and absolute courage and determination was, in my opinion, unbeatable. When a man arranged a fight and one or two fighters objected to Siler for referee it was never anything against Siler. It was usually something against the reputation of that fighter. Siler was a man of sound judgment."

ANECDOTES OF THE LIFE OF GEORGE SILER.

Only those intimate with the referee and pugilistic writer were aware that Siler was not the proper way of spelling his name. His name was Seyler and one afternoon not long ago he told how he happened to switch to the shorter name.

"It was a long time ago," said he, "and I was only a kid. But I had taken a fancy to boxing. I used to get into the big shows in those days, although sometimes I had to do the 'under the tent' trick to do it. But I always got in. One night down on Coney Island a big mill was to be pulled off. I looked forward to it for several days. The fighters were pretty husky and everybody was looking for a great scrap. But when the time came for the battle one of the men failed to show up. The crowd was yelling fiercely and finally the promoter started looking for a substitute. There did not seem to be anybody looking for a fight, so I volunteered. He took a look at me and started laughing.

"Do you mean it, kid?" he said.

I told him I certainly did. He said I was too small and too thin to fight such a big fellow. But I told him I would take the chance. So into the ring I jumped and stripped for action. It was tough sledding for a few minutes, but I licked him, and licked him good. But then I had something else to think over. It was about home. I had told them my name was Siler, but did not spell it for them. So when it came out in the paper next morning that Siler had fought, I decided to let the name stick. I knew that if my parents had known I was the man in the ring that night there would have been something doing."

When Siler refereed his last big ring battle—that between Lightweight Champion Joe Gans and Batling Nelson at Goldfield—there were few of the great crowd at the ringside aware of the ordeal the veteran was passing through.

When the fight was in its middle stages Siler was attacked by the heart weakness which finally caused his death, but not once did he keep his eyes off the two men who were battling, and though he was forced to lean forward until at times his form resembled a half opened jackknife, in order to gain partial relief from the pain, not one word did he utter. He bore his suffering in silence, knowing how much depended on what he did in that championship fight, and though the battle between the dusky gladiator and the Dane was waged for forty-two long rounds, he never faltered in the duty he had contracted to perform.

He fought the pain that was gripping his heart and in the end when he knew it was his duty he disqualified Nelson for fouling. But those who knew Siler know that if that fight could have gone for 142 rounds Siler would have been there just the same and would have made his decision as he saw it through his keen eyes.

In speaking of it afterwards to a close friend the referee said: "Gans and Nelson were having a tough time that day, but I'm sure mine was the greater struggle. The pain was so great I could hardly stand it, but I lasted, that's all!"

The last fighter Siler instructed in the game of fisticuffs, one who has become a champion in his class, was Johnny Coulon. Siler saw the little Chicago boy performing in amateur bouts two years ago and was struck with the way he handled his fists.

They soon became acquainted and the acquaintance resulted in Siler teaching the youngster some of the fine points of the game. Coulon, who is a bantamweight, took to the instruction like a duck takes to water, and with his natural ability soon rose to the top, quit the amateur ranks, and entered the "big" ring. His progress there was even more rapid than with the amateurs. In less than a year and a half Coulon became the champion, but all the while he was climbing the ladder Siler was teaching him and coaching him. And all the time the veteran was a sick man and fighting his own losing battle.

There is no one in Chicago, or in the country for that matter, who gives any one more credit for getting him to the top than Johnny Coulon gives George Siler. Only a few days ago he said Siler was responsible for all he knows about fighting. And, youngster though he is—he is still in his teens—Johnny probably never will forget.

Though rather under the average size, Siler invariably commanded respect from pugnaciously inclined men almost as large again as he. He was gentle, but at the same time firm. This trait was exemplified many years ago at a boxing bout just over the state line.

Siler was the referee and among those who attended the go was a tough young fellow from the steel mills who was ring leader of a gang fully as bad as he was. They plainly were looking for trouble and when Siler requested them to stop smoking during the bout they gave him the laugh. George never changed countenance, but walking quietly over to their side of the ring he suddenly snatched the cigar from the mouth of the ring leader and threw it on the floor, saying in a low tone:

"The next time I ask you to do anything you will do it or go down for the count."

The gang took a look at their cowed leader, dropped their cigars, and the program went on without further interruption.

RACING MEN SEE RAY OF HOPE

Decision of Courts Expected to Settle Betting Tangles.

HARD PROBLEM ON WAGERS.

Eminent Legal Authorities Declare "Memory Bets" Are All Right.

New York, June 14.—[Special.]—Racing men who are in a position to know said tonight they expected developments within the next ten days that would remove from the present situation many tangles. They said when the courts have passed on various points in dispute as set forth by the new betting law it would be clearly shown that betting between individuals can be carried on, provided no record is made of the wagers.

The recording of wagers is the only problem that appears difficult of solution. If a layer or bettor can carry a memorandum of wager in his head, racing men who have consulted eminent legal authorities say the new law will not apply to such cases.

May Be Forced to Cut Purses.

But as "memory bets" are not feasible if any great amount of business is to be transacted, it seems as if wagering under such conditions would be reduced to a minimum. This means, of course, the attendance at the tracks will fall off to such an extent that the racing associations, if they decide to continue through the present season, will be forced to reduce the purses for overnight races and also to cut the added money in the various stakes. Even under this arrangement the racing association probably would lose big money, but in the meantime it is said the new law could be carried to the Court of Appeals to be tested as to its constitutionality.

The situation, therefore, may be said to hinge on the court's interpretation of the law and of just what constitutes a misdemeanor. Lawyers say it is all a question of legal evidence. They insist if no money passes when a "mouth wager" is made and no pool ticket is handed to the bettor legal proof that a bet has been made is lacking and the persons arrested for such transactions cannot be convicted.

Must Devise New Methods.

These lawyers also declare that as soon as a number of such cases have been thrown out of court because of lack of legal evidence, betting under the new form will go on. They say the layers will have to devise new methods of keeping track of wagers in order to comply with the law. In other words, cash betting and sheet writing cannot prevail again, which, of course, will make speculation particularly hard for the public in general.

The Gravesend meeting will end next Thursday and no change will be made in the program as to purses. The Coney Island Jockey club's spring meeting will open on Friday, and is scheduled to continue until July 4. It has been stated by one of the governors of the club that all stakes will be run off and possibly the overnight purses will be reduced about one-half.

Loss to Sheepshead Track.

It is estimated for the meeting at the bay the stakes alone will amount to nearly $175,000. If the public does not patronize the track under the present adverse conditions it is plain the meeting will be conducted at a heavy loss. For that matter, the Coney Island Jockey club has just expended $200,000 in improvements and on Friday will present practically a new track for the sport. But unless betting between individuals can be made possible under the new law nobody believes the people will pay admission at the rate of $3 apiece to see the horses run.

GRAND PRIX TO VANDERBILT WITH THE COLT NORTHEAST.

Blue Ribbon Event of the French Turf Is a Stirring Race and Americans Make Killing.

PARIS, June 14.—Thousands of Americans today saw W. K. Vanderbilt's bay colt Northeast, with J. Childs up, capture the Grand Prix de Paris, the blue ribbon event of the French turf, which this year was worth about $72,000.

Beautiful weather favored the running of this classic, and fully 150,000 persons gathered at Longchamps to witness the race, which marked the close of the Paris season.

President Fallieres was there, together with the members of his cabinet, and there was an unusually large attendance of foreigners from all parts of Europe.

After the victory of his horse Mr. Vanderbilt was given an ovation and was escorted to the presidential loge, where he was warmly congratulated by M. Fallieres.

The race was a stirring one from start to finish, Northeast winning by a scant head from his half sister, Sauge Pourpree, owned by Count Le Marois.

The Americans made a killing on Vanderbilt's victory, as the odds were 10 to 1, the public losing faith in Mr. Vanderbilt's chances when Seasick II. was withdrawn after his bad showing in the English Derby.

The favorites for the Grand Prix, Medeah, Grill Room, and Quintette, finished in the ruck.

TRAINING FOR FIGHT STARTED.

Joe Gans Begins His Work for the Mill with Batling Nelson on July 4.

San Francisco, Cal., June 14.—[Special.]—Joe Gans started in today to train for his fight with Batling Nelson on July 4, and a big crowd of the champion's admirers took Sunday off and went over to the resort at San Rafael.

Joe went through various gymnastic stunts and did some road work, but, as he explained, this training was merely to help his wind and keep him in condition. He will do no sparring until about two weeks before the fight, as he smilingly admitted there was not any one who could give him pointers on boxing. Joe said he was down to 139 pounds and would have no trouble in making the required weight.

Batling Nelson is over in the Livermore hills hunting and taking hot baths. He will be back in a week and then go to training.

DELCASSIANS FIRST AGAIN

Win Third Straight Hurling Game by Beating O'Mahoneys.

COLUMBIAS SCORE VICTORY.

Defeat O'Connells in the Football Game at Gaelic Park.

Before a large crowd at Gaelic park yesterday the Delcassians won their third straight hurling match of the season by defeating the O'Mahoneys 2 goals and 7 points to 7 points. The Columbias won from the O'Connells in the football contest by a score of 4 points to 1.

The field was in excellent condition for the hurling and the players showed to better advantage than at any other time this year. In the first half the champions got going early and scored repeatedly before the O'Mahoneys could work out a defense. In the last half, however, the old time champions played their best game. During this portion of the contest they had much the better of it. The game was clean and fast all the way. Lineup:

Delcassians [2 g. 7 p.].		O'Mahoneys [7 p.].
O'Brien	Goal	J. O'Connor
P. Halleran	Back	D. O'Connor
Howe	Right back	Long
Clear	Left back	Shaughnessy
M. Maloney	Right half back	P. Quinn
King	Center half back	Fitzgerald
Hayes	Left half back	Dineen
J. Halleran	Center	P. Ward
Sexton	Right center	M. Ward
Dennison	Left center	T. McGraw
Long	Forward	J. McGraw
Murphy	Forward	Conroy
Berkery	Forward	Connelly
J. Maloney	Forward	B. Quinn
Drinan	Forward	Hogan
Scully	Forward	Hoare
Kenny	Forward	Gavin

Referee—Coleman.

The football contest was all to the firemen in the first half, when they were kicking with the wind, and they improved their opportunity by securing enough points to win the game. The O'Connells, in spite of their weakened lineup, played a strong defensive game. Lineup:

Columbias [4].		O'Connells [1].
Curran	Goal	McCarthy
Regan	Back	T. Griffin
Long	Right back	J. Griffin
Deady	Left back	M. Griffin
Griffin	Right half back	Moriarity
Hastey	Center half back	Fitzgerald
Manning	Left half back	Collins
J. O'Brien	Center	Granfield
P. O'Brien	Right center	McDonald
Dillon	Left center	Kennedy
O'Connor	Forward	J. Sullivan
Hansom	Forward	M. Sullivan
Cleary	Forward	Hynes
Moody	Forward	Donohue
Brady	Forward	Rowan
McNamara	Forward	Kavanaugh
Keogh	Forward	McHugh

Referee—O'Brien.

At the finish of the hurling match two tug of war teams from the Celtic and Gaelic Athletic associations practiced for the big pull which will take place next Sunday between the regular Gaelic contests.

GOLFERS OFF FOR BIG MATCH.

Advance Guard Leaves for the Western Amateur Championship Tourney to Be Held at St. Louis.

The advance guard of local professionals who will compete in the western amateur golf championship at the Normandie club of St. Louis left last night. Jim Foulis of Calumet, Dave Foulis of Chicago, J. Simpson of Riverside, F. McLeod of Midlothian, and Harris Collis of Homewood were in the party, which also included Robert Simpson of Milwaukee, the present holder of the title.

Play in the championship will start on Thursday, but the preceding days will not lack interest, as a number of matches will be played, the most attractive being a special contest between "Nipper" Campbell of the Brookline Country club of Boston, winner of the eastern professionals' tournament, and Fred McLeod of Midlothian, winner of the western professionals' tournament. The men are two of the smallest and best experts in the country, and doubtless will attract a big gallery.

While the imported and home bred pros and a few amateurs are battling at St. Louis, the cream of the British professionals will be competing at Prestwick, Scotland, for the greatest golfing honor of the world, the British open championship, which is billed to start tomorrow. The professional international team match will be played today.

THREE NEW MEN FOR MAROONS.

Athletes Davenport, Prather, and Shaw Will Join the Midway Track Team This Fall.

Three of the best prep athletes of the Mississippi schools, two of whom competed in the interscholastic meet on Marshall field last Saturday, have told Stagg they will join his squad of Maroon athletes in the fall. Davenport of the university preparatory school of Oklahoma, Prather of Morgan Park academy, and Shaw of Muskegon High school are the stars who will add strength to the Maroon team at the beginning of the fall term.

Davenport placed his school in second position on Saturday by winning first places in three events, the 100 and 220 yard dashes, and the quarter mile run. The Oklahoma prep star reeled off the short dash in :10 2-5 on a slow track, and the longer event in :22 2-5. His best performance, however, was his work in the 440 yard run, for which he set a new Chicago prep mark of :51 1-5.

Prather was not eligible for Saturday's contest, being above the age limit of 21 years. The Morgan Park crack has hurled the twelve pound hammer 175 feet and the shot 50 feet 8 inches. He also is a star football man at tackle.

Shaw has a mark of 11 feet 6 inches in the pole vault. He did not show in the meet Saturday on account of his inability to jump from the grass takeoff.

BLOW FOR BELGIAN RACING.

Courts Decide That Paris Mutual Betting System Is Gambling and Race Men Are Fined.

VERVIERS, Belgium, June 14.—The courts here have put a ban on gambling at the race track. The Paris mutual betting system has been condemned as gambling in a recent case that came up before one of the courts for trial and the directors of a local race course were heavily fined. The decision has caused a sensation as it threatens the existence of racing in Belgium. An appeal will be taken at once.

Scores of the Marksmen.

Two high scores in the regular Sunday shoot at the Chicago Gun club went to W. W. Flewelling of Harvey, Ill., yesterday afternoon, when he stood high man in the fifty target handicap with forty-seven hits, and later, in the board of trade trophy event, shattered twenty-three out of twenty-five from the eighteen yard mark. Stannard was highest in the club handicap with twenty-four clays out of twenty-five. Johnson was high marksman in the Chicago Gun club cup round with twenty-two from eighteen yards.

Ready to Continue Auto Trip.

Ray McNamara, accompanied by George A. Weidley, designer of the Premier automobile, which is running on a schedule of 100 miles a day for 100 days, arrived in the city yesterday. The motorists will make Chicago their base of operations, taking century trips into the country and carrying a full quota of passengers each time.

TWO MORE CREWS AT POUGHKEEPSIE

Cornell and Wisconsin Squads Arrive at Training Quarters.

PENN MEN DUE TODAY.

Badgers Have Varsity and Freshmen Eights and Four Substitutes.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 14.—[Special.]—New interest was given to the boat racing situation with the arrival today of Cornell and Wisconsin.

The Ithacans came in almost with the first rays of dawn, while the westerners did not reach here until the afternoon. Both colonies did no more than unload and house their shells. Cornell brought with them a 22 foot coaching launch fitted with a 25 h. p. engine. For years past it has been Courtney's desire to have just such a boats, as it will relieve him from a great deal of family excursion that has fallen to his lot because of the old Cornell launch.

For the first time Wisconsin brought a coaching launch with them. Heretofore they have had considerable trouble in securing facilities for coaching. Shells of the Pennsylvania crew arrived today by train, while Ben Franklin came by water. The Pennsylvania crews are expected to arrive tomorrow afternoon, while the Syracuse contingent is expected on Tuesday. The Cornell party consists of varsity and freshmen eights and two fours, and is occupying its old quarters at Oakes.

Wisconsin brought the varsity eight, freshmen eight, and four substitutes. The oarsmen are in charge of E. P. Ten Eyck, coach; Dr. C. H. Hutchins, physical director, and Prof. Angel. They will not enter the four oared race. When the Badgers passed through Syracuse this morning a party of Syracuse crew men were at the depot and cheered the westerners. Columbia's houseboat arrived this morning and was anchored two miles north of the big bridge. The oarsmen spent a busy day putting it in shape and ate their first meal there tonight. They also slept in the houseboat quarters tonight, leaving the Nelson house, where they have been living. The crews are boated as follows:

Cornell—Varsity, bow, Smith; 2, Stone; 3, Clark; 4, Backus; 5, Stevens; 6, Horton, McWilliams; stroke, Cox; coxswain, Clark.

Freshmen—Bow, Seagraves; 2, Simson; 3, Hadley; 4, Aitchinson; 5, Button; 6, Dey; 7, Names; stroke, Wischers; coxswain, Kimball.

Wisconsin—Varsity, bow, Gummicht; 2, Wilse; 3, Train; 4, Witte; 5, Drentzer; 6, Iakisch; 7, Wilder; captain and stroke, Dinet; coxswain, Ryan.

Freshmen—Bow, Boyd; 2, Arpin; 3, Schwenker; 4, Clark; 5, Roberts; 6, Wied; 7, Kraatz; stroke, Hare; coxswain, Kulbs.

By defeating the Woodlawns 4 goals to 0 at the West Side Driving park yesterday afternoon the Campbell Rovers cinched second place in the spring games of the Spalding cup series in the Association Football League of Chicago. The win gave them 13 points, and Pullman, which has yet to meet the Woodlawns, cannot get better than 12. Coal City, which leads with 17 points, may be disqualified for playing three men under suspension, in which case the miners, who won the fall series, will be called upon to meet the Campbell Rovers in the final for the championship of the season.

Yesterday's game was easy for the Scotchmen, as the Woodlawns presented their usual changed lineup. Playing with the wind in the first half, the Rovers counted twice, the spasmodic attacks of the visitors proving unsuccessful. In the second period the Rovers counted twice more. Lineup:

Campbell Rovers [4].		Woodlawns [0].
Soulter	Goal	Bowman
Scott	Right back	Dickson
Ferguson	Left back	Spencer
Napier	Right half back	Banks
Stevenson	Center half back	Patrick
Newton	Outside right	Linley
Brown	Inside right	Pearce
Wyllie	Center	Stevenson
Morton	Inside left	Buchanan

Goals—Brown [2], Cowan, Morton. Referee—Doig.

The Hibernians yesterday won the Irish championship of the Chicago League of Association Football, defeating the Davitts in a strenuous contest at the foot of Indiana street 2 goals to 1. Lineup:

Hibernians [2].		Davitts [1].
O'Brien	Goal	Sullivan
Corhlan	Right back	James
McDonald	Left back	Garvan
McDonald	Right half back	Corrigan
McGinnis	Center half back	Gill
McDermid	Left half back	Garrity

RAINS HELP WHEAT MARKET

Outlook in Harvesting Sections of Southwest Causes Alarm.

OATS VALUES LOSE GROUND.

Coarse Grain Hard Pressed on Glowing Crop Outlook; Provisions Up.

Heavy rains in harvesting sections of the southwest and accumulating reports of damage in Missouri and Kansas as a result of excessive moisture were the principal basis of strength in the wheat market last week. Pit business showed considerable improvement, commission houses reporting an expansion of outside trade. The July showed relatively the most strength, some of the biggest interests in the market giving it excellent support, their buying prompting shorts to active covering. Week end quotations represented net gains of 2⅝c for July, ⅛c for September, ½c for new December, and ⅞c for old December, compared to those of the preceding week.

Early in the week there were suggestions of improvement in the export demand, but the foreigners' interest failed to keep up. Although not being broad, the cash situation displayed soundness, diminishing stocks in the northwest and the probability of delay in the movement of new winter wheat creating no small degree of apprehension at Minneapolis, where the better grades showed stiff premiums over the July. Stocks of wheat at Minneapolis are at low ebb, showing a decrease of 450,000 bu last week, those at Duluth losing 500,000 bu. The world's visible shows well under 100,000,000 bu and it is being eaten into rapidly.

Harvesting Returns Disappointing.

Harvesting returns in Oklahoma and Texas are said to be disappointing, having been materially injured by the heavy rains. Missouri kept the wires hot with complaints of rust in all directions, and the heavy precipitation in Kansas caused conservative investigators to trim down their previous crop estimates greatly. Some of the more enthusiastic bulls do not believe that the Sunflower state will have a yield of more than 70,000,000 bu, but others figure that the total will be nearer 80,000,000 bu. Southern Illinois and the lowlands of the Ohio valley have suffered greatly from excessive moisture, extensive damage being reported from the more important sections. In some parts total loss has been sustained.

Domestic Receipts Are Light.

The domestic movement of wheat continues well under that of last year, farmers generally apparently feeling that conditions warrant the maintenance of lofty values. The world's movement still runs well under that of last year and it is not considered likely that it will show much improvement in the near future. Southeastern Europe is uttering loud complaints of poor crop prospects, the situation in Hungary being most alarming. Last week Budapest advanced 7c, principally on continued drought and heavy damage reports. Other European markets were relatively weak, Liverpool feeling the pressure of cargoes on passage and off coast, and Berlin going down on improved prospects in Germany.

Weaker Tone to Maize.

The corn market was relatively weaker than wheat, bulls being less active in their support, although every soft spot found traders willing to buy. The general situation presented little in the way of change, and pit business as a whole did not show marked activity. The prevailing high prices have curtailed the shipping demand, although men supposed to be close to the situation say that the east and the south soon will be forced to come to western marts for large quantities of the grain. The receipts here have been liberal and it is expected that they will continue so for some time to come. Advices on crop progress have been good as a whole, although the lowlands have been sending in many complaints, some to the effect that the outlook is so poor that much acreage will be abandoned. Week end quotations represented net losses of ⅛@¼c for July, ⅜@½c for September, and ¼c for December.

Pit sentiment is mixed, with bulls confident that high prices are warranted by conditions, although admitting that the expensiveness of the cereal has prompted rigid economy in all directions. Farmers are not offering much at less than the prices prevailing, and they evidently figure that the stiff values will be maintained throughout the year. The Argentine is shipping freely to Europe, and late in the week Buenos Ayres reported sales to New York.

Oats Suffer Sharp Setback.

Weakness was characteristic of the oats market the greater part of the week, heavy pressure being prompted by uniformly favorable crop advices, prospects of a record breaking yield, and lightness of the general shipping demand. Country traders have offered September freely, and professionals that heretofore have been arrayed among the bulls have shifted in sentiment. The east evidently figures that the big holders will be compelled to make further concessions. The movement from the country continues liberal and it is likely that it will continue of good proportions for a long time to come. Week end prices represented net losses of 2¼c for July, 2c for new July, and 1¼c for September.

Broad Trade in Provisions.

Provisions picked up considerable strength last week and business showed much expansion. The scarcity of cattle and the high prices prevailing for beef had a good effect on the market, which also derived firmness from comparatively light receipts of hogs at western packing centers and an improving cash demand. Some of the biggest interests in the trade are giving support to the list on all suggestions of weakness and the investment demand has broadened out materially. Stocks of the manufactured product are heavy in all directions, but conservative men believe that conditions generally warrant the maintenance of values around the present level. It is believed that the summer and fall run of hogs from the country will not be pressing, some expecting a surprisingly small movement.

Week in Live Stock Trade.

Predicted increases in receipts of cattle materialized last week, but the hard jolt prophesied for prices was not in evidence. Instead of receding, values advanced in jumps, and the average price for the week was the highest reached in the corresponding week in more than forty years, and this in spite of the fact that the offerings were far from perfect. Where prices would have landed had there been really choice stock offered for sale, was hard to say, but it was generally believed that the $8.00 mark would have been passed. The record price for June since 1882 was made in 1902, when choice steers brought $8.50. Last week best steers made $7.85, but with Kansas City incapacitated during the first days this week, and floods threatening the St. Louis market, killers will have to come to Chicago for good to choice steers, and local traders believe that if any of the prime kinds are received here the $8.00 mark will be reached with ease, while some of the most enthusiastic predicted that with continued active competition from the eastern shippers, new records would be established before the end of the month. A canvass of the trade last Saturday disclosed the fact that expectations were not for heavy receipts of market toppers for the first of this week, although many of the commission houses had advices from the country to the effect that several loads of good steers were headed this way. The future looks promising for high prices on the choice natives, but caution is advised in the marketing of grassers, as traders believe buyers will make strong efforts to get these cheaper. In the hog trade the gains made last week are expected to be sustained, but traders do not look for sharp fluctuations from the present level for the next week or two. Sheep and lamb values made substantial gains last week; and traders predicted further appreciations for the near future if feeders will exercise caution and not flood the market on the first few days.

Trade in Wholesale Lines.

Previously noted improvements in wholesale dry goods were maintained last week and the market was established on a steadier basis. Large orders for future delivery were booked by both jobbers and manufacturers of carpets, rugs, ladies' wraps, and dress goods and footwear, while retailers were replenishing stocks of seasonable goods with a lavish hand, in anticipation of an enormous business during convention week. Advances were noted in prices of certain lines of bleached cotton goods, and an upward tendency pervaded the market for all warm weather fabrics, due to rapidly diminishing stocks.

A revision of steel prices failed to stimulate the demand, as expected, and there was no perceptible increase in orders. A feeling of uncertainty pervaded the trade and consumers were of the opinion that further reductions would come if waited for. Steel bar continued in fairly active request and good sized contracts were reported booked. Steel rails were firm, one road having given out an order for 8,000 tons, the largest order for standard rails booked in a long time. Pig iron market developed into the most active division of the steel and iron trade, and a good tonnage was sold during the week, at generally strong prices.

Continued weakness and dullness characterized the coal market, with offerings in excess of requirements, in spite of greatly curtailed production. More promising prospects noted in the lumber trade the first of the month evaporated into thin air, and the experience of the last week gave dealers little encouragement. Weakness pervaded all branches of hard and soft woods, with the exception of plain oak, which was quoted at a slight advance.

WATER RUNS 12 FEET DEEP IN STREETS OF ARMOURDALE.

Kansas City Interests Rebel at Annual Floods and Seek Way to Control Irrepressible Kaw.

Kansas City, Mo., June 14.—The great Kaw-Missouri flood, which has almost reached its crest, drew hundreds of thousands of sightseers today to the bluffs overlooking the flooded bottoms. The water has done all the damage that is in its power. The railroad yards have been evacuated, the packing houses and business establishments have vacated their lower floors; Armourdale has been entirely abandoned by its 12,000 inhabitants, and water is running twelve feet deep in the streets. There is no excitement anywhere, the evicted people having found shelter for themselves and their movable property. There is nothing to do but to wait for the tide to turn, as the weather bureau says it will tomorrow.

Officials and business men of both Kansas Citys express a determination to put an end to the annual floods. The great difficulty has been that two state, two city governments, the United States government, three counties, and numerous interstate railroads are involved. During the last year the United States has declared the Kaw a navigable stream. This gives the war department authority to order the removal of the Union Pacific and Missouri Pacific low bridges, which obstruct the river and cause the overflow of Armourdale and the stockyards at every high water.

One measure proposed is to cut a canal across the point of land where the Missouri makes its big bend to the east. This canal would carry the Missouri overflow from a point above Kansas City to a point several miles below.

CRUISER SAFE; WIRELESS DID IT

Amateur Operator Started False Report That Colorado Was Ashore.

San Francisco, Cal., June 14.—[Special.]—Some ingenious youngsters experimenting with a wireless outfit at Seattle started the report late last night that the cruiser Colorado went aground at high tide on Dungeness spit at the entrance of the Straits of Fuca and was in a dangerous position. All the wires were kept hot along the coast for hours in the early morning trying to get details of the disaster. Finally Seattle wireless station received a dispatch that the Colorado was anchored safely off Dungeness spit and that the amateur operator must have misread the message which he intercepted. Capt. Underwood of the Colorado reported having a hard passage up the coast from Santa Barbara.

MARKET TONE IS IMPROVING

Fundamental Conditions Better than for Some Time.

HARVEST ONE OF PROMISE.

Weakness in Some of Railway Issues Is Not a Menace.

[FROM THE NEW YORK TIMES FINANCIAL LEADER.]

NEW YORK, June 14.—[Special.]—Although transactions on the stock exchange last week dwindled in such fashion that several days brought new low records for the year in the volume of business on the floor, news developments affecting financial markets generally and changes in fundamental conditions were unusually numerous and important.

The long deferred cuts in prices of steel products were finally announced. The department of agriculture published a statement of crop conditions as of June 1 full of promise for splendid harvests later in the year and the political atmosphere was to a large extent cleared so far as the financial community is immediately concerned by the multiplying signs pointing to the nomination of Mr. Taft at Chicago this week.

Confidence Not Impaired.

From each of these happenings it was possible for those who are looking ahead confidently to the restoration of normal business conditions to draw inspiration and good cheer, and this was in nowise impaired by the minor developments of the week of a superficially unfavorable character, such as the institution of a receivership for the Wheeling and Lake Erie company, or the acknowledgment of stress involved in the Erie's funding of approaching interest payments on various issues of its bonds.

The acknowledgment of weakness in certain parts of the railroad fabric is simply confirmatory of suspicions already generally entertained and forms actually the preliminary step in remedying such defects. Near the close of the week the stock market chose to interpret the announcement regarding the Erie's funding plan and the qualified success of the Union Pacific bond offering as depressing factors and prices weakened only to recover on Saturday.

It will be a short time only now before the country's railroads are engaged in the handling of the first of the yields of the fields, and with the coming of this business many of the problems which failing earnings have presented to executives here and there will find solution and that disconcerting record of idle cars will take its place among other unhappy memories. Between May 13 and May 27 over 22,500 cars on the idle list went back into service, and by July 1 reductions in dead equipment will be chronicled weekly. But the influence of farm activity will not cease here.

Steel Cut Helps Railroads.

The railroads are the best customers of the steelmakers and the tonnage of steel products on all the roads forms a large percentage of the total volume of traffic. After a futile and unfortunate attempt to maintain prices in the face of reduced purchasing power, the steel manufacturers have made reductions, and, while these perhaps may have to be shaded still further before the low is touched, it will be a question of a short time only when, tempted by so excellent a crop outlook and a clearing political situation, not only the railroads but also consumers generally will place orders in volume.

Exports of gold dropped last week to small figures as compared with earlier movements, and even the banking houses previously engaged in shipping the metal expressed the opinion that the movement was near its end. Our own banks continue to draw in funds from the interior and from the government, and it becomes daily more apparent that further withdrawals of treasury funds from the banks must soon be made.

London Blames Erie Status.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, June 14.—Yankeephobes have been making the most of what they call the American peril and ascribing wholly to the revival of Erie difficulties the setback which took place in the London markets last week, but the facts are the depression which followed the Erie announcement was only the culminating influence in the week, which opened with heavy selling orders from the continent and was marked by a falling off in business generally and a superabundance of new issues, until Friday the Yankees showed marked strength by comparison with other departments.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, Office of the Secretary.—WASHINGTON, June 6, 1908.—Proposals will be received, to be opened at 2 o'clock p. m., July 14, 1908, for the sale or donation to the United States of suitable land in the immediate vicinity of the so-called Union Station, for the site for the new Post Office to be erected in Chicago, Illinois. A block, or two blocks, surrounded on all sides by streets, containing approximately 300,000 square feet, is required. Each proposal must give the price, the character of foundations obtainable, the proximity to street cars, sewer, gas, and water mains, etc., and must be accompanied by a diagram indicating the principal street, the north point, the dimensions and grades of the land, the widths and paving of adjacent streets and alleys, whether the alleys are public or private, and whether or not the city owns land occupied by sidewalks. The vendor must pay all expenses connected with furnishing evidences of title and deeds of conveyance. Improvements on the property must be reserved by the vendor; but pending the commencement of the Post Office building they may remain on the land upon the payment of a reasonable ground rent. The grantor must, however, remove all improvements on thirty days' notice so to do. The right to reject any proposal is reserved. Each proposal must be sealed, marked "Proposal for New Post Office Site at Chicago, Illinois," and mailed to the SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY (Supervising Architect), WASHINGTON, D. C. MOTORCYCLES AND BICYCLES.

WHAT'S A VACATION WITHOUT AN INDIAN MOTOCYCLE?

Let us explain how much pleasure one can have in Chicago. Most any kind of a machine will run, but with a motorcycle one gets out in the country where you find hills. To climb these it takes an INDIAN.
There is a reason why during the month of May the Indian won the 5 mile National championship at Baltimore; won every event entered in at Philadelphia, May 23, breaking every track record; won both events May 17 at Belleville, Ill.; made fastest time at Danville hill climb, May 1. Also fastest time at Algonquin, Ill., hill climb, May 18. Call at our store for demonstration and see America's standard motocycle. HENDEE MFG. CO., 1251 Michigan-av.

THOR MOTORCYCLE GUARANTEES QUALITY to the purchaser. Ask the motorcyclist and he will tell you THOR workmanship cannot be beat. There were three THOR entries in the endurance run June 6th and 7th, and all came in with perfect scores. Do not overlook calling on us for your motorcycle. AURORA AUTOMATIC MACHINERY CO., 1470 Michigan-av. Tel. Calumet 3789.

HARLEY DAVIDSON MOTOR CYCLE again wins absolutely perfect score in Los Angeles and in Chicago endurance contest; it is built for hard service and always climbs the hills; ask any owner, or C. LANG, 35 E. Adams-st.

VOLUME LXVII.—N

ALL OVER EXCEP
VICE PRESIDENC

Indications Seem to Point
Fairbanks as the Running Mate of Taft.

DOLLIVER IS STILL IN RA

Representative Sherman of New Drops Back to the Bare Possibility Class.

TALK OF CAMPAIGN CHAIRM

BY RAYMOND.

When Chairman New bangs his gavel somewhere about noon today and o order the fourteenth national convent the republican party, the great centra sode, which is naturally the nominat a candidate for the presidency, will b ranged in advance.

William Howard Taft will be choe the first ballot, with a margin of at lea votes over the 491 necessary for a choic total membership of 980. His selection certain now as anything possibly can politics.

There is some vague talk of a landsli
Roosevelt, but it is significant that it inates in almost every case with anti-R velt men.

Those who are really loyal to the pres know that he looks with horror upon vote that may be cast for him in the Ch convention, because he considers it light of an insult. He has openly dec and privately written that "no friend his will use his name in the balloting this fact is so generally understood the delegates it ought to put an en and for all to any idle talk of a third landslide.

Will Spring Roosevelt Later.

Senator Lodge or some other warm sonal friend will surely have in his po sion, ready to be brought out at the pa logical moment, a ringing letter from dore Roosevelt denouncing the third movement as the work of his enemies wish to injure his reputation in the f and cast discredit upon his public dec tions.

With the presidential nomination thu of the way, there are just three things w are now particularly engaging the atte of the managers on all sides. First o there is the vice presidency. That seems to rest between Dolliver and banks, with Representative Sherman of York as a bare possibility. The stan element in Iowa is vehement in its dec tion that the selection of Senator Dol as the vice presidential candidate will cipitate a bitter partisan fight in the s and may cost the legislature.

Dolliver a Dilemma.

On the other hand, the advance gua the Cummins contingent has reached C go, and they are equally vociferous i sisting that Dolliver must and sha drafted for the national ticket. They clare it is cowardly to deprive him o honor merely because a minority in the demands it. They insist the protest o standpatters shows that Cummins has a jority of his party in Iowa, and wou elected senator to succeed Dolliver.
the Taft managers are in a peculiar pos because, whichever way they decide i gard to Dolliver, they will displease a fluential section of Iowa republicans.

Representatives of the Cummins el have been in communication with Wa ton all day long, while the standpat c have fairly bombarded the White hous
the war department with protests ag the nomination, and with demands tha Dolliver ghost shall be laid forthwith, some other man chosen as running for the secretary of war.

Iowa's Fear Overdrawn.

As a matter of fact, the fear of par warfare in Iowa is largely overdrawn.
is no reason in the world why Senator liver should resign his seat before the tion. If chosen vice president he woul take the oath of office until noon on the fo day of next March. It would be in ac ance with precedents for him to stay i senate until the conclusion of this cong and then resign and assume the duties o vice presidency. If this course were foll the result would be that both sides w fight like tigers to control the legisla and the republican majority there wou almost certain.

Fairbanks Seems "It."

This creates a situation which make extremely likely that Vice President banks may be selected to succeed him
If he should be chosen neither side in could claim a victory. Besides that, i now become evident to almost every one the anti-Taft forces have about conch to combine their strength on Fairbank the plea that they ought to have some out of the convention.

I know I speak with authority when I that Vice President Fairbanks does not a renomination. This does not mean by manner of means that he would not take it were offered to him with substantial nimity. As to that I do not speak by aut ity, but I am giving only the current opi among the delegates outside of the Ind crowd.

Custom to Placate Opposition.

It has been the custom in convention long to placate the opposition that if
